GOVERNOR'S NAME HISSED

Hundreds of Men at Atlantic City Mass Meeting Resent His Accusation.

DEMAND FOR RING ROUT.

Present City Government Assailed and Ex-Secretary of the Senate Edge Named Informally for Mayor.

Hundreds of men crowded into Odd Fellows' Hall at Atlantic City last night and hissed and hooted every mention of the name of Gov. Fort because he had declared that Atlantic City presents the spectacle of a "saturnalia of vice" and had forced the closing of the saloons Sunday under threats of placing the resort under martial law.

In the presence of several hundred supporters of Mayor Stoy and Boss Kuehnle, Joseph W. Salus, foreman of the Grand Jury which failed to find indictments last Wednesday at May's Landing, declared that Gov. Fort's accusation that Atlantic City was lawless was an unqualified lie. He then added, amid such enthusiasm as has never been heard at a meeting at the resort:

"The good name of Atlantic City can only be saved by a change in administration that will put men in office who will have the respect even of the Governor."

Mr. Salus was frequently interrupted by cries for Stoy and Kuehnle, but even in the midst of these he, in genuine political convention style, placed in nomination for Mayor the name of Col. Walter E. Edge, former Secretary of the State Senate.

Mr. Salus declared that Mr. Edge was the choice of the business and hotel men of the resort. This declaration almost precipitated a fight in the meeting, and it was only a few of the cooler and more deliberate men grouped on the platform who prevented the meeting being brought to a disorderly conclusion.

This unofficial nomination of Edge was considered by many as the beginning of a widespread movement to smash the political machine which for so many years has controlled matters in Atlantic City.

It was a large group of leading business men who called the meeting, which was in many respects unique. Its primary object was to discuss some plan for balking in a legitimate fashion the efforts of State officials to close up the resort on Sundays and to prevent these same officials from hurling various epithets against the place. The machine leaders, it is said, were busy throughout the day rallying their forces in order to prevent this mass meeting from becoming a move to put forward a reform candidate. It was evident from the number of Stoy enthusiasts present that a part of the program was to make so much noise for the long-time Mayor of the place as to make it impossible for any other names to be mentioned with any degree of dignity.

That this plan failed, however, was due to the forceful speech made by Mr. Salus, who became so enthusiastic in his indorsement of Edge that he ripped off his coat in the midst of his oratory.

President Charles Evans of the First National Bank had been chosen as chairman of the meeting, but he did not arrive, and in his place Joseph A. McNamee, cashier of the Marine Trust Company, of which Kuehnle is President, was placed in the chair, being fairly cheered into it by political adherents.

A well-known independent in politics, Eli H. Chandler, began the speech-making. His attack on the Governor was cheered again and again, and following it a motion was passed calling for a committee to draw resolutions condemning Gov. Fort. This committee was made up of City Solicitor Harry Wootton, Mr. Chandler, John F. Hall, a prominent Democrat; C. J. Adams, a real estate operator, and Magistrate Joshua Jagmetty. They are expected to present their resolutions at a meeting to be called next week.

It was at this juncture that Kuehnle, who was himself present to see that all went well according to his own forecasts, made a motion to adjourn, expecting that this would end the entire proceedings. But a large company of excited men called loudly for Salus before Kuehnle's motion could be passed. Fairly fighting his way through the densely packed masses of men, Salus was lifted to the platform.

When he reached that point of his speech in which he declared that "the statement made by the Governor that Atlantic City is a saturnalia of vice is the most damnable lie ever uttered by an official" the cheers from the hall could be heard blocks away. Salus further declared his close personal friendship for Kuehnle, although he said he differed

HEAVY SENTENCES FOLLOW DISORDERLY HOUSE RAID

A police raid of "The Gut," a disorderly house along the French raceway, last night resulted in the capture of half a dozen colored people three men and three women. Sergeant Overbaugh, with Patrolmen Nolan and O'Keefe, surprised the merrymakers at about midnight taking as prisoners Troy Gibson, Harold Dickson, John Taylor, Ethel Timms, Margaret Bowman and Ethel Henry. All were pretty well intoxicated, having made the rounds of several hotels, and Judge Runyon gave each a choice of $10 or twenty days in the county jail.

"The Gut" is rented by Mrs. Timms, mother of one of the prisoners, and the police have received several complaints about disorderly goings on there nights. When the raid was made to the interruption of a hilarious jollification by the entire sextette. At the time of the arrests, Gibson made several statements of the nature of a confession, but told the Judge this morning that they were untrue, claiming that he was drunk and didn't know what he was talking about. All confessed to "licking up" considerable booze, but Ethel Henry swore that she only had lemon soda.

In imposing the sentence, City Judge Runyon said that the punishment was in behalf of the mass of colored people, whom he believes are trying to lead decent lives in Plainfield, but who are sadly hampered in their efforts by the actions of such as the prisoners.

JUNIORS MAY ORGANIZE A FIFE AND DRUM CORPS

Steps were taken at a meeting of Plainfield Council ,Jr. O. U. A. M., last night to organize a fife and drum corps among members of the order in this city. Councilor Peck appointed William F. Richards, Andrew Mulford and R. I. Runyon as a committee to confer with similar committees to be appointed by Franklin, Somerset and Benevolent Councils. It is believed that a corps of at least twenty-five members can be organized and this would prove an attractive feature.

It is stated that whenever either Council turns out it is obliged to hire music, and that if a corps is organized among members of the order, it would mean quite a saving in expense. Plainfield Council does not know at present what action the other Councils will take, but it seems to be the opinion that they will favor it and will appoint committees to attend a conference.

Registry of Voters Begin.

The members of the local election boards in common with those from all parts of the county, today commenced the work of registering the voters of the city. They will make a complete canvass of the four wards for the purpose of obtaining as accurate a list of voters as possible. However, it is earnestly requested that voters themselves personally see to it that their names are on the registry. Otherwise they will not be permitted to vote at the primaries or election. Heretofore, there have been instances where voters have learned only too late that their names were not on the list and in consequence were barred from having any part in election. It is the purpose of the election officers to make every reasonable effort to get every voter's name and with the assistance of those entitled to vote the work can be expedited.

Day Nursery Opens Sept. 8.

Now that the City Union King's Daughters' baby camp on the mountains is closed, preparations are being made to open the Day Nursery on Tuesday, September 8, when practically the same work will be carried on during the fall and winter months. The Union cared for an unusually large number of children at the camp this summer and those in charge are deeply grateful to the many friends who have assisted in any way. The needs at the Day Nursery will be just as great and it is hoped that generous contributions will be made in support of the charitable institution.

Enjoyed Motorcycle Trip.

Hugh Gray, of Prescott place, has purchased an M. & M. motorcycle, and on Sunday, in company with Mr. Lindsey, of Compton avenue, who recently bought a similar machine, made a trip to the Oranges, Verona, Caldwell, Boonton and Lake Hopatcong. They covered the entire distance in about seven hours, including several stops.

—A big display of fruits at Neuman Brothers every day. Specials tomorrow will include white and yellow peaches, Bartlett pears, plums and crabapples.

BOROUGH SCHOOL TEACHER NOW MRS. T. A. WEAVER

Miss Pauline Webster, for the past two years a teacher in the borough schools, became the wife of T. Ashley Weaver, son of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Weaver, of Rutherford, at a quiet wedding held at the bride's home at Moravia, N. Y., last Thursday. Her resignation from the North Plainfield teaching staff was formally accepted at the meeting of the Board of Education held last night, and the committee on teachers has been authorized to secure her successor.

Mr. Weaver is a brother-in-law of Frank Rowley, of Grove street, and has been for several years associated with him in the drug business in this city. He was at one time a member of Company K and has a large circle of friends in this city and borough. He will continue in the drug business at Hackensack, where the young couple will make their home.

The wedding is the second victory for Dan Cupid among borough teachers this year, for Miss Adele Milne, of the Somerset street school kindergarten, gave up teaching to wed shortly after the close of school in June.

J. J. STAHL A CANDIDATE FOR BOROUGH COUNCIL

Julius J. Stahl, of Somerset street, is the latest candidate for North Plainfield councilmanic honors on the Republican ticket, and his petition is to be circulated by men prominent in the party "over the brook." Mr. Stahl is a member of the ice cream and confectionary firm of Debele & Stahl, of Somerset street, and has always been interested in the welfare of the borough. He has a large circle of friends who have pledged him their support. Mr. Stahl has long been urged to come out as a candidate, but did not announce his intention of going on the ticket until last night.

The first petition of a councilmanic candidate in the fall campaign,—that of Councilman E. P. T. Smith, chairman of the fire, water and lamps committee, who is seeking a second term, was filled with Borough Clerk Fred Martin today. Petitions from Frank Mobus and Frank Krewson, the Democratic candidates, as well as those of W. L. Smalley and Mr Stahl, who are candidates with Mr. Smith on the Republican ticket, have not been filed yet. While the petitioners have until next Tuesday to file the Borough Clerk has announced that as Monday is Labor Day and a holiday, it will be necessary to have them all in his hands by Saturday night.

SCRUGGS UNDER BAIL TO WAIT GRAND JURY'S ACTION.

John Scruggs, the West Third street colored man, arrested by Marshal Logan, of Fanwood, Saturday, for shooting at Andrew Ryan, a colored neighbor with whom he had a quarrel on Park avenue, that borough, was held under $200 bail to await the action of the grand jury at his hearing before Borough Recorder Sheelen last night. The bail was supplied by H. C. Christianson, by whom Scruggs is employed as gardener.

Neither of the men was represented by counsel, but each told his own story of the quarrel which resulted in the shooting. Scruggs claimed that he drew his revolver, which was of .38 calibre, when he saw Ryan pick up some stones. Ryan told the Recorder that he picked up the stones because he saw Scruggs reach for his hip pocket and anticipated some shooting. Herbert Terow, of West Third street, was a witness for Ryan. He is employed as gardener by G. B. Spearin, of Fanwood.

MISS ESTELLE BOSS BRIDE OF BAYONNE MAN.

Miss Estelle Phillips Boss, daughter of Mrs. S. J. Boss, of West Fourth street, and Fred B. Vanness, of Bayonne, were married at noon today by the bride's pastor, Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, of Trinity Reformed church, in the presence of the immediate relatives and a few intimate friends. After a trip of several weeks the couple will reside on Fortieth street, Bayonne, where the groom has furnished a home.

The bride was engaged for several years as a cashier at S. Scheuer & Co.'s grocery store on West Front street. She is a member of Trinity Reformed church and active in the Sunday-school and Christian Endeavor Society, of which she has been a faithful attendant.

Mrs. I. E. Duerden and Mrs. L. J. Robins, of Bermuda, were on Saturday last the guests of Rev. and Mrs. J. H. Simons, of West Third street.

WOLVERTON CASE HEARD

MANAGER ENTERS DENIAL.

Declares He Was Not Rough or Brutal in His Treatment of Samuel S. Vermeule.

City Judge Runyon received testimony at the city court today in the assault charge of S. S. Vermeule, a 90-year-old inmate of the local Industrial Home, against Arthur Wolverton, manager of the institution Mr. Vermeule, Harry G. Adams a witness, and Mr. and Mrs. Wolverton told their versions of the alleged brutal attack upon the old man on the lawn of the home on Saturday, August 1. Because of the absence of City Physician C. B. Lufburrow, whom Mr. Vermeule told about the case upon his visit to the home th following week, the Judge adjourned the hearing until tomorrow, when the doctor's testimony will be received. S. S. Swackhamer, Mr. Vermeule's counsel, was not present, but will be at the continued session to morrow morning. William G. De Meza represents Manager Wolverton.

Mr. Vermeule's story of the incident developed the statement that the manager had seized him roughly by the neck as he was sitting on grass terrace near the driveway entrance to the home and threw him to the macadam walk, bruising his wrist and knee. He testified that he was very dizzy, his heart fluttered and he was still in a nervous condition as a result of the treatment.

Harry G. Adams, an insurance man, who was riding past the Home on Rock avenue, testified that he was "horrified and astonished at the treatment the old man received." His story substantiated Mr. Vermeule's statements.

A feature of Manager Wolverton's testimony was his conception of his personal right at the home. He stated that he understood that the front of the property was his private lawn, and said that he took pains to keep it neat so that his visitors as well as visitors to the home might be favorably impressed. The lawn stretches several hundred feet along Front street and is crossed by a driveway entering from Rock avenue. He denied having seized Mr. ermeule by the neck or having pushed him. He said he told the man not to sit on the grass, which he was damaging with his cane, and was taunted by Mr. Vermeule. At that he lifted him up from his sitting posture, seizing him under the arm pits. As he released him after getting him to his feet, Mr. Vermeule who had not regained his balance fell to his knees. The manager stated that he then lifted him up a second time and led him to the side porch at the rear of the home. Mrs. Wolverton told practically the same story from her view of the incident from an upstairs window of the institution.

MEN'S TENNIS TOURNAMENT AT WATCHUNG HUNT CLUB.

Arrangements have been completed for a men's double tennis tournament on the courts of the Watchung Hunt Club, Plainfield avenue, Saturday and Monday, September 5 and 7. It will be an open tournament and the members of the Plainfield Country Club and the Park Golf Club have been invited to enter. Suitable prizes, given by the Watchung Hunt Club, will be awarded the winning team.

Play will begin Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock and continue on Labor Day. A nominal entry fee will be charged for the purpose of providing tennis balls. Players wishing to enter should communicate with Daniel Runkle, 975 Hillside avenue, or sign the entry list posted at the clubhouse. The committee in charge of the tournament consists of Wylie Brown, W. L. Righter, Eliot Cutter, Morris J. Dumont and Daniel Runkle.

Two Tough Propositions.

The Y. M. C. A. nine will play the Bound Brooks at Bound Brook Saturday afternoon and on Labor Day afternoon will cross bats with the Somerville West Ends, at Somerville.

Will Examine U. S. Forest.

Townsend Mason, of Bound Brook, a graduate of the Plainfield High School, class '01, who is now connected with the United States Forestry Service, and who has been spending the past six months in office work at Washington, is visiting his home prior to his departure for the State of Washington, to make an examination of forest between Puget Sound and the Pacific Ocean, with a view to selling one hundred million feet of Uncle Sam's timber.

CHIEF DOANE BACK FROM FIREMEN'S CONVENTION

Chief T. O. Doane, of the local fire department, returned home yesterdy after attending the thirty-sixth annual convention of the International Association of Fire Chiefs held at Columbus, Ohio, last week. Although the chief was "on the sick list" part of the time he was West, he spoke enthusiastically today of the royal reception given the delegates by the Columbus firemen and the exhibits of apparatus and fire-fighting paraphenalia in connection with the various sessions.

Mr. Doane spoke especially of the automobile apparatus on exhibition, saying that the automobile steamers, chemicals and hook and ladder trucks were wonders of speed and beauty. In one of the business sessions there was a lengthy discussion of gasoline and its dangers, in which the chief took active part. The sessions lasted for three days and in connection with them the visitors inspected the various engine houses at Columbus, where the fire-fighting facilities are most complete. Upon the return trip, Chief Doane stopped off at Pittsburg and Altoona. Pa.

SCHOOL BOARD MEMBER WILL NOT SEEK NEW TERM

It was announced today that E M. Cave, of Sandford avenue, the First ward member of the Board o Education, whose term expires thi year, will not be a candidate for re nomination. Reasons for this are that owing to a pressure of busines duties and impaired health he feels compelled to decline the honor. Mr. Cave has served on the board for several terms and is considered one of the most valuable members. His many friends regret that he finds i impossible to continue as the representative of the First ward.

Since the announcement that Mr Cave will not be a candidate, several names have been suggested as probable nominees, including Charles G. Little, of Sandford avenue; former Mayor James F. Buckle, of Westervelt avenue, and City Clerk James T. MacMurray, of Sandford avenue. Among the three Mr. Little's name appears to be the most prominent and he has many friends who are urging him to stand for the nomination.

DOG MUZZLING ODINANCE EFFECTIVE ALL THE YEAR.

Many inquiries have been made within the past few days as to the time when muzzles can be removed from dogs following the proclamation issued early in the summer by Mayor Charles J. Fisk. When Chief Kiely was questioned about the matter today he said that he is governed entirely by the city ordinance and owners of dogs would have to do likewise. That particular section of the ordinance which refers to the muzzling of dogs, reads as follows:

"Section 1. That no dog shall be permitted to run at large within the City of Plainfield, unless a good and sufficient muzzle shall be placed over the mouth of such dog in such a manner as to render biting impossible; and any person who shall permit or suffer any dog owned or harbored by him to run at large contrary to the provisions of this ordinance shall upon conviction thereof be punished by a fine not exceeding $10 for each offence."

This means that dogs must be muzzled at all times and failure to do so is a violation of the ordinance.

THIEVES ROB SIX HOUSES.

Visit Half Dozen Places in Jersey City, but Get Little Plunder.

Thieves visited six houses in Lexington and Williams avenues, Jersey City, on Sunday night or early yesterday, but got little booty. The thieves took only jewelry and cash. The impression of the police is that the thefts were committed by persons familiar with the houses. The dwellings visited were: Richard Sessler, 42 Williams avenue, jewelry worth $40, and cash, $5; Mrs. Lillian Ostrander, 37 Williams avenue, jewelry, $50, and cash, $2; Frederick W. Jacques, 39 Williams avenue, jewelry, $30; George Newkirk, 179 Lexington avenue, jewelry, $40; Mrs. Bentz, 184 Lexington avenue, cash, $40, and Otto Gorsing, 183 Lexington avenue, cash, $2.

Borough Firemen to Meet Tonight.

The regular meeting of the North Plainfield Firemen's Relief Association will be held in the borough council chambers tonight. Chief Howard Woolston, Captain Edmund H. Terry, David Allen and William McCullough have been chosen delegates to the State Firemen's Relief Association conference to be held at Atlantic City next week.

AMBOY'S MAYOR RUN DOWN BY A PLAINFIELD AUTO

Mayor Bosschweiler was crossing Perth Amboy, was run down and slightly injured Sunday afternoon by an automobile owned and driven by J. H. R. Hall, of Johnston avenue, an insurance agent of this city. His Honor is confined to his home as a result and the officials of Perth Amboy in the meantime are taking active steps to bring about a more strict enforcement of speed laws.

Mayor Bollschweiler was crossing Smith street, Perth Amboy, when Mr. Hall, accompanied by several friends, approached along the trolley car tracks. Mr. Hall attempted to turn out of the tracks, but the car skidded, and, swinging around, struck the Mayor and knocked him down. The machine was stopped and Mr. Bollschweiler was picked up and taken to his home. His injuries are not consideered serious.

The same day Health Inspector Samuel T. Frost, of Perth Amboy, while standing in New Brunswick avenue, between two grocery wagons, was struck by an automobile in charge of L. Lake, of Spottswood, and knocked down. The machine passed over his legs. Later he was able to walk home. In speaking of the accident to himself later, the Mayor was not inclined to blame Mr. Hall, explaining that it was an accident that could not be helped.

BIGGS RETURNS HOME; WIFE AND HE RECONCILED

William F. Biggs, who was held a prisoner at the Central police station, Detroit, for several days last week as the aftermath of his elopement with Mrs. Louise Kelly, wife of Charles E. Kelly, Jr., of New Market, returned to his wife at the Bunker farm, on Greenbrook yesterday. A reconciliation has been effected between the two, and Mrs. Kelly has also returned to live with her husband, who found her in Detroit and brought her back to this city.

Several days ago most of the Biggs' belongings were sold at a chattel mortgage sale, to satisfy claims of the Dr. Bunker estate. None of the household furnishings were disposed of at that time, however. Yesterday, Constable William N. Pangborn, sold the Biggs' crop of corn and potatoes in the field in satisfaction of a judgment secured by C. T. Rogers, of New Market.

August Weather Statistics.

Weather Prophet John Neagle, shows by his monthly statistics that the mean temperature for August was 2.2 degrees below the normal and the precipitation for the month was 1.50 inches above the normal. The statistics follow: Highest temperature, 95 degrees, on the 4th; lowest temperature, 45 degrees, on the 21st; mean temperature, 70.6; normal temperature, 72.8; greatest daily range, 37; total precipitation, 6.60 inches; normal precipitation, 5.10 inches; greatest precipitation in 24 hours, 4.08 on the 26th, greatest precipitation in 12 hours, 3.75 on the 26th; greatest precipitation in 10 hours, 7.71 inches on the 26th; accumulated precipitation for 1908, 38.08 inches; number of rain days, 11; number of days clear, 11; partly cloudy, 16; cloudy, 4; dates of thunder storms, 5, 6, 7, 11; dates of fog, 6, 7; dates of meteors, 13.

Major Casler Coming Here.

Major and Mrs. George F. Casler have just been appointed as the new divisional officers for New Jersey, having charge of the work of the Salvation Army throughout the State. The major has been an officer twenty-three years and is very popular wherever he goes, having recently completed a successful stay at Buffalo, N. Y. He is now visiting all the centres of army work in this State and is coming to Plainfield next Sunday to conduct special meetings in the Salvation Army Hall on East Second street, at 4 and 8 o'clock. Large attendances are anticipated. All are cordially invited.

Local Vets. at Encampment.

Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., is represented at the National G. A. R. encampment at Toledo, Ohio, by Past Department Commander W. C. Smith, H. Craig Smith, Augustus Runyon and Joseph N. Bogert, who left for the western city on Sunday. Following the encampment they will visit other points of interest in the West.

Chief Marshal George Weiss, of the North Plainfield police force, resumed his duties today, after a fortnight's vacation. Yesterday he and C. D. Pope, of the borough, were on a fishing trip at Asbury Park, and brought back a fine catch of lafayettes.

CLAIMS UNFAIR TAXATION

S. W. Rushmore Begins Vigorous Protest Against Methods of Local Assessors.

APPORTIONMENTS ARE UNFAIR.

Will Organize an Industrial League to Bring About an Equitable Adjustment of the Municipal Levy.

Highly incensed over what he believes to be a manifestly unfair assessment of taxes in Plainfield and determined to do all in his power to correct the alleged unfairness, Samuel W. Rushmore, owner of the Rushmore Dynamo Works on South avenue, has taken steps to form an Industrial League in Plainfield, the membership to be comprised almost entirely of working people and people of moderate means. He declares that the wealthy property-owners of Plainfield are not paying their proportionate share of the taxes, adding that if they did the tax rate would be about one-tenth what it is now.

Mr. Rushmore is assessed on $56,000 personal property and says that legally his assessment is correct and he has no fault to find with it, but when he learned that the Pond Machine Tool Works was assessed on $125,000 personal property he declared with emphasis that it was an outrage and if he could help it the assessment would not be allowed to stand. He says that he is willing to take an affidavit that the Pond Machine Tool Works has a million and half dollars worth of personal property.

In speaking of the matter today, Mr. Rushmore said:

"On the present basis of assessment now employed here my share is 1-38 of the whole city and I hardly think that I am as important as all that. Just from a casual investigation I have learned that there are about twenty other property-owners in Plainfield who have been put in my class and what I want to know is by what method all of the rest of the property-owners are favored. I am strongly persuaded to close up my factory here, sell the property and move to some other place where I can get better treatment.

"The fact is that it is hard to get skilled workmen in Plainfield and they have to be brought here from other cities and towns. When they take up their residence here they are assessed so far out of all that is fair that they cannot stand the pressure which sends their expenses up to unusual proportion. My purpose now is to organize an Industrial League and I will strive to get every workingman in the city into it. We will then be able to make a determined fight for what is right and fair.

"I have five copyists all in readiness to make a complete list of the assessments from the books of the assessors as soon as I can get access to the books. I went to the office of the assessor today and requested permission to see the books, but was refused. However, I intend to see those books, get the list and then I will have something to work on."

When asked if he would take the matter before the Union County Board of Taxation, Mr. Rushmore said that he would do so in the proper way and if necessary would go to the State Board of Taxation. He said that he would not leave a stone unturned in obtaining justice in matters of taxation. He added incidentally that he had never taken any part in local politics, preferring to attend to his own affairs. He hinted that if he was identified with the powers that be he might be favored, but he did not seek concessions in that way.

Newark Juniors Didn't Come.

For some unknown reason the members of the Jr. O. U. A. M., of Newark, who were to have come to Plainfield last night in automobiles to visit Plainfield Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., failed to put in an appearance. The local Juniors met as usual and waited until a late hour for the visitors, but no word explaining their failure to reach here was received. According to the proposed plan the Newark Juniors were to come to Plainfield in autos and after a visitation were to go to New Brunswick, where they were to be entertained by Juniors in that city. Plainfield Council received word that on Monday night, September 28, the Roselle Council, will visit the local Council to see the initiatory work.

G. O. P. Committee to Meet.

The Republican City Committee will hold a regular meeting tonight at headquarters in the City National Bank building, when preliminary plans will be discussed for the coming campaign. The committee has held no meeting for more than a month and it is expected that there will be considerable routine business.

On their present Western trip the New York Nationals did all their losing at the two ends, and won all the games they played in the towns visited in between.

Somebody has figured out that big Ed Walsh is really responsible for forty-nine of the White Sox's victories, though that number doesn't show in the official records.

Former college football players are numerous in professional baseball, but now there is a college oarsman in the ranks. Coulson, the new Cincinnati outfielder, used to pull an oar at Cornell.

The strain of the big leagues race is such that it looks as if the respective pennant winners would be so tired when they come together that they won't be able to do more than lean against each other.

Arthur Irwin has signed Cree, the hard hitting outfielder of the Williamsport club, for the New York Americans. Cree is a former Pennsylvania State college player. He and Warhop, the Indian pitcher, will report this week.

From prseent indications there will be no post season games between the pennant winners of the American Association and Eastern League for the championship of the Class A leagues. The cause of this is the fact that the Eastern League season end about ten days later than the Association's and the A. A. magnates say they cannot keep their teams in condition after the close of the regular season, for such an imseries of games.

with him politically. He also paid a tribute to Mayor Stoy, but in his peroration he loudly pronounced the name of Walter Edge, who he termed "the only man qualified to bring the city back into the list of properly governed municipalities of the country."

Leading business men at the resort look upon the meeting, which began by being a protest against Gov. Fort's strong denunciation of Atlantic City and ended by becoming an out and out demonstration for Edge, as the opening of a strong campaign for the latter's nomination. It is possible that so soon as today a committee will be formed to wait upon Edge and ask him to become the leader of the opposition against the machine.

PROSPERITY IN TRENTON.

A prosperity wave has struck Trenton. Night and day forces are working in several of the largest plants in the city. There are but few remaining now of the army of unemployed which existed several months ago.

John S. Neary, proprietor of the Princeton Worsted Mills, has announced that within a few days 100 additional hands will be placed at work in the plant. The concern now employs 350 persons. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company has issued orders for the operation of its large shops in the city six days a week instead of four, the pervailing time for some months.

IN MEMORIAM.

Bishop James Newbury Fitzgerald.
To him, the cherished friend of early years,
This flattering verse I dedicate with tears.

Fain would I, sacred to his memory dear,
A temple fair or lofty column rear,
Whose brazen epitaph should long record
The worth of one anointed of the Lord;
But still shall live the memory of the just
When shafts lie prone and marble fanes are dust.

True to the Master whom he loved and served,
From duty's rugged path he never swerved;
By precept and example sought to teach
Of righteousness and temperance, and preach
Of faith and love, intent to magnify
His great commission and his office high—
Exiled himself that he might spread abroad
The glorious gospel of the Son of God;
Until at last, sore grieved and wounded deep,
In loving arms he laid him down to sleep.

Weep not that thou shalt see his face no more,
Nor hear his voice again upon thy shore—
His stalwart presence bide no more with thee—
Unseen, his gentle spirit still shall be Thy Summer guest, fair City by the Sea.

CORRECTION IN COPIES OF NEW ELECTION LAW

Secretary of State Samuel D. Dickinson has forwarded to lawyers and others having in their posession copies of the amended election law to date, a communication directing them to insert a correction to the affidavit affixed to the petitions for candidates.

The petition provides that the applicant must be a member of the party to which the candidate belongs and must, further, have voted for a majority of the candidates for members of Assembly at the last election The affidavit affixed was likewise arranged, but through some inadvertance the stipulation as to party affiliation, etc., was not inserted in the printed copies and is now being added by those having the Election Law Index in their possession.

There is another discrepancy in the book in that Chapter 209 has been omitted entirely, although it is to be found in the general law manual of 1908. Chapter 209 is the section which explains the method and requirements for signing a petition for candidates and is, therefore, very important.

Through a misunderstanding of the provisions of this chapter several newspapers recently declared that petitions were everywhere required for the naming of candidates for freeholders. This is not so, the provision being as follows:

"Not less than 50 voters of any political party in any municipality of this State other than a county, may file with the clerk of such municipality a petition endorsing any member of their political party as a candidate for nomination of said party to public office in said municipality, provided that nothing in this section contained shall interfere with, or alter, the provisions of an act to which this act is a supplement, providing for the nomination of said candidates in a single borough, ward or township."

This means that, except for the Mayor and freeholder at large the old number of signers is all that will be required.

Some of the provisions of the new law are quite puzzling even to a legal mind and the lawyers here and elsewhere are now nedeavoring to familiarize themselves with them. Unfamiliarity with the law was responsible for the failure of election boards to organize, which fact was announced recently, and it is not unlikely that other discrepancies will be found before election day.

TRIED TO DRUG COUSIN.

Caught, it is said, trying to enter the room of his 21-year-old cousin, William Marks, 22 years of age, of 612 Avenue C, Bayonne, was roughly handled early yesterday by the father of the girl, and the young man is under arrest. He escaped the father by jumping out of the window.

The young woman is Hattie Greenley, of 624 Avenue C. Her father says that Marks has several times proposed marriage to her, but she has always refused him. Yesterday morning's visit was the second time the youth has stolen into the house. It is declared that each time he took chloroform with him.

ELIZABETH WARD FIRST TO STAND FOR FOWLER.

By filing the names of delegates pledged to support Congressman Charles N. Fowler for renomination, the Eleventh Ward of Elizabeth has fired the first Union county gun in the struggle which will lead up to the formal consideration of Republican candidate for Congress in the Fifth District. Former Mayor Samuel L. Berry, C. C. Moore, Lovell H. Carr and Frederick B. Farrand in the First District of the Eleventh ward are the Republicans who have announced their stand for Representative Fowler and in the Second District of this ward the Fowler delegates are Frank H. Davis and Philander R. Gray.

It was expected that the Eleventh ward would be well to the fore fore among local districts pledging support for the re-nomination of Congressman Fowler and the filing of the names mentioned occasioned no surprise in Republican circles, in fact the Fowlerites count on general support for their candidate in Elizabeth. This optimism is not without its weak spots, and it is admitted that even in the camp of the factional enemy the present Representative is capable of working but little havoc.

TO SELL "WOODRUFF'S LAND."

Church Ground Tied Up Over a Century to Be Disposed Of.

"Land poor" since Isaac Woodruff, a year before the signing of the Declaration of Independence, deeded several tracts of land to the Presbyterian church at Springfield, relief was finally obtained yesterday through a decree signed by Chancellor Pitney, at Newark.

In his deed Woodruff set forth that "the said quarter of an acre of land is to be Held in Trust * * * to be a glebe for the Minister of the Presbyterian church Society of Springfield for the time being and forever. And never to be sold or Disposed of to any other uses." Jeremiah Mulford gave some land in 1761, the grant also tying up the property.

Chancellor Pitney signed an order permitting the trustees to sell the land. The decree authorizes also the enlarging of the burial plot, which has been filled up, and authorizes the use of a portion of the proceeds of the sale of the lands for the erection of a new parsonage.

Sheriff Chanler Orders That Fishkill Trips Be Made Purely Business.

Fishkill Landing, N. Y., Sept. 1.—The suit against Harry K. Thaw, by Dr. John P. Wilson, of Poughkeepsie for $600 for services as an alienist, which has been postponed many times, was again set over today until Friday.

Thaw was brought here from Poughkeepsie by Deputy Sheriffs, but counsel for neither side appeared. The prisoner was taken back to Poughkeepsie immediately after the adjournment. The good faith of the proceedings had been questioned, the intimation being made that they were a subterfuge to gain outings, and Sheriff Chanler directed his deputies to give no ground for criticism.

On previous visits to Fishkill there were trolley rides, a trip to Mount Beacon, and other diversions for Thaw.

FINDS REJECTED LOOT.

Morristown, Sept. 1.—John Gann, a laborer, found between seventy and eighty pieces of silverware in the woods on Mrs. Julius Catlin's place, on the Whippany road, yesterday, and turned them over to the police. They tallied with the description of property stolen from the residence of Emile Hurtzig, on Morris avenue, July 8, and later they were identified by Mr. Hurtzig.

Some of the pieces had been broken by the thief in testing them to determine whether they were solid or plated, all of the solid metal having been carefully culled out of the loot.

This was the robbery where the thief carried off several drawers full of silver from the buffet in the dining-room to avoiding making a noise in handling it, the empty drawers being found the following day in the woods in the rear of the house.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Nicholas Leinero, of Forest avenue, who has been the victim of a number of petty robberies within the past two years, had his pocket picked of $18 sometime yesterday while attending to his store. "Nick" believes he knows the party who made the touch and threatens to make it interesting for him unless the money is returned.

The Baptist parsonage has been newly papered and painted throughout. Rev. Franklin Matthews, the new pastor, is expected to move in the latter part of the week or the first of next.

Mrs. Alexander Muir and son, of Newark, are spending a week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Meyer.

Joseph Corrona is enjoying a two weeks' vacation from his position with the N. Y. Telephone Company.

Mrs. Charles Haberly, of Front street, has been entertaining Miss Hoyt, of Brooklyn, over Sunday.

Benjamin Crew, who has been visiting friends in town, has returned to his home in Rahway.

George Baldwin has returned from a week's outing camping at Lake Hopatcong.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Russell Pyatt, who was seriously injured by a horse two weeks ago, came home from the hospital on Sunday for a few hours and returned in the afternoon. His parents and friends regard the cure as being short of the miraculous. After a few days he will be returned from Muhlenberg Hospital not only completely cured, but evidently without a mark of disfigurement.

A case was brought before Judge Smith last evening in which a small boy was charged with stealing watermelons out of Albert Manning's garden. The judge suspended sentence until he had an opportunity of talking to the boy's father.

Miss Nellie Hannon has just completed a visit extending over several weeks with friends in New York.

Mrs. W. Sisty, accompanied by her niece, Marjorie Voorhees, are staying with relatives in Danville.

Miss Emma Manning has returned to Lakeside from a two weeks' visit to her sister in Asbury Park.

Mr. and Mrs. Dunn, of Maple avenue, have returned from a visit to friends of New Brunswick.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

A delegation from Court New Providence, I. O. O. F., was received and royally entertained by the local Odd Fellows at their meeting last night. The visitors were most favorably impressed with the session of the local lodgemen, which was well attended. Addresses by visiting officers were a feature of the social hour which followed the regular meeting.

Tickets for the Dunellen A. C. fair are selling rapidly and the members of the committee are working hard completing arrangements for the affair, to be held at Jr. O. U. A. M. Hall for four days, beginning Septehmer 16. A door prize will be offered each evening.

Petitions for the various local political offices are being assiduously circulated in the borough, and will be filed with the borough clerk by a week from tomorrow.

Mrs. R. P. F. Von Minden and grandson, Rene, have returned after a week spent with relatives in Massachusetts.

GIRL SAVES TWO OTHERS; STOPS RUNAWAY HORSE.

Miss Ida Wilcox saved two girls' lives by bravely stopping a runaway horse at Budd's Lake, yesterday. Miss Wilcox, who lives in Brooklyn, is passing her vacation at the lake. With her arms full of bundles, she was walking home on a path near the main road when she heard shrieks and hoof-beats.

A big bay horse, drawing a light wagon, had got out of control of the girl drving it; she was screaming for help. Her companion, speechless with terror, was clinging to her as the wagon swayed.

Miss Wilcox flung away all her bundles, ran into the road, crouched, waited a brief minute, then, as the runaway flashed by, jumped and seized the bridle. Raising her feet, she hung suspended while the horse carried her twenty-five yards. Her weight gradually reduced its speed; she brought it to a full halt within a few yards of the lake.

PROTEST MADE AGAINST A BABY PARADE AWARD

Charges that awards were made in at least one instance in the Asbury Park baby parade without considering the merits of the exhibits, and that a member of the Parade Committee had admitted that action had been taken in one class when the judges did not even know the contestant, have been made in an official protest lodged with the Carnival Committee by Mr. John B. Brooke, a New York business man, who is spending the summer at the New Monmouth Hotel at Deal Beach.

Mr. Brooke's daughter, Varian, three years old, was entered in Class 8, which comprised floats, on Thursday afternoon last. Under the committee's ruling, entries closed on Thursday night. The entry blank was numbered 531, and presumably everything was according to the regulations. When the catalogue appeared however, the child's name was not in it, and on inquiry Mr. Brooke learned that the book had been printed four days before the date on which the entries closed.

Throughout the line of march the little girl's float, which represented a pearl cast up on the beach, elicited much applause and many friends of Mr. Brooke's family commented upon the fact that though there were nine prizes and only eleven entries in the class, this display did not receive some recognition from the judges.

As soon as the parade was dismissed Mr. Brooke made a formal protest in writing, and two members of the committee called at his hotel to see him. At the time he was out, but later one member of the committee met him, apologized on behalf of himself and his associates, and offered to have a special cup awarded to his child. His explanation was that the child's name not being in the catalogue puzzled the committee, and that instead of making inquiry they had awarded the prizes as if the "pearl" float had not existed.

"It looks to me as if the committee's judges made the awards first and then viewed the parade," said Mr. Brooke yesterday. "I declined the extra cup, of course, for it isn't the prize that I wanted but merely to have official recognition of the display, which certainly merited that much. It seems to me that the awarding of prizes was done in a very careless manner. My little girl, in my opinion, didn't deserve first place, but the least they could have done was to give her one of the other prizes, for her display was infinitely better than at least a half dozen of the others, to judge by the favorable comment of the spectators."

COLORED SKIN BECAME WHITE.

Funeral of Negress at Westfield Whose Malady Attracted Attention of Physicians.

The funeral of Mrs. Sarah E. Harris, colored, whose skin before her death was transformed from its original hue to an almost complete whiteness, took place yesterday from the New York Avenue Baptist church, Westfield.

Mrs. Harris' death was the result of a malady that for over three years had puzzled physicians. The first symptoms of her disease were small white blotches which appeared upon her skin and which were at first supposed to be some temporary affection of the cuticle. As Mrs. Harris instead of eventually recovering her health, began to slowly lose vitality, the area of white skin constantly increased until her body was half black and half white.

The attention of physicians was attracted to the case, and her malady was pronounced one for which no cure was known. Close watch was kept upon the woman's physical transformation, and the case was pronounced a rare one. At the time of her death there was no trace of color in the skin to indicate she had once been a negress.

Charles Harris, husband of the dead woman, is preaching in the South and could not be notified in time to be present at the funeral.

Funeral of Lawrence Watson.

The funeral service of Lawrence Watson, of Westfield, Mass., who died at the home of his brother, Michael Watson, on Grant avenue, on Sunday, was held this morning at 8:30 o'clock from the residence of the latter and at 9 o'clock from St. Mary's church, where a requiem mass was said for the repose of the soul. The attendance of relatives and friends was large and there was a beautiful display of floral tributes. The service was in charge of Father Sciola, the assistant pastor of the church. The burial was in St. Mary's cemetery, and the pall-bearers were Edward Coffey, Michael Regan, Michael Mansfield, Michael Shannon, of this city, and J. T. Keefe and James Baber, of Westfield, Mass.

Death of an Infant.

An infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Boroweaz, of DeKalb avenue, died this morning. The burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery this afternoon.

Peter Deighan, a pedestrian, returned from Boston yesterday with his pet dog, Chunky, and won $300 from Michael J. Doyle, president of the Hillside Pleasure Park Association, who wagered that Deighan could not walk from Belleville to Boston in two weeks. The pedestrian completed the trip in ten days, and as evidence displayed a number of signatures of persons in every city that he passed through. A reception will be given for Deighan by his friends at Belleville this week.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

That rousing and seemingly evergreen farce comedy, "McFadden's Flats," which has had many imitators and which outlived many so-called musical entertainments since it was originally produced fourteen years ago, comes to the New Plainfield treatre tonight.

One of the finest specimens of horse efish ever seen on the American stage is to be seen in "Montana," the play of the West by H. D. Carey. The horse in question is "Dolly Varden," the famous $5,000 Morgan mare. Her work in "Montana" is all but human, and by those who know, she has been pronounced the greatest acting horse on the stage today. A special car is required for the transportation of Dolly, beside her hostler, who is at all times with her. "Montana" will be at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow afternoon and night.

"When Old New York Was Dutch" is the title of a new play provided this season for Al. H. Wilson. The scenes of this play, which was written by Sidney R. Ellis, are laid in and around what is now New York city during the 17th century, and the dialogue tells an interesting story of the quaint people who inhabited the island of Manhattan in teh long ago. The play will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre Thursday night.

There are a great many reasons why "The Three of Us" is making such a great success, first it was written by Rachel Crothers; second, it is a great American play; third, it has one of the brightest stars before the footlights today in the role of Rhy Macchesney, and it is Miss Janet Waldorf; fourth, the production is complete to the minutest detail; fifth, the popular New York producers are Messrs. Cahn and Treadwell and these promoters have spared nothing to make this attraction one of the hits of the season. Many more reasons could be mentioned especially the success at the Madison Square theatre, where it had a run of over three hundred nights, duplicating the same in Chicago and Boston. It interests every one and when you come to think of it that's a pretty big thing to say. "The Three of Us" will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre Friday night.

Corinne, who scored a big hit in George M. Cohan's "45 Minutes from Broadway" comes to the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon and night in "Lola from Berlin," as originally produced by Klaw & Erlanger in the Liberty theatre, New York city. The play is the latest work of John J. McNally with a story said to be unique and affording the star ample opportunity for the display of her talents. William Jerome and Jean Schwartz have contributed some of their best lyrics, including such song hits as "Beneath the Moon," "I'd Sooner Be a Has-been," "I Think of You the Whole Year Round," "Just Home from College," "Poor Little Foolish Man" and "There's Not Another Girlie in the World for Me." One of the strongest of musical comedy casts has been engaged to support Corinne including such well known farceurs as Mark Sullivan, Henry Carl Lewis, Lillie May White, Osborn Clemson, Pearl Revare, Franker Woods, Franklin Vail, Lillian Wilson, Hazel Carlton, Freddie Stott and Bunnie Ingeborg, together with an excellent chorus of beautiful singing and dancing girls. The play comes here superbly mounted.

"A Message from Mars" is distinctly human. No comedy, no matter how bright its lines or novel its theme can live if it is not a true picture of life, the average life as it is lived must be faithfully reproduced, the story well told and it then appeals to the multitude, whereas the problem play appeals to few and fewer each year. A specially large and well equipped company will present it here at the New Plainfield theatre Labor Day, afternoon and night.

LEGAL NOTICES.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION NO. 6.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY.

Be It Resolved (the House of Assembly concurring). That the following amendments to the constitution of this State be and the same are hereby proposed, and when the same shall be agreed to by a majority of the members elected to the Senate and House of Assembly, the said amendments shall be entered on their journals, with the yeas and nays thereon, and referred to the Legislature next to be chosen, and published for three months prior to the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November next, in at least one newspaper of each county, to be designated by the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Assembly and the Secretary of State, payment for such publication to be made by the Treasurer on the warrant of the Comptroller.

1. Strike out paragraph 3 of section I, Article IV, and insert in place thereof the following:

3. Elections for members of the Senate and General Assembly shall be held every two years on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, beginning anno domini one thousand nine hundred and ten, and every second year thereafter; and the two Houses shall meet separately on the second Tuesday in January in each year, at which time of meeting the legislative year shall commence.

2. Strike out paragraph 1 of section II, Article IV, and insert in place thereof the following:

1. The Senate shall be composed of one Senator from each county in the State, elected by the legal voters of the counties respectively, for four years.

3. Strike out paragraph 2 of section II, Article IV, and insert in place thereof the following:

2. As soon as the Senate shall meet after the first election to be held in pursuance of this constitution they shall be divided by the Senate as equally as may be into two classes. The seats of the Senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year; of the second class, at the expiration of the fourth year, so that one class may be elected every second year and if vacancies happen, by resignation or otherwise, the persons elected to supply such vacancies shall be elected for the unexpired terms only; provided, that the Senators having the longest period of time still to serve at the time of making said division shall be entitled to the longer terms.

4. Strike out paragraph 1 of section III, Article IV, and insert in place thereof the following:

1. The General Assembly shall be composed of members elected by the legal voters of the counties, respectively, every second year, beginning on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November anno domini one thousand nine hundred and ten, who shall be apportioned among the said counties as nearly as may be according to the number of their inhabitants. The Legislature shall, in the year one thousand nine hundred and ten, and at its first session after each United States decennial census hereafter, and not oftener, divide and arrange each county of this State into a district or districts for the election therein of a member or members of the General Assembly. Each Assembly district so constituted shall contain, as nearly as practicable, an equal number of inhabitants, and shall consist of convenient and contiguous territory in a compact form, but no county, or part thereof, shall be joined with any other county, or part thereof, in any such district; provided, that each county shall, at all times, be entitled to at least one member, and the whole number of members to be chosen shall never exceed sixty.

The Court of Last Resort, by whatever name known, is hereby invested with exclusive original jurisdiction and with full power, under such procedure as it may by rules prescribe, to review any division and arrangement made by the Legislature into Assembly districts of the counties of this State for the purpose of determining whether such arrangement and division, or any part thereof, is in accordance or in conflict with this section, and, if in conflict herewith, to adjudge the same, or such part thereof as may be in conflict herewith, null and void. In case said court shall determine such arrangement and division, or any part thereof, to be null and void the Legislature shall proceed to make a new arrangement and division, entire or partial, as the action of the court may require.

5. Strike out paragraph 3 of Article V and insert in place thereof the following:

3. The Governor shall hold his office for four years, to commence at twelve o'clock noon on the third Tuesday of January next ensuing the election for Governor by the people, and to end at twelve o'clock noon on the third Tuesday of January four years thereafter; and he shall be incapable of holding that office for four years next after his term of service shall have expired; and no appointment or nomination to office shall be made by the Governor during the last week of his said term.

6. Strike out paragraph 6 of section II, Article VII, and insert in place thereof the following:

6. Clerks and surrogates of counties shall be elected by the people of their respective counties at the elections for members of the General Assembly. They shall hold their offices for six years.

7. Strike out paragraph 7 of section II, Article VII, and insert in place thereof the following:

7. Sheriffs and coroners shall be elected by the people of their respective counties at the elections for members of the General Assembly, and shall hold their offices for four years, after which four years must elapse before they can be again capable of serving. Sheriffs shall annually renew their bonds.

8. Add to section 2 of Article VII, three paragraphs to be known as paragraphs 12, 13 and 14.

12. All elections for Governor, members of the Senate and General Assembly, sheriffs, coroners, county clerks and surrogates of counties and all other officers now or hereafter necessary to be chosen by the electors of the whole State, or of any county thereof, shall be held every second year, on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, beginning anno domini one thousand nine hundred and ten.

13. All elections for justices of the peace and all and any municipal officers, as distinguished from State and county officers as hereinbefore provided, now or hereafter necessary to be chosen by the electors of any city, borough, town, township, village or subdivision thereof, or any municipality of this State, except counties, shall be held every second year on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, beginning anno domini one thousand nine hundred and eleven.

14. Except as herein provided with relation to the office of Senators, all officers filling any elective office at the time these amendments take effect shall continue in the exercise of the duties thereof according to their respective commissions or terms of office, and until their successors may be elected and qualified under the provisions of these amendments, and all officers whose terms of office would expire after these amendments take effect and prior to the election and qualification of their successors in office, at the election for the respective offices first held under the provisions of these amendments, shall continue in office until their successors can be elected and qualified, at the election for such office or offices to be held next after these amendments take effect, according to the provisions hereof.

The Legislature shall pass all necessary laws to arrange the terms of office of all statutory elective officers so that said terms may be in harmony with these amendments, and to carry into effect the provisions hereof.

These amendments, if adopted, shall take effect and go into operation on the first day of February, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and ten.

ASSEMBLY CONCURRENT RESOLUTION, NO. 4.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY.

Be It Resolved, (the Senate concurring), That the following amendment to the Constitution of this State be and the same is hereby proposed, and when the same shall be agreed to by a majority of the members elected to the Senate and to the House of Assembly, the said amendment shall be entered on their journals, with the yeas and nays taken thereon, and referred to the Legislature next to be chosen, and published for three months previous to the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November next, in at least one newspaper of each county to be designated by the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Assembly and the Secretary of State, payment for such publication to be made by the Treasurer on the warrant of the Comptroller.

First—Strike out Paragraph 10 of Section VII of Article IV, and change the numbers of the following paragraphs to correspond:

Second—Change Paragraph 10 of Section V so to to read as follows:

10. The Governor or person administering the government, and four citizens of the State appointed by the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall constitute the Board of Pardons. The members of said Board, or any three of them, of whom the Governor or person administering the government shall be one, may remit fines and forfeitures, and grant reprieves, commutations, pardons and paroles, after conviction in all cases except impeachment. The four members specially appointed shall hold office for five years, and receive for their services a compensation which shall not be diminished during the term of their appointment.

Third—Change Section 1 of Article VI so as to read as follows:

SECTION I.

The judicial power shall be vested in a Court for the trial of impeachments, a Supreme Court, County Courts, and such other Courts, inferior to the Supreme Court, as may be established by law, which inferior Courts the Legislature may alter or abolish as the public good shall require.

Fourth—Strike out all of Section II, IV, V, VI and VII, of Article VI, change the number of Section III of Article VI to Section II, and insert the following sections in Article VI:

SECTION III.

Any judge of any of the Courts of the State may be removed for disability continuing for one year, or for refusal to perform the duties of his office, by a vote of two-thirds of all the members of the Senate and of two-thirds of all the members of the House of Assembly voting separately, after a hearing before both Houses in joint session.

SECTION IV.

1. The Supreme Court shall be organized in three divisions, namely: the Appeals Division, the Law Division, and the Chancery Division. It shall consist of a Presiding Justice of the Appeals Division who shall be styled the Chief Justice, a Presiding Justice of the Law Division who shall be styled the President Justice, and a Presiding Justice of the Chancery Division, who shall be styled the Chancellor, and eighteen Associate Justices, which number may be increased by law.

2. The Appeals Division shall consist of the Chief Justice, and six other Justices of the Supreme Court to be assigned by the Governor. A Justice of the Supreme Court assigned by the Governor to the Appeals Division shall serve in said Division until the end of his term.

The remaining Justices shall be assigned by the Supreme Court to the Law or Chancery Division, as the business of the Court may require.

3. Whenever the number of causes before the Appeals Division shall be so great that the Division cannot promptly hear and determine them, the Governor shall, when authorized by statute, temporarily assign five of the Justices of the other Divisions to sit in the Appeals Division, which shall thereupon sit in two Divisions for the hearing and decision of causes pending at the time of such assignment.

4. Four Justices shall be necessary to constitute a quorum on the final hearing of any cause in the Appeals Division, but the Supreme Court may provide by rule for the making of interlocutory orders by a lesser number of Justices, or by one justice; such orders to be subject to revision by the Appeals Division.

On the hearing of a cause in the Appeals Division, no Justice who has given a judicial opinion in the cause in favor of or against the judgment, order or decree under review shall sit at the hearing to review such judgment, order or decree, but the reasons for such opinion shall be assigned to the Court in writing.

5. A majority of all the members of the Supreme Court, to be presided over by the Chief Justice, shall constitute a quorum for the assignment of justices, and for the appointment of officers, and the enactment of rules.

6. The Supreme Court shall appoint one or more reporters, not exceeding three, to report the decisions of the Court, and shall by rule define his or their duties and powers. The reporters shall hold office for five years, subject, however, to removal at the discretion of the Court.

SECTION V.

1. The Appeals Division shall have and exercise the appellate jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Court of Errors and Appeals, the jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Supreme Court on writ of error, and the jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Prerogative Court on appeal, and by the Ordinary on appeal, and such further appellate jurisdiction as may be conferred upon it by law, together with such original jurisdiction as may be incident to the complete determination of any cause on review, saving, however, the right of trial by jury.

2. The jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Supreme Court and the Justices thereof not hereby conferred on the Appeals Division, and the jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Circuit Courts and the Judges thereof, and such further original jurisdiction not of an equitable nature, and such further appellate jurisdiction from inferior courts, as may be conferred by statute, shall be exercised by the Law Division of the Supreme Court and by the several Justices thereof, in accordance with rules of practice and procedure prescribed by statute, or in the absence of statute, by the Supreme Court.

3. The jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Prerogative Court and the Ordinary, not hereby conferred on the Appeals Division, and the jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Court of Chancery and the Chancellor, and such further original equity jurisdiction as may be conferred by statute, and such further original jurisdiction as is now conferrable on the Prerogative Court shall be exercised by the Chancery Division and by the Chancellor and the several justices of said Division in accordance with rules of practice and procedure prescribed by statute, or, in the absence of statute, by the Supreme Court, but the Justices of that Division shall be under such control and supervision by the Chancellor as shall be provided by the Supreme Court.

4. Terms of the Supreme Court presided over by a single Justice of the Law Division for the trial of issues joined in or brought to the Law Division of the Supreme Court shall be held in the several counties at times fixed by the Supreme Court. Until so fixed, such trial terms shall be held at the places and times now fixed by law for the holding of the Courts of Common Pleas in the several counties.

5. The Supreme Court may provide by rule for the transfer of any cause or issue from the Law Division to the Chancery Division, or from the Chancery Division to the Law Division of the Supreme Court, and from the County Court to the Law Division or the Chancery Division of the Supreme Court, and for the giving of complete legal and equitable relief in any cause in the Court or Division where it may be pending.

6. Nothing herein contained shall prevent the alteration, by law of any statutory power or jurisdiction conferred upon any Court or Judge since the adoption of the Constitution in the year one thousand eight hundred and forty-four, and nothing herein contained shall prevent the Legislature from conferring upon any inferior Court which may hereafter be established such power or jurisdiction as was exercised by or which may now be conferred upon the inferior Courts mentioned in Section I of Article VI, of the Constitution of 1844.

SECTION VI.

The County Courts shall have and exercise, in all cases within the county such original common law jurisdiction concurrent with the Supreme Court, and such other jurisdiction heretofore exercised by courts inferior to the Supreme Court and the Prerogative Court as may be provided by law. The final judgments of the County Courts may be brought for review before the Supreme Court in the Appeals Division. Until otherwise provided, the jurisdiction heretofore exercised by the Courts of Common Pleas, Orphans' Courts, Courts of Oyer and Terminer, Courts of Quarter Sessions, or by the Judges thereof, shall be exercised by the County Courts pursuant to rules prescribed by the Supreme Court. The Justices of the Law Division of the Supreme Court shall be ex officio Judges of the County Courts. All other jurisdiction or authority now vested in any Court, Judge, or magistrate with jurisdiction inferior to the Courts in this section mentioned, and not superseded by this article, shall continue to be exercised by such Court, Judge or magistrate until the Legislature shall otherwise provide.

SECTION VII.

This amendment to the Contitution shall not cause the abatement of any suit or proceeding pending when it takes effect. The Supreme Court shall make such general and special rules and orders as may be necessary for the transfer of all suits and proceedings to the appropriate Division or Court created by this amendment. Matters pending when this amendment takes effect shall be decided by the judge or judges to whom they were submitted, and the order, judgment or decree made or advised by said judge shall be entered as that of the Division or Court to which the suit or proceeding shall have been transferred.

Fifth—Strike out Paragraphs 1, 2, 5 and 8 of Section II of Article VII, and substitute the following paragraphs in place of Paragraphs 1 and 2, and change the numbers of the paragraphs following 5 to correspond:

1. The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, the President Justice of the Law Division, the Chancellor and the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court shall be nominated by the Governor and appointed by him, with the advice and consent of the Senate. They shall not be less than thirty-five years of age and shall have been practicing attorneys in the State for at least ten years. They shall hold office for the term of seven years; shall, at stated times, receive for their services a compensation which shall not be diminished during their term of office, and they shall hold no other office under the Government of the State, or of the United States, and shall not engage in the practice of law during their term of office. The Chancellor and the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, and the Vice Chancellors and Associate Justices of the Supreme Court, in office when this amendment takes effect, shall be Justices of the Supreme Court until the expiration of their respective terms.

The Circuit Court Judges in office when this amendment takes effect shall be continued in office with the powers of the Justices of the Supreme Court at the Circuit until the expiration of their respective terms. They may hold the County Courts, subject to assignment by the Law Division of the Supreme Court.

2. The Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall appoint one Judge of the County Court in each county, and such additional County Judge or Judges in any county as may be authorized by law. The County Judges may hold court in any county subject to the control of the Supreme Court. The County Judges shall not be less than thirty years of age, and shall have been practicing attorneys in this State for at least five years. They shall hold office for the term of five years; shall at stated times receive for their services such compensation, which shall not be diminished during their term of office, as the Legislature in its discretion shall fix for each county, and they shall hold no other office under the Government of the State or of the United States, and shall not engage in practice of the law in the courts of the county where they hold court during their term of office. The judges of the Common Pleas, in office when this amendment takes effect shall be the judges of the County Courts until the expiration of their present terms.

3. This amendment shall take effect on the first Monday in February, in the year next following its adoption by the people.

4. The Legislature shall pass all laws necessary to carry into effect the provisions of the constitution and this amendment thereof.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY.

Be It Resolved (the Senate concurring), That the following amendment to the constitution of this State be and the same is hereby proposed, and when the same shall be agreed to by a majority of the members elected to the Senate and House of Assembly the said amendment shall be entered on their journals, with the ayes and nayes taken thereon, and referred to the Legislature next to be chosen, and published for three months prior to the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November next, in at least one newspaper of each county, to be designated by the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Assembly and the Secretary of State:

Amend by striking out paragraph seven, section four, article four, and insert in place thereof the following:

7. Members of the Senate shall receive, annually, the sum of one thousand dollars, and members of the General Assembly shall receive, annually, the sum of ten hundred dollars during the time for which they shall have been elected and while they shall hold their office, and no other allowance or emolument, directly or indirectly, for any purpose whatever. The President of the Senate, and the Speaker of the General Assembly shall, in virtue of their offices, receive an additional compensation, equal to one-third of their allowance as members.

CHAPTER X.

WHO IS SHE?

If Reporter Thomas had been previously curious about the identity of the fugitive from the North household, this curiosity had suddenly intensified into acute anxiety, now that he had discovered the nature of her mission to the water side. Rather than she should escape him at this moment he would willingly forfeit a month's salary. He felt the keen excitement of the man who finds himself on the verge of a momentous discovery.

Thrusting the pistol into his pocket, he hastened to assume his clothing, and, at the top of his speed, made up the road in the direction the woman had gone. He reached the Phillips Beach station, only to find it black and deserted. There was the solitary figure of a man crossing the open space near by. Thomas hastened to accost him.

"Has the last train gone, sir?" he inquired.

"Train!" echoed the man. "There is no train from here to-night. The train leaves from Swampscott station at 9:26. It's not a great way down the track, but I'm afraid it's too late," he added, looking at his watch.

A sudden thought came like an inspiration to the reporter.

"You didn't see a woman running down that track a moment or two ago, did you?"

"Why, yes," returned the man, evidently struck with the coincidence. "I did. She asked me the very same question you did, and started off in chase for the train, but it was a good ten minutes ago. The fact was, the whole thing struck me as so peculiar that I went after her a bit, but somehow she gave me the slip. I must say I never saw a woman who could get over the ground so fast."

Thomas waited to hear no more, but was off like an arrow down the dangerously dark road bed.

It was a fruitless chase. Entirely out of breath, he reached the Swampscott station just in time to see the doors closed. A man bearing a lantern eyed him curiously as he came upon the platform.

"Last train's gone," he said, curtly.

"I know," said Mr. Thomas. "It's rather hard luck that of mine to-night. Fate's against me, sure. I had a mishap—a ducking, as you see; and what with one thing and another, I have been balked every way. I wouldn't care, only that a lady was to meet me here and go to Boston with me in the train."

"Lady with a veil and long cloak?"

"Yes."

"She went on in the train without you, my friend. Sorry for you, but there's once chance yet. You may catch that horse car into Boston, by way of Lynn, if you hurry."

Mr. Thomas was perfectly aware of this fact, but he thanked the man with the lantern very gratefully and set out on a run for the corner indicated.

The car was passing just as he arrived, and Thomas went with it as it rattled its slow way into Boston—a slowness that was magnified a hundred fold by the reporter's keen impatience. He was anxious to examine the weapon of which he had so strangely become possessed, but he did not consider it prudent to do so until he was free from observation. The opportunity arrived at last under an electric light, in a quiet street in the city.

"Caliber?" he mentally commented. "Thirty-two! I thought as much. The old-fashioned four-barreled pepper-box of a kind in use before the war. Ah! Sharp's patent, 1859. Probably a reminiscence of North's younger days. Breech-loading, too. There's no aim to the thing at long range; but it's a deadly weapon in a hand-to-hand conflict. And it contains at present? Let's see. How do you get the confounded thing open? Ah! by this little button above the trigger. So, so. Three full cartridges and one empty shell. The smut of the powder is still upon the muzzle. Recently fired, and not yet cleaned! Why, what fool could have taken so little pains to conceal a guilty fact?"

He hastily thrust the pistol from sight and drew a long breath. A coincidence was out of the question. He no longer doubted the importance of his discovery. Luck—or was it fate?—had strangely favored him.

By this time Mr. Thomas had reached the borders of the district where life is stirring, night as well as day.

It was late, but not so late that the hackmen, always inclined to social propinquity, were not still to be found in their accustomed haunts.

By all the groups gathered in smoky "all night" restaurants, or talking over the merits and demerits of their respective teams, Thomas was welcomed as a friend of long standing.

He took their chaffing about the outward and visible signs of his wetting with characteristic good-humor; and between repartees that brought a broad grin to the faces of his associates, managed to introduce certain terse questions as to the matter in hand.

"Eastern depot? Why, Big Jim had a fare from there to-night. Here, Big Jim, leave off your palaver with the dames at that table a moment and come and see Thomas!"

Obedient to the summons, with ready good-will, Big Jim nodded to the reporter, and was presently seated with him at a conference carried on by both parties in an undertone.

"The fare was a woman, Thomas."

"A woman is what I'm looking for."

"Well, this one was so wrapped up I couldn't make much of her looks; but I will say this, she wasn't old, and she was scared at something or other almost to death."

"Where did you take her, Jim?"

"To the Albany."

"To the Albany!" Thomas' face fell.

"Yes, sir; just there. She said to me in a quick sort of way, like as if frightened at something: 'Hackman, won't you please take this money and buy me a ticket for Hartford?' To be sure I would and did, old man. The woman was all of a tremble when I put the ticket and the change in her hand. She mumbled out something or other—thank you, I suppose—and ran to the train, although she had 15 minutes to spare; that 11 o'clock express, you know. Something wrong with her, of course?"

"I don't know that, Jim," answered Thomas, cautiously. "I guess she can't be the person I wanted, after all."

The two parted excellent friends, as always. For an hour or more the reporter worked at his desk. Then he curled up in his chair for a nap, impressing upon one of the "night-owls" there on duty to wake him at 4:45 without fail.

When the gong clashed at the Albany station at five the next morning, among the passengers on that early train—well-named "accommodation"—was Mr. Thomas. In one hand he held a copy of the city edition of the morning Globe. The other held a ticket to Hartford.

It was 10:30 before the Charter Oak city was reached. Mr. Thomas' first efforts brought him into contact with the Jehus of the Connecticut capital.

It was not at all a difficult matter to find the whereabouts of the solitary hack driver who waited for a chance passenger on the night trains; but Tom Ludlow was asleep, and the reporter found the time on his hands until noon.

"How are you, sir?" said Ludlow, stretching himself and yawning as he met the inquirer, who had been waiting for his awakening. Both were at the door of the hotel stable. "A lady fare? Yes. She's safe enough. Friend of yours—relative?"

Mr. Thomas thereupon set forth, with much earnestness, that he had missed the young woman through an unavoidable accident, that they were going to a friend in Hartford, and that he had been much disturbed over the fact that she had been obliged to make the journey at night alone.

"Naturally," he said, in closing, "I am anxious enough about her. She's a timid girl; too young to be out alone like this. But I couldn't help it. I hope you bestowed her safely somewhere. At her friend's, I suppose?"

The coachman flicked a fly off the post near which he was standing with great accuracy.

"You are wrong there. Her friends were out of town. The girl did not know what to do; cried and took on. Course I felt sorry for her, and I drove her to the hotel. Knowing the night clerk, I just said a word in his ear that the lady was all right, and he gave her a room. Curious, though, why she'd wrap herself up so! I didn't get a peek at her face at all."

"She's not been well at all recently. Fact is, the journey was partly taken on account of her health," answered the reporter. "But I am greatly indebted to you for the kindness you have shown her under these unfortunate circumstances. Here's a two-dollar bill to prove it. Take it, man; it's all right. And now where is the lady?"

"In the house, yonder," returned Ludlow, pointing with his whip. "I registered her name as 'Miss Brown, Boston.' The clerk will find out for you whether she is up yet."

The City hotel register bore the name, and the clerk listened with professional courtesy to Mr. Thomas' statement of the case.

"We've not seen her yet," he said. "Very likely, however, she may be up and dressed by this time. I will send up your card if you wish. Front!"

Mr. Thomas, taking a blank card from the pigeon-hole, wrote hurriedly the following name, which a bell boy soon carried to room X:

"Mr. William C. Waterston."

"Whoever she may be, she will be frightened, I suppose, at reading this elaborate name," Thomas thought. "But I must see her at all hazards."

In a moment the boy had returned, bearing the card in his hand.

"I knocked two or three times, sir, pretty loud, but couldn't make anyone answer," he said. "There wasn't a sound in the room that I could hear."

The sudden look of alarm on Thomas' face was not lost upon the clerk. He glanced at the clock, and noted that the hands pointed at half-past 12.

"Tell the chambermaid of the floor to open the room," he said.

While the order was being carried out, Thomas stood motionless at the desk, the prey of a vague apprehension.

It was the chambermaid herself who came to the office with the key of room X in her hand.

"There's no one in the room," she declared, with eagerness. "The bed has not been slept in, and the woman must have stolen away during the night."

Mr. Thomas looked blankly into the clerk's face. A very slight lifting of the shoulders was the only comment of that functionary.

The reporter caught its meaning. "The poor girl must be out of her head, and is wandering about somewhere," he said. "Permit me to pay the bill for her lodging." The clerk bowed. "Should she chance to return while I am away," he added, "you will detain her, I am sure, courteously, but firmly. How unfortunate! How very unfortunate!"

"It is barely possible that the lady may have been frightened away, if she was in a state of nervous prostration as you intimate," remarked the clerk, more cordial in manner now that the little account for the night's lodging had been settled. "But, upon my word, I cannot understand why. There were only five or six other guests on the floor, and they were quiet people, all of them."

Once more Mr. Thomas betook himself to the neighborhood of the stable and was fortunate enough to find Ludlow there, making ready for his accustomed call at the railway depot.

"Who were in the office when you left the young lady last night?" he asked. "Can you recollect?"

Ludlow pondered a moment.

"Let me see. The night clerk. The night porter."

"Of course. Anybody else?"

"Why, yes. Stern was there—Officer Stern. A policeman, you know. Merely having a friendly chat with the clerk."

"Do you think the lady noticed him?"

"May be so—may be. Anyhow, Stern noticed her. We all did. How could we help it? Muffled up, nervous, hurrying off to her room."

Quite certain that in this unexpected apparition of a policeman he had found the cause of the disappearance of the fugitive, Thomas set out once more on his search.

The first trace of what might perchance prove to be the fugitive was found, half an hour later, at a little restaurant much frequented by early marketmen not far from the waterside.

"Yes, a woman like you describe came here about four o'clock this morning," answered to Thomas' inquiries, the old man who kept the place. "She took a cup of coffee and a sandwich and asked me the road to Windsor Locks. A very pleasant-spoken female. She thanked me kindly through her veil when I showed her. I told her she had better sit down and rests awhile; that the streets and roads were no place for a woman at that hour. Then, if you'll believe it, she started up and ran away. She took that street yonder toward East Hartford bridge. I had half a mind to call after her that she was going the wrong way if she wanted to get to Windsor Locks, but she was out of sight before a cat could wink, and I couldn't leave the shop. Out of her head, you tell me? Poor creetur!"

The street which the reporter now followed led directly to the river and the bridge separating the busy capital from the quiet village of East Hartford.

A sudden thought as he approached the stream sent a chill to his heart. He stopped at the boat house to ask if anybody had been seen to pass during the night, but no watch had been kept. After most perplexing uncertainty for several moments, Thomas decided to cross the river and seek for developments in the little town beyond.

A milk wagon was jogging on to the accompaniment of jingling cans, as Thomas turned into the broad main street. It halted at a pleasant farm house not far from the river.

"Just back from the city?" asked Thomas of the pleasant-looking man, with sun-tanned, hairy face, as he laid the reins over the back of his well-fed bay.

"Yes, sir. It takes a goodish while to make my rounds."

"Pardon my question, but it is one of great interest and importance to me. When did you set out?"

"A little after four."

"And did you chance to meet a woman, all wrapped up in a cloak, on your way over?"

"Ah!" answered the milkman, interested at once. "I told Jim there was something queer about her. Yes, I did see her, and stopped her, too, just about where you are standing, sir."

"The poor woman is not responsible for what she is doing," said Thomas. "I am searching for her now."

Thomas nodded.

"Well, sir, she is as quick a traveler afoot as I ever see, man or woman; and goodness only knows where she has got to by this time. It was so uncommon to see such a figure that I took a pretty close note of her hurrying along from the bridge, and I put myself right in the way all of a sudden on purpose. She gave a little frightened scream, and put out her hand to me appealing like. It was as white a hand as I ever see, sir; she's never had any rough work to do, I'll be bound, poor thing!"

Garden Hints.

Spray rose trees with insecticides at once. Prevention is far better than cure where blight is concerned, and insecticide is far more effective now than it will be if used later. Sow wallflower seed for next year's flowering. Then the plants will be strong and sturdy when the first frosts come in the autumn.

BASEBALL.

The Clinton Avenues will play the famous McNulty Brothers' team, of New York, on Crescent Oval, Saturday afternoon. This is considered one of the stella attractions of the season.

The Clinton Avenues have a hard scheduled ahead of them, for in addition to playing McNulty Brothers' team, Saturday, they will meet the Rahway club here Labor Day morning, and Scotch Plains in the fternoon. At the morning game there will be a band concert.

The Scotch Plains team declare that it will be on hand Labor Day afternoon. In case of failure the club will forfeit $25.

Isbell of the White Sox stands further to the rear of the plate than most left handed batsmen.

That was a severe jolt the Clevelands met with in Washington—four defeats in two consecutive days.

Fred Clarke and Fielder Jones do more running in from their positions to advise and direct than all the other captains combined.

The Western teams of the American League won twenty-five games and lost thirty on the trip just ended. The first division teams had hard sledding.

The East Second Street Laurels defeated the East Third Street Giants on the Sycamore avenue grounds this morning by a score of 20 to 17. The winning team made six home runs, while its opponents succeeded in making three complete circuits of the bases on long drives.

GOLF.

Almost immediately following the professional affair amateurs will take possession of the Van Cortlandt links for three days. This tournament, which will begin on Thursday and continue for the remainder of the week, is growing in importance each year, as the winner is generally regarded as the local amateur champion. All bona fide amateurs of greater New York are eligible to compete.

The field this week bids fair to outclass those of former years, for among those who have entered are Findlay S. Douglas, of Nassau, a national and Metropolitan ex-champion; Clifford A. Dunning, the Nassau player, who won the chief trophy in the recent Deal tournament; George T. Brokaw, of the latter club; Channing Floyd, of the New York Golf Club, winner of the Van Cortlandt tournament for the last two years; Robert Douglas, of the Scottish American Golf Club, and a host of others.

A start will be made with an eighteen hole medal play qualification round, the best thirty-two to continue on at the match play. There will also be a cup for the beaten sixteen in the first round. The person with low score in the testing round will receive a medal. This will be the tenth annual tournament. Following is a table of the former winners and runners-up:

Year.	Winner.	Runner-up.
1899.	C. M. Hamilton.	H. E. Brown
1900.	E. J. Johnson.	H. E. Brown
1901.	G. P. Tiffany.	E. J. Slosson
1902.	G. P. Tiffany.	C. P. Walker
1903.	C. P. Walker.	J. B. Garfield
1904.	G. W. Dorland.	J. R. Turner
1905.	George Rowe.	Channing Floyd
1906.	Channing Floyd.	W. Peebles
1907.	Channing Floyd.	F. K. Haugh

The ninth annual championship tournament of the Adirondacks will be held over the links of the Lake Placid Golf Club on September 5, 7 and 8. There will be a qualifying round of eighteen holes on the morning of September 5, and the sixteen best players will continue on at match play. The final round will consist of thirty-six holes. A prize will be given to the person leading the field in the testing round, likewise the winner of the tournament and the runner-up. Entries should be sent to the Golf Committee, Stevens House, Lake Placid, N. Y. In past seasons this tournament, which is open to all amateurs, has proven one of the largest events of its kind in Northern New York. Already a number of well known metropolitan district amateurs have signified their intention of entering.

Although E. W. Congdon, of Glen Ridge, won the chief trophy in the East Jersey Golf League one day tournament at the Colonia Country Club on Saturday, New Brunswick golfers also came in for a share of the spoils. For instance, M. A. Wilson, of New Brunswick, broke the course record in the morning, getting round in 78, and incidentally won the prize for the best gross score in the thirty-six-hole handicap with a total of 164. R. B. Corbin, of the home club, won the handicap, while R. A. Smith, of New Brunswick, got second prize. J. W. Letson, of the same club, won the eighteen-hole handicap in t ehafternoon with 91—19—72.

Mr. and Mrs. William G. Debele, of Somerset street, who are touring in the West, made a trip through Yellowstone Park a few days ago. From the Yellowstone they will go to Portland, Oregon, and Seattle, Washington, and will also spend a day or two in the Canadian Rockies. They will return home in about two weeks.

BARKER LEADING IN BIG GOLF TOURNAMENT

With a fine score of 148, H. H. Barker, of Garden City, who left the amateur ranks only a year ago, had the distinction of leading a high-class field of professional golfers in the first half of the seventy-two hole tournament on the Van Cortlandt Park public links yesterday. The former Yorkshire amateur finished the day two short better than Gilbert Nichols, the far-driving professional from the Tedesco Club, who won this tournament a year ago.

Barker found the short course just to his liking and started off with six consecutive 4s for the hill holes. A 2 at the 110-yard fifteenth hole enabled him to complete the first round in 75. In the afternoon Barker registered another 2 at the seventh, a 160-yard hole, and he went out in a capital 34. A 39 gave him a 73, the best eighteen hole score of the day. Incidentally, it won a special $25 prize for the Garden City man. "Marty" O'Loughlin, of the Plainfield Country Club, who played with Barker, was handicapped with a weak wrist, which he broke several months ago. His card for the day showed an 87 and a 79, for a total of 166, only eighteen strokes behind Barker, considered excellent when it is realized that his wrist bothered him in playing the game. All hands will continue at thirty-six holes today.

Accident Victims Improving.

Earl Huff, the 15-year-old son of Mrs. Helen Huff, of Stebbins place, who was badly hurt when a Fourth street trolley collided with the grocery wagon in which he was riding on West Fourth street yesterday morning, is improving rapidly from his injuries. Dr. Cregar, who is attending the boy, said today that there was no danger from internal injuries. Walter Wilson, son of W. W. Wilson, who owned the rig, is able to be about today, although still suffering from bruises and abrasions. He was driving the wagon at the time of the collision.

Would Not Press Charges.

Because John Kennedy, whose rig James McCauley stole from in front of a Somerset street hotel "just for fun" in April, would not press charges against the man in Justice of the Peace Clark Mundy's court last night, the case was dismissed and McCauley freed. McCauley, who recently completed a sixty day sentence at Elizabeth, for resisting arrest in the spring, was arrested on warrant by Borough Marshal Charles Keller Saturday. McCauley promised to be good and Justice Mundy released him after a lecture.

All Ready to Open Borough Schools.

Every member of the borough Board of Education was present at the regular monthly meeting held last night in the Somerset street school. Bills to the amount of about $1,800 were ordered paid, and the various committees reported progress in their work during the summer. The buildings are now all ready for the reception of the pupils at the opening of school September 15.

STATE NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

Horse thieves raided the stables of Mrs. Abraham S. Hewitt, near Rinwood, on Saturday night, and took another of her thoroughbreds.

A submerged launch was located yesterday in Great Egg Harbor Inlet, near the Ocean City side of the channel, and fears are entertained that by her sinking lives were lost.

The condition of Thomas Mannion, of Golucester, who was injured by a motor last week, was reported by Cooper Hospital physicians to be very much improved yesterday.

More than 500 premiums were distributed to the children at Pitman Borough Sunday at Sunday-school by the Pitman Cottagers' Association for punctual and unbroken attendance.

Falling from a wagon on which he was riding yesterday, twelve-year-old Samuel Dallas, of 1803 Mulford street, Camden, had one of his feet run over and crushed. He was taken to the Homeopathic Hospital.

While William Larson was riding a bicycle carrying a handbag, the bag caught in the wheel and William took a header over the handle bars. His shoulder was dislocated, a finger broken and his head and hands cut up badly.

With about one hundred candidates seeking the few offices to be filled this fall politics is warming up in Gloucester City. A Mayor, assessor, three members of the council, two members of the Board of Education, two constables and an overseer of the poor are to be chosen.

Bursting a blood vessel in one of her legs as she was walking along Kaighn avenue, Camden, yesterday, Mrs. Augusta Hawke, forty-four years old, of 1425 Ferry avenue, fell to the sidewalk. She was very weak from the loss of blood when taken to Cooper Hospital.

E. Volk, of 72 West Thirty-fourth street, Bayonne, picked up a dollar bill in a Newark avenue clothing store in Jersey City on Saturday night. He didn't want it and gave it to Policeman Dundon, the policeman on post. Dundon didn't want it either and turned it over to the desk officer at the city hall station.

A telegram was received by Coroner Fithian, in Camden yesterday, from Mrs. Ella Rogers, of Owing's Mills, Md., in which the woman asked for an accurate description of the man whose body was found in a tomato patch on the Hinchman farm at Pensauken last Monday. It was buried Friday in the potter's field. Mrs. Rogers it is that of her brother George.

For the ruining of a pair of silk stockings and a severe jolt to her dignity, Mrs. Mary Love, of Trenton, Saturday instituted suit for $500 damages against John W. and Robert C. Manning, well known real estate owners. She claims that the covering of a coal hole in front of one of the Manning houses broke as she was walking over it and she was thrown into the coal pit.

Determined to break up the gang of rowdies who make so much disturbance on the last train out of Salem every Saturday night, six policeman were sent down Saturday night and before reaching Woodbury were compelled to use force to quiet the rowdies, three of whom were locked up in the county jail. William Schnell, of Mt. Royal; Raymond Cooper, of Pitman, and Charles Farlaw, of Sewell, were the prisoners. Schnell was released yesterday after paying a fine, but the other two men are still in jail.

As a special trolley car of the Trenton Street Railway Company was passing through Trenton Saturday night, carrying a party of women and children from Cadwalader Park to Princeton, the rope fender at the rear of the car caugt fire from the fuse box. In an instant there was a blaze that shot up as high as the roof of the car, and women and children, screaming with fright, tumbled pellmell from the car. Fortunately the car was moving slowly and no one was seriously injured in the hasty exit. The flames were extinguished by a couple of trolley crews.

RABIES KILL BABY.

Sister, Whom She Bit, Will Be Taken to Pasteur Institute.

Gertrude Homeier, the 17-months old daughter of Gustav Homeier, of Landing street, Trenton, died in the Mercer Hospital yesterday from an aggravated case of hydrophobia, as the result of being bitten by a mad dog while playing in front of her home on July 31 last. Two weeks ago she bit an elder sister, who will be taken to the Pasteur Institute, New York, for treatment. Several other persons were bitten by the dog, but none have developed rabies.

The Homeier child developed hydrophobia Sunday and was taken to the hospital that night. She suffered terrible convulsions until yesterday morning, when she lapsed into a comatose state, which continued until she died.

Patrolman James Saunders, of the local police force, is enjoying his annual vacation.

NEAR DEATH IN FLOOD

TRIED TO FORD A RIVER.

Raging Torrent Sweeps Horses and Wagon Away and Only Timely Assistance Prevents Fatalities.

Plainfielders have read with much interest the accounts in the newspapers of the terrible havoc wrought by floods in the South during last weeks storms but none of them knew until yesterday that a well known boroughite came near being one of the vicitims. He is W. F Williams, of Somerset street, who has just returned from a business trip to Fredericksburg, Va., during which he underwent a hair-raising experience in a river that had been transformed into a raging torrent. He barely escaped with his life and was fully two days in recovering from the ordeal.

Mr. Williams' trip called him to a large stock farm twenty miles from Fredericksburg, reached only by wagon. It was raining when he left the city and by the time he had transacted his business there was a veritable cloudburst. It was necessary for him to return North at once and he insisted on starting back to Fredericksburg despite warnings from the owner of the farm that it would be dangerous as the rig would have to ford rushing streams, bridges being a rarity in that section of the State.

The only conveyance that could be secured was a covered spring wagon used for carrying milk to the Fredersburg creamery and the Plainfielder decided to cast his lot with the driver. They passed through three creeks in safety but at the fourth got across only after a desperate struggle, during which the water was over the body of the vehicle. At the fifth and last ford, they made the attempt to get through despite warnings from people held up by the storm and escaped with their lives by the merest chance.

The horses had barely breasted the rushing waters when the were swept from their feet. To make matters worse, part of the harness was torn from their backs and the outfit began to go down stream. Mr. Williams and the driver were repeatedly immersed from head to foot and held to the wagon only by standing on top of the milk cans and clinging to the top of the vehicle. They would undobutedly have been drowned but for help arriving as men camped on the river bank witnessed their plight and managed to get ropes to them. With their aid in pulling, the horses finally got to the opposite bank and safety.

The exhausted men were taken to a shelter and given treatment but it was fully an hour before they were in anyway recovered. Mr. Williams' overcoat and other belongings were swept away and he was unable to make a change of clothing because of his grip being among them. The men in camp could give him none and he was forced to go on to Fredericksburg in the partially dried raiment. The remainder of the trip was accomplished in a driving rain in a hired buggy and he landed in Plainfield in the same bedraggled garments.

Funeral of Miss Little.

A large number of relatives, friends and neighbors attended the funeral service of Miss Jessie May Little, which was held from the home of the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Little, on Sandford avenue, at 3 o'clock. Rev. E. Vicar Stevenson, rector of Grace church, of which Miss Little was a member, was in charge of the service. There was a great many floral tributes from the host of friends of Miss Little and the family, including wreaths, bouquets and cut flowers. During the service Elmer D. Runyon sang two selections very sweetly, "In the Hour of Trial," and "Sometime We'll Understand." The burial was in Hillside cemetery.

Struck by Falling Brick.

An employe standing at the foot of a forty-five foot tower being constructed at the Metuchen power plan of the Public Service Corporation by Wyman & Haberle, of this city, was struck on the head with a brick yesterday afternoon receiving severe injuries. The brick was accidentally dropped off the top of the chimney by one of the workmen. Mr. Wyman, who was nearby at the time picked the injured man up and brought him to this city in his auto, where the wounds were dressed. The man's home is in Somerville and he was sent there afterward.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Shirley, of College place, returned yesterday after their outing at Naples, Me.

MANY ENTRIES FOR LABOR DAY RACE MEET

The Fair Acres Driving and Riding Club has arranged an attractive card for the race-meet to be held at the driving park, Labor Day afternoon, beginning at 2 o'clock, and as a large number of entries have been received in each class, good sport is promised all lovers of racing. A feature of the afternoon will be a match running race, half-mile, for $200 a side, the horses to carry 125 pound weight. This race will be between Marcus Hoyt's "The Conscript," and Hugh Gormley's "Little Don." Another feature will be a half-mile running race, best two out of three heats, catch weight.

The club has met with great success this season with its race meets and should be supported by those interested in good sport. Every effort is being made to bring the best horses here and make the races close and exciting. The card for Labor Day is as follows:

2:30 Trot.

2:28 Trot and Pace.

Match Running Race—Half-mile.

"The Conscript," Marcus Hoyt; "Little Don," Hugh Gormley.

Running Race—Half-mile.

TYPHOID FEVER CASES ON OUTSKIRTS OF CITY

Several cases of typhoid fever have recently developed in the West End of the city, calling for prompt action on the part of the Board of Health. The source of infection while not definitely determined, is known in all but one or two cases, to be outside of the city. Health Officer Leon R. Thurlow has the cases well in hand, and every effort is being made to prevent a further spread of the disease.

The original case was that of a man who contracted the fever in the vicinity of New York and came here ill with it, but so far as can be learned the other cases cannot be traced to him. As typhoid is not placed in the contagious disease class the Board of Health has not quarantined the local cases, but other known preventatives are being employed and constant search for sources are maintained. In a majority of cases the patients have been seriously ill, but it is believed they will recover. The Board of Health wants it known that typhoid fever is not prevalent in the city, and believes that if the truth could be learned the few cases would be traced almost entirely to outside sources.

Abrams-Bacon Case Dismissed.

Contradictory testimony about a quarrel between Morris Abrams and Mrs. Amanda Bacon at the house Mrs. Bacon rents from him at Fourth and New streets caused City Judge Runyon to delay his decision in the matter at the hearing last week, but today he announced at the session of city court that he had decided to dismiss the complaint. Each party claimed the other had apllied insultuing epithets at the time Abrams called at the house some ten days ago to inform Mrs. Bacon that he had sold the house she was renting from him to trustees of the Shiloh Baptist church. The testimony of Mrs. Ruggles, a colored washerwoman who was at Mrs. Bacon's at the time of the verbal encounter, had much weight with the judge in framing his decision. William G. DeMeza represented Mrs. Bacon and Harry C. Runyon was Abrams' attorney.

County Tax Board Busy.

The Union County Board of Taxation, of which F. H. Andrews, of this city, is a member, has been busily engaged during the past two weeks visiting several cities and towns in the county for the purpose of inspecting real estate and determining true values. Although the total valuation has been determined there is likely to be some changes and the tax rate for the year will probably not be announced before the middle of the month.

REPUBLICANS ARRANGE TO BEGIN ACTIVE CAMPAIGN

Little business of importance was transacted at the September meeting of the Republican City Committee, held last night. Considering the fact that it is still warm weather the attendance was good, but there was no disposition on the part of the members to engage in an animated discussion of the political situation. Everything was reported to be moving along smoothly.

Chairman Winfield S. Angleman was in the chair and at the suggestion of some members a committee was appointed on speakers for mass meetings to be held during the fall. These were appointed: First ward, F. Buckle; Second ward, Frank L. Holt; Third ward, Duncan W. Taylor; Fourth ward, Andrew McCardell. Amos Andrews was named as a committee of one to provide a banner, bearing the portraits of the Presidential and Vice-presidential nominees to be suspended in the business section.

As soon as County Chairman F. H Smith returns home from his summer outing plans will be discussed relative to mass meetings and there is every assurance that a number of prominent political speakers, as well as some of the candidates will be heard here this fall. The city committee plans to wage a spirited campaign not only for the National ticket, but the local, county and State nominees as well.

MILIKEN BROTHERS GRANTED RECEIVERSHIP EXTENSION.

Although the receivership of the Miliiken Brothers, the former Plainfielders' concern, which became involved in financial difficulties, which has now been in force since June, 1907, expired yesterday after one extension, it has been further extended for a month to allow the working out of a plan of reorganization. The receivers' counsel, Suillivan & Cromwell, have drawn up a plan by which the company will start in aagain with increased working capital, and it is said that a large interest in the new company will be taken by an independent steel interes..

On confirmation of this rumor was obtainable at the offices of the receivers yesterday. Since the receivers have been in charge the company has made money notwithstanding the hard times which have fallen upon the steel industry.

August Heckscher, William L. Ward, and J. Van Vechten Olcott, the receivers for Miliken Brothers, applied yesterday to Judge Adams of the United States District Court for leave to continue business until Oct. 1, which was granted. They stated that the cash receipts from June 11, 1907 to August 26, 1908, were $3,749,773, and disbursements were $3,194,667, leaving a balance on hand August 26 of $555,106.

YEAR'S LAST SERVICES AT THE NETHERWOOD CAMP.

Chrisitan Endeavorers from Trinity Reformed church visited the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp last night and were in charge of the open-air meeting in the camp auditorium. About twenty-five members of the church society atended, and the meeting was in charge of W. F. Oliver. The leader took for his subject "Gratitude" and his remarks were practical and inspiring. Prayer was offered by W. R. Kriney. In connection with the service of song by the camp children, Mr. and Mrs. Edward D. Young sang "Thy Will be Done" and "The King of Love My Shepherd Is." Miss May Randolph acted as accompanist. "The Glory Song" was pleasingly rendered as a duett by the Misses Harriet and Anna Randall, who were accompanied by Miss Lucie Coriell.

Hughes Fawcett will be in charge of the service tonight, and tomorrow night the service is to be in charge of members of the First Baptist church, of New Market. Rev. George H. Gardner, the pastor, wil accompany a large delegation from the church.

Snake Bite Kills a Dog.

Mrs. Susan Rockwell, of Washington Valley, lost a valuable black and tan dog yesterday, the result of being bitten by a copperhead snake while running about the mountains Sunday afternoon. The dog, a thoroughbred, was not only a family pet, but was loved by all the children of the neighborhood with whom it was a constant companion.

—For the benefit of housewives who want peaches for canning, Neuman Brothers have secured a big assortment to be shown tomorrow. The lot will be disposed of at $1 per basket.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Squires, of West Eighth street, are the parents of a son, born yesterday. Mrs. Squires was formerly Miss Jean Douglas.

PROBING WILL END SOON

Excise Commission Plans to Complete Labors by End of the Month.

THREE GENERAL MEETINGS.

Local Option, Temperance and Liquor People Will Be Given an Opportunity to Present Their Views.

The State Excise Commission will ends its labors in the latter part of September with three general meetings, where an expression of opinion will be had from all persons interested in any side of the liquor question. In the coming week the mayor and corporation attorneys of every city in the state will receive a letter from the commission asking them to attend a meeting in the Assembly Chamber at Trenton on September 28. No sworn testimony will be taken at this meeting, the idea being to have those who are present take part in a general discussion, setting forth what they think to be the views of the citizens of their respective communities on the excise question.

September 29 will be given over to the temperance and local option people. Letters have already been sent to Bishop Lines, of the Episcopal church; Bishop O'Connor and Bishop McFaul, of the Roman Catholic church, and the heads of the Presbyterian, Methodist and other denominations in the state, asking them to inform the clergymen under them that if they have any suggestions to make regarding the liquor traffic the commission will be glad to hear them on that date. If necessary the meeting on September 29 will be carried over until the next day.

A day or two after the latter hearing the saloon men, brewers and distillers will be given the floor and asked to give their ideas on the liquor traffic. At none of these hearings will sworn testimony be taken, it being the idea of the commission to have the discussion full and free, so that the commission may get at the facts of the case, which they expect to aid them in making their recommendations.

The commissioners are familiar with conditions in every section of the State. As a matter of fact, before going to a city to hold a hearing, the commissioners knew just what testimony they would bring out regarding conditions. One more hearing will be held in the northern part of the state, that at Dover on September 10.

HUNGRY, STOLE TOMATOES; GETS TWENTY DAYS

William Totten, who claims he has been out of work and decidedly shy of meals for several weeks past, stole several cans of tomatoes from a freight car near the freight house yesterday, and was nabbed by Roundsman Maurice Higgins on complaint of the railroad authorities last night. Judge Runyon sentenced him to twenty days in the county jail.

Totten, whose father is one of the stone carters on the Washington Valley road job, told the Judge that he had been out of work for more than a month, and had eaten nothing since Sunday night. He said that he was driven to desperation by hunger and took the tomatoes for food.

Asked if he had ever been arrested before, Totten said that he had served ninety days at Somerville for stealing a pair of horse blankets belonging to W. J. Conroy, of the borough. He took the blankets from the harness shop, "to get square" with Conroy, for "firing" him. He also told the Judge that he had served a sentence at New Brunswick.

Druggists Elect Officers.

The annual meeting of the Plainfield Druggists' Association was held at the Y. M. C. A. yesterday afternoon, when reports for the year were presented and these officers were elected: President, Jasper Cadmus; vice-president, Peter B. Hodge; secretary and treasurer, B. J. Schreiner T. S. Armstrong was chosen as the representative of the association to attend the annual convention of the National Druggists' Association to be held in Atlantic City two weeks hence, and B. J. Schreiner was elected as the alternative representative

Mayor Townsend Home.

Mayor Samuel Townsend, of North Plainfield, returned today from his summer vacation spent in the Adirondacks, and has once more taken up the reins of borough government.

Parents of Twins.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Schenck, of Regent street, are the parents of a fine pair of healthy twin sons, born yesterday morning.

SEASON'S FUND FOR BABY CAMPS TOTALS TO $244.76

During the summer months, $244.76 has been received at The Daily Press office in donations to the two summer camps for children doing such an excellent work among the poor and needy in providing the young folks with summer vacations. Of this money, $203.88 has been subscribed to the fund started in the columns of The Daily Press for the King's Daughters' Baby Camp on Johnson's Drive, and the balance, $40.88, is for the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp fund. The King's Daughters' Camp is a local charity, and the city's poor and sick are given a few weeks' vacation sojourn on the mountain's crest by the City Union of King's Daughters. At Netherwood, Miss Sara Curry, a worker among the poor of the tenement-house district in New York city, has a camp for the little New Yorkers.

The King's Daughters' Camp closed last Saturday and during the months it was open 1,080 children and 283 mothers from city and borough were given vacation outings. These figures, secured from Mrs. Frank Jones, chairman of the camp committee, show a big increase in the work this year over last, when 200 more children were given outings. The money contributed to the cause through this paper will be turned over to the Camp officers immediately. Mrs. Jones, in speaking to a Daily Press reporter today, said that the accommodations at the Camp were fully taxed during the entire summer and that the camp was at present inefficient for the work on the scope planned for the adequate assistance of the local poor. "The year has been an especially hard one for the poor," she said, "and there have been many cases of sickness and need brought to our attention. As far as possible these have been accommodated at the Camp."

The Netherwood Fresh Air Camp closes Labor Day, and some of the children have already been taken back to the city. There have been on an average 300 children and several mothers at the camp all summer, and each delegation has remained at the camp about two weks.

YOUTHFUL CYCLIST CAUGHT VIOLATING LIGHT ORDINANCE.

James Neal, a cycle club member, who is in the habit of riding his wheel nights, was haled before City Judge Runyon at the city court today charged with violating the local ordinance by riding without a light on East Sixth street last night. he arrest was made by Patrolman Thomas Flatley, who told the Judge that he had warned the lad on a previous occasion about the ordinance, which is still enforced although the biking craze has died out.

The officer said that when he told Neal, who was riding with another cyclist, to light up, he jeered at him as they rode away. Neal denied this, but acknowledged that his friend, whom he knows only as "Percy," had coughed after the pair left the officer. Judge Runyon told the prisoner that he must remember policemen were not to be scoffed at in the discharge of their duty, and dismissed the case.

Pleasure Trip to Boynton.

A party of Plainfielders and several out-of-town guests enjoyed an automobile trip to Boynton Beach, yesterday afternoon, making the journey in Thompson's auto-bus. At the beach some of the party enjoyed the excellent clam chowder served there, while others spent the time tripping the light fantastic and in other ways that were afforded by the management. Those in the party were Miss Etta S. Raybert, Mrs. Geo. Mantz, Mrs. Peter Neuman, Mrs. A. C. Hall, Mrs. W. A. Woodruff, Mrs. A. L. Force, Miss Lillian A. Force, Miss Mary Seed, Miss Mary Robinson, of this city; Mrs. Robert French, of Westfield; Mrs. J. B. Dovell and daughter, Miss Marion Dovell, of Newark; Mrs. William Egbert, of Brooklyn, and Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Colthar.

An Approaching Wedding.

Mrs. Emma L. Baldwin, of Dunellen, has issued invitations for the wedding of her daughter, Miss Emma Edna Baldwin, to Frederick Burgess Tallamy, of West Front street The ceremony will take place in the Dunellen Presbyterian church, Wednesday evening, September 16, at 7 o'clock. A reception will follow at the home of the bride's mother on North avenue.

Secretary Parker Back.

General Secretary Herbert E. Parker, of the Y. M. C. A., resumed his duties at th eassociation today after a month's vacation. He returned home last night with his wife and daughter, who have been sojourning at Binghamton, N. Y. Mr. Parker has been at a conference of the Religious Work Directors' Institution at Silver Bay for the past two weeks.

HUDSPETH MAY RUN BRYAN'S FIGHT IN EAST

W. J. Bryan's campaign in the east may be under the personal direction of ex-Judge Robert S. Hudspeth, chairman of the New Jersey Democratic committee. He has the appointment under advisement. This information comes from Colonel John A. Tomlinson, member of the Democratic national committee from Alabama, who was in Jersey City yesterday to call on Mr. Hudspeth "Bob" Davis has unbounded faith in Hudspeth.

Mr. Bryan is to visit Jersey City on September 15 to confer with the party leaders in New Jersey. He will reach Jersey City early in the morning, when the conferences will be held.

National Chairman Mack was in conference last night with Mr. Hudspeth, Senator Culberson, Colonel Johnson, of Tennessee; John W. Tomlinson, Josephus Daniels and James B. Kerr. He told a reporter that it would be two or three days before he announced the name of the chairman of the eastern committee.

"Oregon will declare for Bryan by a substantial majority," declared Samuel White, presidential elector from that State, who was a visitor yesterday at Democratic headquarters, at the Hoffman House. "The normal Republicans majority of 30,000 will be wiped out at the November election. The Republican party is torn by dissension.

"The failure of the Republican party to restrict Japanese immigration will also militate against their success, not only in Oregon, but in all the Pacific coast States, where the Jap is regarded as a greater menace than the Chinese.

"Mr. Bryan will carry not only Oregon, but also Nevada, Montana, Colorado, California and Utah."

CLINTON AVENUES TO PLAY M'NULTY BROS'. TEAM

The Clinton Avenues will have for their opponents on Crescent Oval, Saturday afternoon, the strong McNulty Bros.' team, of New York, comprised chiefly of minor league players, and it will give the locals a severe test of their strength. The game will be called at 3:30 o'clock and there is every indication that the biggest crowd of the season will be at the Oval.

The lineup of the visitors will be as follows:

A. Fancher, 1b, formerly of Richmond, S. I.; W. Masterson, 2b, formerly of the Hudson River League; Derrosier, 3b, formerly of Brooklyn F. C.; McGrath, ss, formerly Hudson River League; W. Clarke, lf, of the North Shore League; P. Earle, cf, of Seattle, Wash.; D. Collins, rf, of the All-Nationals; Seamon, c, of the Ontarios; McKenna or Harrigan, p. McKenna was formerly of the Eastern League and Harrigan of the Connecticut League.

The Clinton Avenues will lineup as follows:

McNulty Bros." team has won sixteen of the eighteen games played this season, defeating Carsey's Union team, Inwoods, Waldens, of Walden, N. Y., Cedarhurst, Parkville, Marlborough, Woodsides, Harlem A. A., and other equally strong clubs.

Nine Principals for Eight Schools.

Charles J. Baxter, formerly of this city, State Superintendent of Schools, has informed the Orange Board of Education that its appointment of Edwin S. Brady as a principal is legal and that he may look to the city to be paid his salary. In consequence of this opinion the city has nine principals for the eight schools. Whether the services of a principal are or are not needed, the superintendent says, is a matter which the law leaves to the discretion of the school board.

Not Our John.

John Taylor, rag-time specialty artist and member of the Hunterdon county Prohibition party's official quartet, breaks into print today to announce that the John Taylor who figured in a city court case, yesterday, was a visitor from Newark. The Plainfield John has a clean record for law and order and the similarity in names has caused him much inconvenience in responding to inquiries from friends as to where and how he secured the $10 to pay the fine imposed.

Fishing Trip to Princess Bay.

John J. Kenney and Dr. Charles R. Thiers spent yesterday fishing at Princess Bay. They brought back a big catch of lafayettes. The trip was made in Mr. Kenney's automobile.

WOLVERTON FOUND GUILTY

But City Judge Runyon Will Reserve Sentence Until October 6.

COUNCIL TO HEAR FACTS.

Industrial Home Manager Declared to Be in the Wrong in Treatment of 90-Year-Old S. S. Vermeule.

Declaring that Arthur Wolverton, manager of the Industrial Home, is guilty of assaulting 90-year-old S. S. Vermeule, an inmate of the Home and handling him with unnecessary roughness at the Home Aug. 1, City Judge William N. Runyon announced at the city court today that he would not pass sentence until Tuesday, October 6. In the meantime, the magistrate stated he will lay the entire matter before the Common Council and allow it to be further threshed out at the session of the city fathers next Tuesday night.

The testimony of City Physician C. B. Lufburrow, who was in conversation with S. S. Vermeule at his regular visit to the Home the Monday after the alleged assault on the old man by the manager was received at today's hearing. The physician said that Mr. Vermeule began talking about the affair as soon as the doctor entered his room, saying "These outrages have got to stop." Dr. Lufburrow inquired what he meant and was told that Manager Wolverton had beaten the man. He said that he was shocked to hear of any such cruel treatment to a man of Mr. Veremule's years, and stated that he would look into the matter.

Leaving the room, the doctor met the manager in the hall and the two went back to Mr. Vermeule. Mr. Wolverton told his story of the incident, denying any assault or roughness. Appealed to by the doctor, Mr. Vermeule would not deny the manager's statements, but said he was going to consult a lawyer about the matter. Dr. Lufburrow said he examined the old man and found that, aside from an abrasion on the knuckle of his right hand, he was not bruised or injured.

S. S. Swackhamer, retained as counsel by Mr. Vermeule, is out of town, and was not present at either yesterday's or today's hearing. Frank Vermeule, nephew of the old man, spoke up from the "gallery" just before William G. DeMeza started to sum up the case for the manager. He asked Judge Runyon to swear him as a witness, declaring that he could testify as to the condition of Mr. Vermeule who was taken to his home soon after the accident. He said that his aged uncle is afraid to go back to the Home. Judge Runyon decided that the testimony would not be pertinent, and Mr. Vermeule, replying "All right, I'll shut up," turned and left the court-room.

In summing up the case, Mr. DeMeza claimed that the manager would have no reason for any attack upon the old man, as charged, and hinted that dissatisfaction on the part of the inmates of the Home was the only reason for the complaint. He emphasized the fact that Mr. Vermeule was not touched until, as Mr. Wolverton declared in his testimony, he refused to go when spoken to.

The question of the manager's actual rights as a resident at the Industrial Home was the subject of much discussion by those present at the hearing. Mr. Wolverton claims that, apart from the fact that he is paid a salary by the city, that he has the use of six rooms in the front of the building and gets board for himself and wife at the city's expense, that he has the rights of a private citizen to the front part of the house, and that inmates of the home are not supposed to come around to the front of the house at all.

Frank Vermeule stated today that warrants for perjury will be sworn out by S. S. Vermeule against Manager and Mrs. Wolverton, whose testimony was received in connection with the hearing of the case yesterday.

Funeral of J. D. Davis.

Rev. Ora J. Shoop, pastor of Grace M. E. church, officiated at the funeral of John D. Davis, held at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Henry Sanders, of Prospect avenue, Dunellen this morning at 9:30 o'clock. Following the service, which was touchingly simple, the body was taken to Mr. Davis' former home at Wilmington, Del., where the interment will be made in Riverside Cemetery.

STATE NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

The West Jersey Presbytery will hold its fall session in the Elmer Presbyterian church Tuesday and Wednesday, September 15 and 16.

Last week's heavy storms having prevented the annual reunion of the Hurff family, at Pitman, it will be held next Saturday.

A. Laricks, of Vineland, was badly bitten by a vicious dog Sunday, and has appealed to the borough recorder to have the animal killed.

Truckers of Salem county are elated to hear that a company is to be formed to operate a line of freight steamers between Philadelphia and Atlantic City.

A carrier pigeon, branded U. S. 1027, entered the house of Charles O'Daniels, in Lambertville, yesterday afternoon. It was fatigued, evidently after a long journey.

Elmer Horner, six years old, of Bridgeboro, while climbing into a wagon, put his foot on the spoke of the revolving wheel and was thrown to the ground with a broken leg.

Lost somewhere in Atlantic City during the heavy storm last Thursday night, Samuel W. Haines, seventy-two years old, of 118 North Pennsylvania avenue, that place, is still missing from his home.

Daniel White, of Wenonah, after catching a pike that weighed two and one-half pounds, dropped it while washing it in an old well. He recaptured the fish, but only after bailing most of the water out of the well.

H. D. Stowe, assistant supervisor of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Bordentown, has been transferred to the Susquehanna division of the Northern Central Railroad, and Assistant Supervisor Donald C. Baird, from West Brownsville, Pa., will take his place.

John S. Lodge, owner of Rambo a horse that is well known all over South Jersey, was thrown from his sulky in a race at Swedsboro and had his right leg broken. He was taken to the Cooper Hospital, Camden, and report says that he may lose his leg.

Three children are in a dying condition in the Cooper Hospital, Camden, as the result of eating jimson weed. They are Pauline Vista, six years old; Lewis Vista, five years old, and Antonette Stethon, three years old, all of 1909 Howell street.

John A. Hickman, otherwise "Lone Bill," rifle shot and handcuff manipulator, who was arrested on a robbery charge after his performance at Mt. Holly last Saturday night, was yesterday held under $500 bail for trial by Justice of the Peace Magee, at Bordentown.

Adolph Sharp, aged seventy years, and his wife, who were so brutally beaten in their home at Vineland last week and robbed of $11, have become so nervous that they can talk of nothing else. They are afraid of every sound, and neighbors going there at night are in danger of being shot.

The carcass of the seventy-foot whale which was towed upon Champagne Island, Hereford Inlet, is attracting attention from North Wildwood and Stone Harbor. Summer visitors are going over to view the remains of the great mammal. It is so far decayed, however, as to make the visit anything but pleasant.

The Camden Board of Education last night increased the salary of Albert Austermuhl, assistant to the secretary, to $1,000 a year. The salaries of the several school janitors and the watchman and firemen of the high school also were increased $50 a year. The Camden Playground Association was directed to vacate the use of school yards by Monday next.

Thrown headlong from the top of an uncompleted stack at the new High School building on Pacific avenue, Atlantic City, by the collapse of a scaffold, three bricklayers narrowly escaped death yesterday. Two of the men, George Thomas and Jesse escaped with slight bruises, while the third, George Robinson, was badly injured, and had to be taken to the City Hospital.

McNulty Bros.' team which will play the Clinton Avenues on Crescent Oval Saturday afternoon, is rated as one of the best semi-professional clubs in the Metropolitan district and a fine contest is expected. Randolph will have to extend himself to the limit to win.

Rahway will be here Labor Day morning with its regular team and the Clinton Avenues will have no cinch in scoring a victory. A brass band will be on hand to enliven the occasion.

The fans are anxiously looking forward to Labor Day afternoon when Scotch Plains will visit Crescent Oval and play the Clinton Avenues. There is no doubt but that the Plains will strengthen up for the occasion by engaging a strong pitcher, while the locals will play their regular lineup. It is a way outside teams have of "loading" when they meet the Clinton Avenues.

It is possible that Bound Brook may be seen on Crescent Oval before the season is over. They are playing such fast ball that Manager Dorflinger would like to schedule them for a game.

The New York fans have been criticising Hal. Chase because he has failed to cover eight additional positions besides his own.

One run in eighteen innings is the record of the Yankees in the double-header with Philadelphia on Monday. That's going some.

Pittsburg scored the only run of a game with Brooklyn last Saturday a week after a battle of seventeen innings.

Weigand, of Reading, equaled the Tri-State record, held by Cree, of Williamsport, by making five hits out of five times at bat in a game last Friday.

Only twenty-seven batsmen faced Pitcher Jackson in a recent game between Altoona and Reading, which Reading won by a score of 7 to 0. Only ont hit was made off of Jackson.

GOLF.

The events at the Park Golf Club on Labor Day will include play for the Holiday cup, men's handicap competition, eighteen holes, medal play; morning and afternoon; approaching and putting contest, mixed doubles open to members and their guests; to start at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. There will also be social events at the clubhouse to attract members and friends.

Heveral special events will be the attraction at the Plainfield Country Club Labor Day, at which time the Fall handicap play will be resumed. It will be similar to the Spring handicap which was so popular with the members. Social features at the clubhouse, dinner-dances, etc., will prove attractive.

There is no doubt but that "Marty" O'Loughlin is considerably handicapped over the injury to his wrist as a result of an accident in the South last winter. This was shown in his work in the professional tournament at VanCortlandt Park, New York, Monday. Yet he put up a good score, all things considered.

There were fourteen entries in the women's handicap golf tournament Monday on the links of the Waumbek Golf Club, Jefferson, N. H. Mrs. C. C. Adsit received the prize for the best net score.

Holiday features are scheduled for the Westfield Golf Club on Monday, when there will be special events on the course and social functions at the clubhouse.

Already the homeward tide is setting in and within the next week a majority of Plainfielders who have been away from the city, will have returned for the fall and winter. Their return will be marked by an increased attendance at the local golf club.

The usual weekly dinner dance will be held at the Plainfield Country Club Saturday night.

GOVERNOR FINDS CASH FOR OCEAN BOULEVARD.

Plans for the dinner to be tendered Governor John Franklin Fort at the West End Cottages, Long Branch, on Thursday evening by property owners of the Jersey coast are complete.

Since the announcement that the Governor desired laying before the prominent residents of the section his ideas for the construction of an ocean front boulevard from Atlantic Highlands to Cape May, little else has been discussed at social gatherings in Long Branch and other nearby resorts.

Interests centres about the manner in which Governor Fort proposes to finance the scheme. It is understood that he has prepared an elaborate analysis of the project and that in his speech he will make every phase of it clear to his hearers. Engineering difficulties that have blocked previous movements with the same object in view, it is said, have been resolved by State officials working under the Governor's supervision. The surprise of the evening, according to those who are in the confidence of Mr. Fort, will be the clearing away of the money problem. It is stated that he will show the State is in a position to begin the work immediately. Accumulation of receipts from automobile licenses and fines is said to have furnished the necessary preliminary sum.

Members of the committee which has the dinner in charge are Jefferson Seligman, chairman, and Messrs. Joseph J. O'Donohue, Jr., eWlling G. Sickles, W. E. D. Stokes, Frank B. Conover, C. D. Halsey, Austin Colgate and Judge Wilbur A. Heisley.

EDITOR RILED BY HIS DAUGHTER'S ELOPEMENT.

The gist of the article, which was headed "Obituary," is that the father has lost a daughter, not gained a son-in-law, and that an explanation has been forced upon him by "carrion-loving gossips." The writer says the young man was permitted to come and go at will until he shamefully abused the hospitality extended to him, profaned the home in which he had been received and proved "such a low-down cur and utter blackguard" that he was forbidden the premises. Other references of a harsher nature were made.

The friends of the young couple here are highly indignant, and over a hundred men and women built a bonfire outside Bernardsville Inn last night, where the pair were dining, and cheered them to the echo. They will reside for the present with William Ludlow, brother-in-law of Compton. The latter has decided to ignore Trumbull's article.

$5,000 a Week For Lauder.

London, Sept. 2.—Harry Lauder has just signed a contract for an American engagement at the highest salary ever earned by a vaudeville artist, $5,000 a week. Lauder will sail on the Lusitania Oct. 3, to open in New York at the American Theatre Oct. 12. He will stay in the United States for a season of twenty weeks on the William Morris circuit.

BALLOONISTS IN PERIL.

Ville de Dieppe Barely Dodges Niagara Rapids.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Sept. 2.—Fearing a storm on Lake Ontario, the crew on the racing balloon Ville de Dieppe tried to descend at Niagara Falls yesterday. The rip cord failed to work properly, resulting in a poor landing. The three men in the basket got a bad shaking up, and narrowly escaped death in the Whirlpool Rapids. Captain A. F. Mueller, in charge of the balloon, suffered the most. He was taken to a hospital and may be internally injured. With Captain Mueller were Perry Gregory, sixteen years old, and Gerald Gregory, eighteen years old, sons of C. F. Gregory, of Chicago, secretary of the American Federation of Aerial Clubs.

The Ville de Dieppe left Columbus, Ohio, at 8:30 o'clock Monday night. The journey through the air was uneventful until 9 o'clock yesterday morning, when the airship ran into troublesome air currents on Lake Erie and dropped to within 250 feet of the lake's surface. Ballast was thrown out and the big bag shot up to 8,000 feet. It was young Gregory's first trip, and he became very ill in the high altitude.

When the balloon was above Niagara Falls it was practically without ballast, and was dipping dangerously close to the ground. A storm was blowing up, and Captain Mueller decided to make a landing. He tried to release the gas with the rip cord, but it failed to work properly, with the result that the bag, with a capacity of 87,000 feet, dragged along for 1,000 feet. An anchor was thrown out. It caught in a clump of trees and snapped from the balloon, which rose and fell alternately, severely jolting the occupants of the car.

The basket dragged over railroad tracks, struck a barn and finally landed at the Devil's Hole, 200 feet from the Gorge. Two of Gerald Gregory's teeth were knocked out, and his head was cut. Perry Gregory was unconscious when taken from the basket. His left ankle was sprained and his body bruised.

BOY HELD PRISONER BENEATH OUTLET GATE.

Netcong, Sept. 2.—Held fast by the feet beenath an outlet gate under twelve feet of water in Musconetcong Lake, six-year-old Frank Hammell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hammell, of this place, was rescued from death in a remarkable manner yesterday afternoon.

The boy with a number of companions, was playing along the banks of the lake near the canal bridge. The bank slope is very steep at that point, and when the child stumbled over the side his companions could not prevent his rolling with speed into the water.

He fell into a strong whirlpool, which was formed above the outlet gates used to release the water into the Musconetcong River. At the time the gates were raised about four inches, and the suction drew young Hammell to the bottom almost immediately. One of his feet was sucked into the gate opening twelve feet under the water.

When he disappeared his companions ran screaming in several directions. A number of men were attracted to the spot, among them being James Powers, superintendent of this section of the Morris Canal. He has charge of the overflow gates from the lake, which is also used as a canal feeder. Divining at once what had happened, Mr. Powers directed one man to station himself along the river bank under the bridge to watch for the imprisoned boy's body when it should float down.

Then, with the assistance of other men, the outlet gates were slowly raised until there was space enough for young Hammell's body to sweep through with the heavy current.

The boy swept through into the river like a cannon ball, his head coming in contact with several stones on the way with such force that he was badly cut about the scalp. The watcher along the river bank espied the unconscious body, and after much exertion managed to secure it. Six minutes had elapsed from the time the boy disappeared until he was placed on shore, and there were few signs of life when the rescuers began systematic treatment.

In a few minutes animation was restored and the boy taken to his home. He is still in a serious condition from the blows he received on the head from the stones of the river bed.

YOUNG MAN TRIES SUICIDE.

Said He Committed Murder in Newark Before Jumping.

As the Central Railroad ferryboat Bound Brook which left Jersey City at 3:50 p. m. yesterday, was nearing the slip, foot of Liberty street, on the New York side, a young man, who had been pacing nervously up and down the upper deck, climbed over the guard rail and threw himself into the river. Joseph Gallagher, a deckhand, went into the water after the man and succeeded, with the aid of other deckhands, in rescuing the would-be suicide. Upon the arrival of the boat at the slip the man was turned over to a policeman, who took him to the Church street station. There he described himself as Joseph Chanda, 21 years old, a cigarmaker, of 370 East Seventieth street, Manhattan. Subsequently he was removed to a hospital.

Last night Joseph Howe, a resident of Jersey City, who was a passenger on the ferryboat, called at the Communipaw avenue station and told Sergeant Booth that before the man jumped into the river he heard him mutter to himself that he had committed a murder in Newark. The Jersey City police communicated this information to the Newark and New York police.

FOUR FLUSHED IN GEOGRAPHY.

But Boy Did Better When Court Asked Him About Poker.

Daniel Moran, fifteen years old, and Nathan Hertzberger, seventeen, were arrested by Patrolman Taczkowski, of the Elizabeth street station, New York, yesterday charged with playing cards in front of the Hall of Records. They were arraigned in the Tombs Court.

"How do you play your game?" inquired Magistrate Walsh.

"You have five cards each," said one of the boys, "and when you get a pair of jacks you can open it."

"Oh, then, you were playing poker. Where is the capital of the United States?"

"Washington," replied Moran.

"Where is the capital of the State of New York?"

"I guess it's City Hall," Hertzberg answered.

The magistrate discharged them with a reprimand and told them to study geography, not poker.

BARBER DROPS DEAD.

Customer He was Shaving Turns in Fire Alarm.

Thomas J. Ulrich, while shaving a customer in his barber shop at 47 Newark street, Hoboken, yesterday dropped dead beside his chair. When the man who was being shaved saw what had happened he rushed excitedly from the shop and turned in a fire alarm, then called a policeman and sent a call for an ambulance. The ambulance, reserves and six fire engines arrived at the same time, creating an uproar in the district.

The dead man was 47 years old and had conducted the barber shop on Newark street for fifteen years. He was single. His razor was on his customer's face when he toppled over, dying instantly. Heart disease was the cause.

MOTHER SAVES CHILDREN.

Carries Them Across Five-foot Well Over Ironing Board.

Mrs. Maggie Marshall, of Passaic, saved her five small children in a fire this morning by carrying them across a narrow ironing board to a building adjoining. She and her little ones were caught on the second floor where they lived. She smashed a window in her rooms and another in the apartments of James Strunk. The firemen promptly provided for her. The building was three stories high and was owned by Barnet Cohn. The windows are opposite and five feet apart.

After she had gotten them to safety she crossed and then collapsed.

Spanish War Veterans in Boston.

Boston, Sept. 2.—Over three thousand veterans of the Spanish War were gathered in this city last night for the formal opening today of their fifth annual encampment. The chief affair preliminary to the opening of the encampment today was the banquet tendered by the State branch at the Quincy House last night to Walter S. Hale, of this city, the commander in chief. There are two active candidates to succeed Commander Hale—Captain Charles A. Simmons, of Rochester, and Captain Charles W. Newton, of Hartford, Conn.—each of whom opened headquarters today. For the next convention city Tacoma, Wash., has already started a movement, while Oklahoma City and Saratoga delegations have announced that their respective cities are in line for next year's honors, as soon as the convention is regularly under way.

Hurled by Train; Dies Soon.

George Motso, a Hungarian trackwalker for the Jersey Central, was fatally injured Monday night on the Jersey Central at Elizabethport. He tried to get out of the way of a train and stepped in front of an express going in the opposite direction. One of his legs was cut off and the other broken in three places. He died half an hour after being taken to the Alexian Hospital. He was forty years old, married and boarded at 139 Clark place, Elizabethport. He leaves a widow and four children living in Hungary. The body was removed to Stiner's morgue.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The local ball team will make things interesting for the Rahway F. C. at the game Saturday afternoon at Rahway. Warry McLaughlin will pitch for the Plains team and if the present plans are carried out Warry will do the box work for the locals for the balance of the season. This is all the Plains team need to put them on their feet, the team has been playing good ball but has been unable to secure a regular pitcher.

Henry Alberts, who has been catching for the local ball team for several seasons, has signed with the Cadaret team for Sunday games. Henry played his first game Saturday and besides putting up his usual good game behind the bat, lined out a two-base hit the first time up, scoring two men on the hit.

The Registry Board started a house to house canvass yesterday for the purpose of lining up the votes for the elections in November. It is thought that the registry this year will show a natural increase.

Mrs. C. Finney and daughter, Miss Dorothy Finney, of New York city, and Mrs. J. Brennen, Mrs. C. Heiland and Miss L. Trouton, of Jersey City, are spending two weeks at the home of Mrs. C. Latimer.

Miss Louise Meyer is ill at her home with appendicitis. Drs. Westcott and Hedges are in charge. An effort is being made to scatter the disease for the present.

Mr. and Mrs. John B. Stillger and children, of Brooklyn, have been visiting Mr. Stillger's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Stillger, of Front street.

Mrs. George Harper, of Front street, entertained relatives from Bound Brook yesterday.

Fanwood B. and E. Co. holds its regular monthly meeting tonight in the company's rooms.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Everything is now in readiness for the opening of the public schools next Tuesday. Minor repairs have been made during the summer vacation and the enrollment wil undoubtedly be a large one when the pupils assemble in their places the day after Labor Day.

Under the auspices of the Y. P. S. C. E. of the First Presbyterian church, a peach and ice cream festival will be held Friday evening at the chapel. The proceeds of the affair will be devoted to the work of the society.

The board of registry will meet tomorrow and will at once commence their house to house canvass of the borough voters. The principal business at the meeting will be the organization of the board.

Thomas McGuire, who went South with his wife a short time ago, is now engaged in the drug business at Southern Pines, North Carolina.

Miss Alice Spence, of New York, has returned home after a visit with Mrs. Robert L. Pierce, of Dunellen.

Henry Smalley is visiting friends in Iowa.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Mrs. Ida Harris started yesterday in her automobile on a trip to Asbury Park, but when she was about five miles on the road, the machine skidded as it was turning a corner, and put one of the back wheels out of commission. Mrs. Harris was obliged to forego her trip and the machine is now in the hands of the Plainfield auto doctors.

A mysterious and unknown gipsy queen, who is said to have come from Babylon, will tell fortunes at the Marconnier carnival on Thursday.

Melville Brown has returned to Brooklyn after a short stay in the village with his cousin, Phil Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kellogg will remove from Edgebrooke during this month to Park avenue, Plainfield.

The regular services will be resumed at the Baptist church on Sunday.

WRIT OF ERROR FOR HERRON.

Counsel for Murderer Will Apply to Chancellor.

Judge C. T. Cowenhoven, of New Brunswick, counsel for Archibald Herron, who is in the death chamber at Trenton, under sentence to die next week, is preparing a writ of error and will apply to the Chancellor this week for a review of the conviction of the man. This will act as a stay of execution.

The lawyer believes that the man's conduct since he has been at Trenton upholds the insanity theory which he advanced at the trial. Herron has been writing letters to President Roosevelt, Justice Bergen, who tried him, and others, denouncing those who proceeded against him. He acts as if he expected to be released next week. He does not seem to realize that he is to be executed. Herron shot and killed the Rev. Samuel B. D. Prickett at Metuchen.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Sampson, of East Fifth street, have returned from a sojourn at Asbury Park.

LOCAL W.C.T.U. WORKERS TO TALK AT CONVENTION

The twenty-fourth annual convention of the Union County W. C. T. U., will be held in St. Paul's M. E. church, Cranford, Thursday, September 17. The county officers are as follows: President, Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, Plainfield; corresponding secretary, Mrs. M. L. Rarick, Dunellen; recording secretary, Mrs. T. C. Bodine, Plainfield; treasurer, Mrs. Mary T. Cox, Cranford; honorary vice-presidents, Mrs. Scriven-Stoddard, Elizabeth, and Miss Julia A. Barker, Rahway.

Three sessions, morning, afternoon and evening, will be held, commencing at 10 o'clock in the morning. At the first session there will be the roll call, recording secretary; greeting from Union, pastors of churches; response, Mrs. E. C. Dutcher, of Dunellen; appointment of committees, president's address, annual reports of credential committee and recording secretary, election of officers and delegates to the National convention at Denver.

Following the noontide prayer and luncheon, the executive and resolution committees and superintendents will hold executive sessions. The program for the afternoon beginning at 2 o'clock will be as follows:

Department of Organization—L. T. L. secretary, Mrs. Edythe Currie, Cranford; work among foreigners, Mrs. L. Ussing, Cranford. Preventive—Medical Temperance, Mrs. A. F. Schmidt, Elizabeth. The feature of the evening session will be an address by Rev. Staley F. Davis, of Elizabeth, on "The Modern Demetrius."

INCENDIARY ATTEMPT TO DESTROY GARAGE.

As Charles Simpson, of Westfield, was on his way home yesterday morning shortly after midnight he saw a man enter the hallway of the building on the ground floor of which is located G. S. Bird's garage, and drop something on the floor. He pursued the man, but lost track of him. On returning to the garage he found a slight fire in the hallway. Fred Spencer and his wife and three children and James Brown and his wife and three children live in the upper floors of the building. The fire department was called out and the blaze was extinguished without much difficulty. There was little damage.

No clue has been found by the police to the person who made the attempt at incendiarism.

Sunday School Committee.

The forty-ninth annual convention of the Somerset County Sunday School Association will be held in the Presbyterian church at Bound Brook, on Wednesday, September 9. Sessions will be at 10 a. m. and 2 p. m. The principal speakers will be J. Woodbridge Barnes, of Newark, the State Elementary Worker; Rev. E. Morris Ferguson, the State Secretary, from Newark, and Edward W. Dunham, of Trenton. Rev. Dr. R. W. Gowen, of Weehawken, will deliver the annual address. The subject will be "Religious Education, the Message of the Hour."

Rubber Firm Burned Out.

The plant of the Standard Shoe Manufacturing Company, one of the largest industries of Mount Holly, was destroyed by a fire, which is believed to have been of incendiary origin, early yesterday morning. One hundred and fifty employes are thrown out of work. The firm's loss has not been estimated, but officials say it will be heavy.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Alice Clarke, who plays "Wanda" the Indian girl in "Montana," is considered as one of the best exponents of Indian parts on the stage today. For three years Miss Clarke was a teacher in the Indian College. Miss Clarke has been playing Indian characters for the past five years. "Montana" will be the offering at the New Plainfield Theatre tonight.

Al H. Wilson, known as the Golden-voiced singer and ambassador of German dialect, will be seen at the New Plainfield Theatre tomorrow night in "When Old New York was Dutch," his latest triumph, from the pen of Sidney R. Ellis, the eminent playwright. Mr. Wilson is blessed as are few actors with a happy combination of talents. He would be a success either as an actor or singer did he have but the one accomplishment. His title of "Golden-voiced is not a misnomer, for he has a quality of voice which makes even the simplest of songs pleasing to the ear. His histronic ability is just as pronounced. In his serious moments he has a funny little break in his voice which is full of suggested tears and pathos, and he can carry on from the verge of tears to laughter, with as much skill as any of the great comedians. Among Mr. Wilson's new songs for this season are "Helen," "Songs of the Camp," "Auf Wiedersehn Fraulein" and "The Old Chimney Corner."

All the scenes of "The Three of Us," are enlivened and made convincingly true by close attention to the little things of every existence. This use of detail is enforced by the employment of dialogue that is simple and human and utterly devoid of heroics. The speech at all times in periods of the play is spontaneous and natural. This play is in fact dressed in dialogue of a rare and beautiful true kind. The speeches are all fitted to the occasion and appear not to have been written at all. The dialogue is the fine and great quality of the play. Miss Janet Waldorf in the role of Rhy Macchesney is delightful and all through the play is as true to nature as the dramatist will possibly allow. Miss Waldorf's last appearance here was in the "Eternal City." "The Tree of us" comes to the New Plainfield Theatre Friday night.

"Lola from Berlin" is a big-hearted German girl who has travelled alone from Berlin to establish her claim as heir to a wealthy relative deceased in America. She has made the journey as the result of an advertisement placed in the papers by a corporation lawyer. The simultaneous placing of an advertisement for a cook by the lawyer's wife, causes the resultant confusion regarding the purpose of Lola's call, and the complications make the story. Corinne, who scored a big hit in George M. Cohan's "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," will present this Lola at the New Plainfield Theatre Saturday afternoon and night supported by a strong cast and a big beauty chorus.

Corinne in "Lola from Berlin," at New Plainfield Theatre, Saturday, Sept. 5, matinee and night.

"A Message from Mars" has a wonderful effect on the audience. It brings the happiest expressions about the eyes and mouths of the watchers makes them eager to applaud and to be agreeable. An excellent cast will present it at the New Plainfield Theatre on Labor Day afternoon and night.

Fort Appoints State Editor.

William Cloke, of Trenton, New Jersey editor of the New York Sunday Herald, was appointed commissioner of public reports yesterday by Governor Fort. Mr. Cloke immediately tendered his resignation as a member of the riparian board. The position of commissioner of public reports was created by the legislature of 1908, and his duty will be to edit the reports of the various departments in order to eliminate superflous matter that has been running the cost of printing too high to suit the legislators. The salary is $2,000 a year.

Peter C. Sweeney and Frank Rimmer have returned from Asbury Park, where they spent their vacation.

CRYING FOR HELP.

Lots of it in Plainfield But Daily Growing Less.

The kidneys cry for help.
Not an organ in the whole body so delicately constructed.
Not one so important to health.
The kidneys are the filters of the blood.
When they fail the blood becomes foul and poisonous.
There can be no health where there is poisoned blood.
Backache is one of the first indications of kidney trouble.
It is the kidneys' cry for help. Heed it.
Doan's Kidney Pills are what is wanted.
Are just what overworked kidneys need.
They strengthen and invigorate the kidneys; help them to do their work; never fail to cure any case of kidney disease.
Read the proof from a Plainfield citizen.

Mrs. M. Newman, 532 West Fifth street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "Violent headaches and a constant pain in my limbs were the principal symptoms of my kidney trouble. When I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, I procered a box at Randolph's Pharmacy and soon after I began taking them, the pains in my head and limbs disappeared. I heartily endorse this splendid preparation."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

QUALITY and PRICE

The two vital questions in your piano purchase are, first, quality; second, price. An unsatisfactory piano, in tone and action, is the most annoying article you can have in your home. You dislike to be expending money on it continually to keep it in playing condition.

A LITTLE TALK ABOUT THE GLOVES.

By our gloves are we known.

Gloves are a very important factor of every costume, because it is unavoidable that they should be in plain view all the time. Many a pretty dress has been ruined by the gloves worn with it, all because the wearer did not know the etiquette as it were, of glove wearing.

If a few simple rules are learned the rest comes easily. In the first place, colored gloves should be eschewed, the term colored meaning gloves of pink, blue, green and reddish tints.

Red-brown is allowable, especially in winter; brown and black and gray are always good, white is seldom out of place, and this year yellowish and pinkish yellow gloves are considered stylish. There is no occasion and no time when it is strictly good form and good taste to wear gloves of any color save those mentioned.

If the dress is in a dark shade—green, navy blue, crimson—wear black, dark gray or brown gloves on all ordinary occasions; if the dress is in white or some light color, wear white or yellow gloves.

Brown gloves are good for all tailored suits, but they are no considered dressy unless the whole costume be of the same shade.

White gloves are always proper and absolutely necessary with full dress except on rare occasions, when the costume is all black.

Black gloves are good style, but rather somber for evening dress. It is not good taste to wear black gloves with white or very light dresses, particularly in summer.

Yellowish and pinkish yellow gloves are much worn, but only with colored dresses, and not in the evening. Of course, white dresses demand white gloves.

Gray gloves at the moment are not much in favor, but when they are worn they usually accompany black tailored suits or gray costumes, either tailored or dressy.

Not only must the color be correct and appropriate, but the material must be also be taken into consideration.

Silk and cotton gloves are at no time dressy. If they are worn it should be in the morning with a gingham dress or linen suit. They are allowable on a shopping tour; for calling nothing less than chamois is proper. Silk and cotton gloves should be chosen only in white, black or tan.

Chamois gloves are rather informal, though they are cool for summer. Besides that they may be washed at home. They come only in two shades, the natural and the white, and the former is more popular this year. Chamois gloves are worn with strictly tailored suits, whether of cloth or linen, morning frocks or pongees.

Suede gloves may be worn at any time except for full dress. In summer they may even serve for dressy occasions, as they are so much cooler than glace.

Glace kid gloves are imperative for full dress except in very hot weather and may be worn with almost any costume. Glace kid is expensive, but it wears and cleans well.

CROCHET BOB FRINGES ARE POPULAR NOW.

Accorded an important place in the decorative detail of the self-colored zephyr or fine linen frock is the crochet bob fringe, buttons and braiding.

A very pale mauve zephyr, the shade of a delicate iris that almost verges on gray, was quite simply fashioned, the blouse bodice ornamented down centre front with a wide graduated box pleat, defined at either edge by a small white crochet fringe, while down the back of the long rather close-fitting leg-of-mutton sleeve there ran a line of the same fringe, considerably more important in point of size. And this gown is one of hundreds it is now deemed necessary to conclude with turn-down lawn and lace collar and cuffs.

Already there are many subterfuges in force for arriving at a becoming aspect with this exposed throat, the length, thickness and general appearance of which regulates the whole construction. Not unfrequently a quite appreciable band lurks beneath the turned-down confection, the expert modiste declining to recognize at present any laws in this connection. Obviously the chief concern is to render it acceptable in the eyes of the elegant, who nowadays realize to a nicety their possibilities and limitations.

What Mother Wanted.

The twins were being congratulated upon the arrival of a small brother when the neighbor inquired, "Well, how did you boys like the baby?" "Oh," answered Howard nonchalantly, "we thought it was all right, but mamma would rather have had an automobile."

WRITTEN IN RED

By

CHAS. HOWARD MONTAGUE AND C. W. DYAR

(Copyright, by The Cassell Publishing Co.)

"'I'm not meaning you any harm,' I says to her, while Jim, like an idiot, stood staring at her over the gate with his mouth open. 'But for a young woman like you to be racing along mad-like at this hour of the night, it isn't exactly the right thing, is it, miss? I put it to you frankly, you know.' She clasped her hands despairingly, and said: 'You don't know! You can't know! Do not try to stop me, for mercy's sake!' But I see the poor thing was well-nigh fagged out, and I just took her arm and walked her into the kitchen, where my good woman stood quite dumfounded. 'Sit you down there,' I says, putting her into a chair at the table. Breakfast hadn't been cleared away, as good luck would have it. 'Wife,' says I, 'give the girl as good a warm meal as you've got. Now you must eat and drink; you must make out a good breakfast,' I says, shaking my head at the girl, 'or I shan't let you go. If you don't want us to look at you, all right; we'll keep away. But whatever your errand, you need strength to carry it out.'"

Thomas was listening with impatient eagerness, but he could not forbear a word of sincere thanks.

"Don't mention it," said the farmer. "Who could 'a done different? Well, to make a long story short, I watched her eat, but I must say a canary bird might have made out a bigger breakfast than did this frightened, trembling creature. We begged her to stay and rest, wife and I, but she wouldn't hear of it; and, after thanking us both like a lady, she set out Burnside way, and Jim and I went over t' the city. Poor girl! Out of her head? Well, well, tell you what: better get a team somewhere. She's far ahead, you know."

No better advice could be offered or followed. In a few moments Thomas was driving the fastest horse the village livery stable afforded, and clouds of reddish dust marked his rapid progress eastward.

He heard of the fugitive twice.

Once she had stopped to drink at a wayside well, and a group of children had watched her as she rested a moment and then went on, closely cloaked and veiled, though the morning was sultry.

Once she had stopped at a farmer's door for a glass of milk—for a sick traveler in the road above, she had said, in hurried explanation—bringing the glass back after a moment with faintly-spoken yet earnest thanks.

As his horse slackened his pace just as a difficult sandy hill was being surmounted, Thomas' glance, taking in the broad expanse of landscape, brilliant under the rays of the westering sun, caught sight of a solitary woman's figure on a slope to the left.

SHE FELL FAINTING AND WORN IN HIS ARMS.

The roads crossed just at the summit of the hill; and, urging his horse to the utmost, Thomas soon came within view of the figure again, this time not far away.

Did the unknown journeyer have some premonition that she was pursued? It would seem so, for she started like a hunted creature as the sound of rapidly-rolling wheels drew nearer, and ran into the thick wood that skirted one side of the road as if in desperate search of refuge.

Thomas leaped from his carriage and was at her side in an instant. His touch on her shoulder seemed to paralyze all power of motion.

She gave a stifled cry. The long cloak, already tangled in the thicket, fell to her feet. With a last vain effort to go on, she staggered and reeled.

As she fell, fainting and worn, in his arms, the veil that had concealed her features for so many a weary hour became freed from its fastenings and drifted away.

"Good heavens!" Thomas almost gave way himself in the shock of discovery and the following revulsion of feeling.

"Stella North!"

CHAPTER XI.

IN DANGER.

Reporter Thomas had no time to construct theories to account for what had happened. For whatever reason, Stella North was the woman he had unwittingly followed, and Stella North was the woman who now lay in his arms, as devoid of life, to all appearances, as the twigs upon which her dainty feet were dragging. He looked into her face for the moment with helpless irresolution. The dictates of common humanity would have impelled him to pity her, but it was no ordinary pity that filled his soul on this occasion. He had been aware ever since the day she flashed upon him that appealing glance as her sister was leading her from the room at Swampscott, of a peculiar interest more romantic and tender, perhaps, than he as a matter-of-fact man was free to admit to himself.

But the present emergency demanded prompt action. He could see plainly enough that it was not merely fright that had caused her to lose consciousness. Nature had bestowed upon her a face charming in its natural roundness of outline and ready always to break into dimpled smiles; but, alas! horror and deprivation of sleep and food had wrought a wicked change in a few days.

As she lay with her head thrown back, her lips parted, her eyes closed, her hair strayed recklessly about her temples, she looked as if she had just died after a painful illness. Thomas hastened with her out of the sight of possible curiosity. A few steps brought him deep enough into a protecting wood that fringed the roadside, and here, in the leaves beneath the trees where the birds were singing, he laid her gently down. His experience in the art of restoring fainting women to consciousness had been extremely limited, but he believed in the efficaciousness of alcohol, and always carried when traveling for use in an emergency a flask of brandy. A little of this strong remedy poured down her throat half strangled the victim, but it awoke her. Her eyes opened and she regarded him languidly. He had seen a dying bird look just that way.

"Come, Miss North, you feel better now, don't you?" he said, awkwardly, as he supported her head upon his arm. And when a sudden betrayal of fear and shame surged into her white cheeks he hastened to add: "There now, there's nothing to be afraid of. Not the least in the world."

She made an effort to disengage herself and to arise, but she was very weak, and she only sank back again with a pathetic sigh. The tears came into her eyes at once, and she was unable to conceal her weakness or to check it. Faster and faster they chased each other down her cheeks. Her face was wet with them.

"Come, Miss North," he murmured, "this will never do. You must not give way like this. Don't despair. If there is anything wrong, you may depend upon me to help you all I can."

"Oh, it's not I who need the help," she moaned, quite light-headed by reason of her long sufferings; and, grasping his sleeve with her little hand, she exclaimed with sudden, passionate intensity: "Oh, don't let them arrest her. Don't let them hang her. Marion never could have done it in her right mind. She was out of her head, you know. You are sure she was, are you not?"

This unexpected entreaty was a surprise, but it was a most welcome one to Thomas. He had not had an opportunity for deliberate thought since he had recognized who it was that had thrown away the compromising weapon with the suspicious smudge upon it, and fled from the North villa in the most damaging of circumstances; but in a vague, general way, his heart had been conscious of the weight of the accepted theory that she was in some way implicated in the dark work of the tragedy. And now these wild, hysterical words, delivered under the pressure of her overstrung emotions, gave him more than a hope that she was innocent of any part in the hideous crime.

He smoothed her hair. He wiped away her tears. He induced her to take a little more of the brandy. By repeatedly assuring her that her sister was in no danger, and afterwards by turning her attention to other things, he brought her once more into a condition of sanity. She was not permitted to test her strength upon her feet, but she sat up against a tree, and began to regard her companion with great, round, wistful eyes, with an air of mingled timidity and impulsive confidence.

"And now, Miss North," said Thomas at last, "it is absolutely necessary that I should leave you for a few minutes. Will you promise me not to stir until I return? I will be gone just as short a time as possible."

"You are so kind," she said, faintly. "If it is for me you are going, I hope, really, you won't trouble yourself. In a few minutes I shall be stronger and can go on."

"We'll talk about that after I come back," he said, cheerfully. "And meantime I have your promise not to stir?"

"Since you are so good, I can refuse you nothing," she returned, wearily, and closed her eyes.

Thomas was off at an energetic pace. He first tied his horse to a tree, and then ran on to the nearest farm house. A well-to-do-looking woman, with a sunny face, appeared at the door in answer to his knock.

"Madam," said Thomas, hastily, "I have to apologize for my unexpected call, but the fact is, I am in great need of food—the best you have and plenty of it. I'll pay—anything. Only let me have it at once."

"But I can't," said the woman; "I haven't a thing in the house to eat!"

"But I must have something," exclaimed Thomas; "if it's nothing but milk and water. The case is very urgent. Here, do what you can for me."

He thrust a five-dollar bill into the good woman's hand. She thrust it back promptly.

"Here, I don't want your money," she said, rather stiffly. "Such as I have you're welcome to. Come in."

She led the astonished Thomas into an ample pantry, which was in a condition of neatness that was almost painful. But it needed no power of divination to determine that it was the pride of the good woman's life, and the shelves fairly groaned with good things. Thomas was dumb with delighted amazement.

"Well," said the housewife, evidently enjoying the condition of stupefaction to which she had reduced him, "do you see anything you'd like? If so, you are welcome."

"The—the fact is," stammered Thomas, "I wish you'd let me pay for it. I—I—you see, I might carry away a little more than I'd like to; for the fact is I've got a friend just back here in the woods, and she—he's starving to death."

The woman laughed outright. Of coure, she did not believe that anybody was dying for the want of food in this land of plenty. The best Thomas could do was to effect a compromise. The woman accepted "a dollar for the heathen." Thomas took away all he could well carry.

As the reporter approached the place where he had left Stella North, he began to have some fears that she had deserted him in spite of her promise; but, no. There she was, still sitting against the tree, as he had left her. No, not as he had left her. Completely exhausted, she had fallen asleep.

Thomas placed his bundles upon the ground and softly arranged the repast he had secured from the farm house upon a light robe he had taken from the carriage. From the bowl of fresh milk to the golden-brown custard pie it was genuine and wholesome; and though he would fain have had Young's chief cook at his command for an hour or two, still he hoped that she could not fail to find the display attractive and appetizing.

But he hesitated to wake her. The poor child slept as only one utterly worn out can sleep. He looked at her more attentively, and his heart accelerated its pulsations.

"What a pity," he thought, "that she should be so compromisingly mixed up in such an affair as this! Young and charming as she is, if the police knew what I know they would not hesitate a minute to arrest her."

The thought clouded his breast. He looked at his watch. It was getting late. Unless he proposed to turn her over to the police, in truth, time pressed.

"Ahem!" he exclaimed. "Miss North!"

But her sleep was too deep to be disturbed by such an expedient. He placed his hand gently upon her shoulder, and a thrill ran through him at the contact. She started up and stared wildly about her. Gradually the truth came to her. She awoke from a happy oblivion to the horror of the past few days. The sudden frightened look in her face proclaimed this fact. And then her eyes wandered from the reporter's face to the collation spread at her feet.

"For me!" she exclaimed. "Oh!—"

But nothing but tears bespoke her thanks. She was evidently ashamed to betray herself so; but she was too weak to prevent it. She covered her face with her hands and sank down at the foot of the tree.

"You think me foolish, I know," she stammered.

"Not a bit of it," said Thomas. "I think your nerves are quite unstrung, because you haven't taken nourishment enough. Eat something, Miss North, I beg of you; and, my word for it, you'll feel better."

By dint of much persuasion and adroit management he reassured her, so that she actually smiled the very ghost of a smile, but it betrayed the presence of a merry dimple in her cheek, which Thomas thought quite charming.

"How can I thank you?" she murmured.

"By eating all you can," he returned.

And she did endeavor to show her gratitude in that way. From time to time she looked at him with a glance of dread and apprehension.

"You are not afraid of me, Miss North, I hope?" he said at last, pleasantly. He was smiling now, as he sat on a rock near by watching her eat, which she did with that ravenous appetite that comes of absolute starvation.

"Excuse me," she said, after an evident effort, "but you are the same gentleman who called at our house—who used to know my father?"

Thomas flushed a little and his eyes fell.

"Miss North," he said, "I don't intend to deceive you. I am a newspaper reporter."

She uttered a slight scream and dropped her knife and fork into her plate. At another time Thomas would most certainly have laughed aloud at the unmistakable consternation produced by the announcement of his profession. As it was, he repressed his tendency to smile when he saw her lips whiten under the cruel apprehension that had sprung to life within her.

"You mistrust me, Miss North," he said, gravely.

"Oh, no," she returned, in a voice barely audible. And added immediately: "For pity's sake, sir, do you intend to print what I told you when I was so crazy awhile ago?"

"Do I, Miss North? It depends upon whether or not you go on with your dinner."

"Oh, how can you joke about a thing like this?"

"Miss North, I am not joking. I never was more serious in my life. It is absolutely imperative that you eat."

The poor girl tried to propitiate him by swallowing a few hasty mouthfuls, but it was evident that he had taken her appetite away. She regarded him with a look of pathetic appeal.

"Oh, sir," she exclaimed, suddenly, "I am only a poor girl, and chance has placed me completely at your mercy. Don't torment me, I beseech you. Tell me the worst at once. What do you intend to do with me?"

"To save you," answered Thomas.

"To save me?" she repeated, helplessly. "From what?"

"From the consequences of your conduct."

"Mine!" she exclaimed. "What do you mean? I have done nothing."

"Pardon me," said Thomas. "You forget the pistol which you threw away and your flight from home."

She stared at him for a long time like a statue.

"And you believe—" she began at last, with an awful look in her face.

"I believe nothing," he interrupted, "so much as I believe you, Miss North. It is not a question of me, but of the police."

"The police!" she stammered.

"Miss North," said Thomas, "I would not frighten you needlessly, but I feel compelled to tell you that you have placed yourself, in the eyes of the law, in a very equivocal position. Unless you can give a full explanation of your conduct—"

"Oh, sir," she broke in, "I can tell the police nothing—absolutely nothing."

She wrung her hands and looked about her apprehensively.

"It's not because I am guilty of anything—oh, sir, you know that! But I cannot say what I have thought, what I have been compelled to believe in spite of myself. I have said things to you already when I did not realize what I was doing which I never meant to have repeated to any human being. And you—on your honor, sir!—won't you keep my secret?"

"I will do everything I can for your sister, for your sake," said Thomas. "But I must ask you one question. What reason had you to believe her guilty?"

"I do not believe it. No, I will not acknowledge that I ever really believed it. But for one moment when her strange actions seemed unaccountable upon any other supposition, I—but it was a mistake, sir. I am sure of it. She could explain everything if she would."

"There, there!" said Thomas, soothingly. "Don't get excited. You are as safe with me as you could possibly be with anyone. I simply wanted to have the assurance from your lips that you are unaware of the fact of any crime."

"Oh, believe me, sir."

"I do, Miss North. I believe you implicitly, and I will do everything in my power to help you."

"You are very noble, sir."

"You flatter me," said Thomas, averting his eyes. "I have sisters of my own, and—"

The girl clasped her hands.

"And for their sakes—"

"No, for your sake," said Thomas, turning quickly to look toward the road.

"You spoke of that dreadful pistol, sir!" she cried, suddenly. "Tell me how you know!"

"I saw you, Miss North."

"And the pistol is—"

"In my pocket."

She stretched out her hands impulsively, while a wild light of hope lighted in her face.

"Give it to me," she exclaimed.

"Forgive me," said Thomas, "but I must refuse you that. Believe me, it pains me to be obliged to refuse you anything."

"You won't give it to me," she faltered. "And what, then, do you propose to do with it?"

"I will be frank with you now as ever, Miss North," he said, in a low voice. "I intend to give it to the police."

She swayed, but his arm prevented her from falling.

"Come, come!" he exclaimed, in a quick whisper, as for the moment he held her close to his rapidly-beating heart. "Be a woman! Do your duty as I shall do mine! I have promised you my protection—my utmost effort on behalf of yourself and your sister. Miss North, will you trust me?"

Impulsively she brought her face very near to his and turned the light of her blue eyes full into his dark ones. It was an intense, fearful, searching stare; a look such as one might cast into the future at a fork in the road of life between lasting happiness and despair. His gaze never faltered, but hers did. She blushed and suddenly became self-conscious, and precipitately looked down at the ground.

"I will," she murmured, faintly.

"You are in imminent danger," he said, hastily. "There is no time to lose. Follow me."

And as he turned from her she obeyed him with the trusting confidence of a little child.

CHAPTER XII.

THOMAS DECLINES TO STATE THEORIES

About ten o'clock on Monday morning a telephonic message came over the wires from the chief of police at Lynn to the Boston police headquarters which seriously interfered with the habitual imperturbability of Inspector Applebee.

"Whatever does this signify?" he demanded of the chief inspector. "That youngest North girl has disappeared."

"No!" exclaimed his superior, in a tone of surprise. "How could that be?"

"I don't know how it can be; it is," Applebee declared. "She left the house some time last evening. They did not discover her absence till this morning. A hurried search of the neighborhood traces her to the railroad station, where she took the last train for Boston."

"That's a queer family, anyhow," commented the chief inspector, with a very puzzled air. "Applebee, have you tried to ascertain whether there isn't insanity in the blood?"

"Plague take it! What was I thinking of not to have put a man to watch her last night? I thought of it, but it seemed an absurd precaution!" fumed the inspector. "However, her flight the minute the funeral is over does away with any lingering doubt I may have had of her complicity in the crime."

"Better put White on her track at once. Then see me and let us have a word or two."

Inspector White having been dispatched to the Eastern depot with instructions to find the fugitive at any cost, Inspector Applebee returned to the private office of his superior. The chief carefully closed the door.

"Applebee," he said, as he resumed his chair, "if I understand you definitely, there is nobody, so far as known, who benefits a cent by North's death except his daughter Stella?"

"Exactly, inspector. You are to understand just that. There is not the slightest indication of robbery or theft. Both the property in the house and the personal property on North's person were intact. Nobody benefits but this girl. Just two months ago he took out a $10,000 policy in her favor."

"Applebee," said the chief, "I begin to realize that we are in a very delicate position in this matter. It calls for our nicest discrimination and judgment."

"I should say as much."

"Let us see what we know. We have established circumstantially beyond a reasonable doubt the identity of the woman who was in the Marlboro street house at or after the time of North's death; the woman who, to say the least of it, must be an accessory after the fact."

"So, indeed."

"Instead of some adventuress, the woman turns out to be North's own daughter, a mild-faced, innocent-looking girl of 17."

"So, indeed."

"Well, now to my mind, unless the girl is crazy (and we have no evidence that she is), she never could have shot her father."

"It's a pretty serious thing to charge her with it."

"You don't believe it?"

"I'm hardly prepared to dispute the evidence."

"Very well, then, there is only one explanation. She knows who did it, and she runs away to avoid questions."

"It looks so."

"And as she never could reconcile her conscience to such action unless the guilty party were very near or very dear to her—"

"Stackhouse again!" said Applebee, significantly. "There's no way out of it. Unless something turns up in his favor, I've got to arrest that man."

There was a knock at the door.

"Mr. Mendell," said the messenger, "to see Mr. Applebee."

"It's the writing expert," said Applebee. "Send him in."

Mr. Mendell appeared, bearing under his arm a small portfolio.

"Good morning, gentlemen," was his greeting. "And what do you think of the news? No surprise to you, I suppose?"

"What news?" questioned the chief inspector, gruffly.

"Why, the collapse of North & Stackhouse, to be sure. What, hadn't you heard?"

The two officials were staring at each other.

"Where did you hear that, Mendell?" Applebee asked.

"Where? Everywhere. It's all over town. Of course circumstances make everybody talk about it. All sorts of rumors are afloat as to the cause of it. Some say it wouldn't have occurred but for North's death. Others say it had to come anyway—that it was only a matter of time. But, plague take it, that wasn't what I came for."

"Quite so," said Applebee. "But, turning from gossip to business, what's your report?"

"Well, gentlemen," returned Mendell briskly, opening his portfolio and extracting therefrom several papers, "I don't know that I can help you a great deal, but I'm satisfied of one thing. Out of all the specimens of writing which Jobson presented for my inspection, there are not five which could have been done by the party who prepared the anonymous letter."

"There are four, then?" said Applebee.

"Just," returned Mendell, spreading the samples upon the table; "and there you have them."

"And how about your preference?"

"I have none. You see, the writing of the original is too shaky to be a good guide. It is evidently a disguised hand, but at the same time not disguised by a person who understood how to disguise handwriting. Evidently when he had written it he thought, because it didn't have the general appearance, to his eye, of his own writing, it was consequently sufficiently blind to deceive anybody. I don't believe the peculiarity of the formation of the letters ever occurred to the person."

"Who are these parties?"

"Three of them are business men. The fourth was formerly a clerk in the firm's employ, but was discharged, I believe, for drunkenness."

NAPOLEON WAS A HOBO.

So Says Scholarly Tramp Who Philosophizes His Way to Freedom.

"You're not a tramp; you can make a living as a campaign orator," said Sergeant McGarry of the Montclair police, as he dismissed the charge of vagrancy against John Huffiedinger, who had been arrested by Policeman Mulligan. Sergeant McGarry's estimate of the prisoner's qualifications was reached after he had tried for ten minutes to get in a question edgeways during a rapid-fire discourse by Huffiedinger.

The prisoner, when informed that he had been arrested for vagrancy, began a discourse that took up the history of tramp life from away back in the Middle Ages. He was a scholarly talker, and he pointed to Napoleon as an illustrious predecessor of the modern hobo. Napoleon, Huffiedinger declared, had tramped all over Europe, and was arrested only at Moscow and Waterloo. Huffiedinger promised to get out of town when the Sergeant discharged him.

GOVERNOR FORT TALKS TO JERSEY EDITORS.

Governor Fort addressed a midsummer meeting of the New Jersey Editorial Association at Pleasure Bay yesterday. The occasion was a regular business meeting of the association, followed by a clambake at Price's Hotel. The bake was served on the lawn leading to the Shrewsbury river. Covers were laid for fifty. Governor Fort was introduced by the President of the Association, Charles L. Edwards. The Governor spoke informally. He made no reference to Atlantic City, but dwelt generally on the good that the newspapers do in every community.

Among the editors present were the following: Maxcy Applegate, of the Freehold Inquirer; C. F. S. Brown, of the Mattawan Journal; Jacob L. Purnell, of the Newton Herald; J. W. Clift, of the Summit Herald; Walter E. Edge, of the Atlantic City Press; Charles L. Edwards, of the Long Branch Record; Leslie R. Fort, of the Lakewood Times and Journal; Harry Gill, of the Dover Advance; George C. Gunn, of the Burlington Enterprise; J. L. Kinmonth, of the Asbury Park Press; W. B. R. Mason, of the Bound Brook Chronicle; E. B. Merritt, of the Madison Eagle; J. W. Naylor, of the Allentown Messenger; P. H. Packer, of the Sea Bright News, and Walter Dean, of the Jersey City Journal.

Judge Crane, of Elizabeth, and J. B. R. Smith, of Trenton, State Commissioner of Motor Cycles, were among the guests.

Loses in Race With Death.

After having traveled from Los Angeles in an effort to see her sick daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth O. Richey arrived in South Orange last night just an hour after death had won the race. Her daughter, Mrs. Benjamin R. Becker, of No. 7 South Orange avenue, had been sick with blood poisoning ten days, and when her two physicians said that she could not live, her mother was telegraphed for. Mrs. Richey reached New York and telephoned to South Orange. She learned that her daughter was sinking, but before the train reached the town Mrs. Becker was dead. She was thirty-three years old, and leaves her husband and a five-year-old son.

Trying Concrete Telegraph Poles.

Pittsburg, Sept. 2.—The Pennsylvania Railroad has begun to install concrete telegraph poles along its right of way. The assertion is made that they will not be so liable to destruction by storms, and will last longer than the wooden poles. The road has chosen a long stretch of exposed track between Pittsburg and Chicago for the experiments, which will be carried on throughout the winter. If found satisfactory the entire system will have the new concrete pole.

Crane Descendants Have Reunion.

Descendants of the late Judge Benjamin Crane to the number of two hundred held a reunion in a grove on Hook Mountain, near Pine Brook, yesterday. There were addresses by Orville E. Freeman, a great-grandson, and others.

Bigger Ships Than Lusitania.

London, Sept. 2.—The Times states that the two new steamships of the White Star Line, just laid down at Belfast, will be bigger than the Lusitania. The new vessels, however, it says, will not be speedier.

REPUBLICANS WIN IN THE VERMONT ELECTION.

White River Junction, Vt., Sept. 2.—The Republicans won the election in Vermont yesterday by carrying the State for Lieut. Gov. George E. Prouty, of Newport, for Governor by about 28,000 votes over James E. Burke, of Burlington, his Democratic opponent.

The plurality was the smallest in a Presidential year since 1892, when it was only 17,956, which was followed by a Democratic national victory, but it was larger than in 1888 and only slightly less than in 1900. There were a falling off in four years of about 8 per cent. in the Republican vote, while the Democratic vote fell off about 2 per cent.

The Independence League appeared for the first time, and polled about 1,000 votes, while the Prohibition and Socialist vote remained about the same. An unusually large number of local contests for members of the Legislature, although bringing out a heavy vote and resulting in Democratic gains in the lower branch of the Legislature, apparently had no bearing on the Gubernatorial fight.

As Vermont is the first State to vote during the Presidential campaign, there was much interest throughout the country in the size of the Republican plurality.

ALL NIGHT IN WATER.

Lone Fisherman Narrowly Escapes Sinking in Mud.

Winsted, Conn., Sept. 2.—Submerged to his armpits for ten hours, standing on a sunken boat, Edward J. Teffenbach, a former Winsted resident, had a terrible experience Monday night in Cattlin's Pond, on the outskirts of Torrington. At 9 o'clock as he was pulling up a drop line, the old flat bottomed boat tipped, filled with water and sank. He managed to get out of the treacherous mud on the bottom of the pond into the sunken boat. He shouted for help in vain, and gradually the water soaked old scow sank in the mud.

The water crept up on Teffenbach, but he did not dare to try to walk to shore, eight rods away, for fear that he would sink in the mire By daybreak the water was almost up to his shoulders, and he was nearly exhausted and chilled through.

He made one last desperate attempt to summon aid, and shouted as loud as he could. His voice was thin and weak, but it reached a farmer and his hired man, who were looking for stray cows. They found Teffenbach up to his neck. They had no rope long enough to reach the man, so they drove a mile and a half and got a boat, with which they finally rescued Teffenbach at 7 o'clock yesterday morning. It is feared that he has contracted pneumonia.

Many Would-Be Sheriffs.

The Middlesex county Reupblicans are having a merry fight for the nomination for Sheriff, which office becomes a salary office this year at $4,500. William Oberman, of Deans, formerly deputy sheriff, entered the race today. The other Republican candidates are William Carman, of Metuchen; Richard Peltier and William Pfeiffer, of Perth Amboy. William H. Quackenboss, of New Brunswick, is the only Democratic candidate for the office thus far.

John Sutton.

John Sutton, aged 87 years, a native of Plainfield and well-known here, died Monday at his home on South Belmont avenue, Newark, where he had lived for many years. For thirty-five years he was employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad and later became a contractor, retiring seven years ago. He is survived by one son. The funeral service was held from the late home in Newark this morning and the burial was in this city.

Laurels Defeat West Ends.

The East Second street Laurels defeated the West End A. C. on the Sycamore avenue grounds this morning by a score of 8 to 5. The line-up follows: Laurels—Deter, c; Todd, p; Dawe, 1b; Hand, 2b; Young, 3b; Mullen, ss; F. Mullen, lf; Macray, rf; Bundy, cf. West End A. C.—Drake, c; Dixson, p; Minor, 1b; Donley, 2b; Blount, 3b; Beckman, ss; Malley, cf; Anderson, lf; B. Berse, rf.

Invited to Davis' Outing.

The Robert Davis Association, of Jersey City, will hold the twenty-first annual outing to Donnelly's Grove on Wednesday, September 9. Invitations to the affair were received today by James E. Mratine and David J. Carney. It is estimated that the attendance this year will be about 8,000.

—Bartlett pears and plums at reduced prices at Neuman Brothers tomorrow. Place orders for them now as the canning season is at its height and the daily asortment of fruits is especially fine.

PERSONAL.

The Misses Lillian and Fanny Chandler, of Watchung avenue, have returned from a sojourn at Asbury Park.

Mrs. T. R. VanZandt, of aMadison avenue, has returned from Blawenburg, where she has been visiting relatives.

Mrs. H. C. Van Emburgh and daughter, Marjorie, of East Second street, are sojourning at the Shurts farm, Lebanon.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence E. Bond and Miss Bessie Bond, of East Front street, have returned from a sojourn at Asbury Park.

Dr. and Mrs. E. A. Giddes, of Grove street, returned last night after a two weeks stay at Indian Lake in the Adirondacks.

Elmer D. Cutting, of West Second street, is spending his annual vacation at the home of his parents in Lyme Center, N. H.

Mrs. Joseph Kishner has returned to her home in Rahway, after a three weeks' visit with Mr. and Mrs. Edward Baker, of Sycamore street.

William Douglas, of West Eighth street, has returned to resume his studies at the Colorado, School of Mines, Denver, Colorado.

Dr. Charles L. Moore, of West Front street, and E. E. Winckler, of the borough, will spend Saturday, Sunday and Labor Day at Mt. Pocono, Pa.

Mrs. D. J. Yerkes and her daughter, Miss Ida Yerkes, returned yesterday from Cascade in the Adirondacks, where they have spent the past month.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. McGee, of Rockview avenue, have returned to their home after spending a part of the summer at Cascade, in the Adirondacks.

Miss Ella Lunger, of Watchung avenue, is detained at home by illness. She intended to start on her vacation today, but sudden cold has changed her plans.

The family of Dr. Samuel Long, of New Brunswick, who have been at their summer home in Washington Valley for a few weeks, returned home yesterday.

Mrs. William Winn, and daughters, the Misses Henrietta and Elizabeth Winn, of Grandview avenue, have returned from a month's stay in Boston and suburbs.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Reed and daughter, Miss Madeline Reed, of Myrtle avenue, have returned from "The Frontenac," Frontenac, N. Y., where they spent their summer vacation.

Among the automobilists on the Ideal Tour who were registered on Monday at the Hotel Elton Waterbury, Conn., were Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Stockton, T. Earle Stockton, of Central avenue; George C. Hetzel, Ridley Park, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. H. Reeve Stockton, Miss Cruikshank and S. A. Cruikshank, of Belvidere avenue.

Mrs. Knapp, wife of Joseph P. Knapp, president of the American Lithographic Company, and Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Fletcher, of New York, were guests of former Councilman and Mrs. Herman A. Weber, of West Front street, during the week-end at Forked River. The party thoroughly enjoyed boating and fishing, and returned home Monday in their automobile.

Plan to Build New Bridge.

Freeholder J. Hervey Doane, who has been interested in the improvements on Terril road, in company with Major King, director of the board, inspected the small wooden bridge over Cedar brook a few days ago, and after consulting with the bridge committee, it was decided to replace the old structure with a concrete bridge the cost not to exceed $500. This will be bulit the full width of the road and will be a big improvement. Freeholder Doane also discovered that the main centre beam beneath the line bridge on Terril road, over Green brook, was broken, the result of too heavy a weight passing over the structure. The bridge has been closed and will be kept so until a new beam replaces the old one.

Amboy Against Machine.

Perth Amboy yesterday followed in the wake of other places where voting machine elections have been held, when in the Third ward the devices were abolished by a vote of 40 to 9. It was generally expected that the machines would not be retained as the sentiment is decidedly against them. Had there been any doubt of it the vote against the devices would have been much larger.

State Senator in Iceland.

State Senator and Mrs. Ernest R. Ackerman, who have been touring abroad this summer, have been completing a voyage across the Aretic Ocean from the North Cape of Iceland to the North Cape of Europe and Plainfield friends yesterday received souvenir postals from Mr. Ackerman sent from Hammerfest, the Northern-most town in the world.

Y. W. C. A. Juniors Entertainment.

A delightful program of an informal nature has been arranged for the entertainment to be given under the auspices of the Junior department of the Y. W. C. A. at the association building tomorrow night. Miss Helen Wooley is to recite and there will be vocal and instrumental music.

Actress Taken Ill.

Miss Ida Burt Lawrence, leading woman of the "McFadden's Flats" company, was taken seriously ill soon after the arrival in this city yesterday. She was attended by Dr. A. H. Dundon and had recovered sufficiently last night to appear in the performance at the local theatre but was forced to omit several of the more arduous parts.

City's Health Good.

The city Board of Health held a regular meeting yesterday afternoon but no business of importance was transacted. It was reported that there were no contagious disease cases in the city during August and the general health conditions were exceptionally good.

Howell Division, Sons of Temperance, will hold an entertainment Monday night, September 14, in the Christian church on Grove street.

ULLMAN'S CONNUBIAL WOE

HIS WIFE NEVER AT HOME.

And Shrager Says He's a "Lump"—He Must Wash His Own Clothes and Get the Meals.

The victim of an ire-rousing belief that his wife's acquaintance with some of her fellow countrymen in this city was spoiling his home, Harry Ullman, of West Third street, bemoaned his luck as a benedict before City Judge Runyon today, when his testimony was taken in connection with complaints by Mrs. Ullman against Zarchy Kavisky, a neighbor, and by Isaac Shrager against Mr. Ullman.

"It is all bad luck to me, Judge," he said. "I didn't marry the right woman. Life to me is awful, awful, awful."

He accused Mrs. Ullman of "having too much to do with that man Shrager there,' and confessed to having lost his temper with Shrager recently calling him hard names as a "home destroyer.' Shrager brought the action against the man because he was called a "lump." He explained to Judge Runyon that a "lump" is "something terrible, Judge—why it means worse than 'dog-catcher.'" The term was applied in Shrager's store on Madison avenue, where Ullman says his wife spends too much time.

Mrs. Ullman, who is a frail little woman, brought action against Kavisky for setting her husband against her. Kavisky is a neighbor, but says he doesn't have much to do with Ullman, who is his cousin. "You see, Judge," he said, in explanation, "he is a peddler and I am a peddler and two peddlers don't have much to do with each other, because sometimes I sell to his customers and he sells to mine." According to Mrs. Ullman's statements, Kavisky made the Ullman home unhappy by slandering Mrs. Ullman to her husband. He is said to have had hard words about the Ullman baby, which appeared in court and carried in its mother's arms, solemnly licked a lolly-pop during the rapid fire of Yiddish entailed in taking testimony. Said baby is reported to have been characterized as "not a nice baby" by Kavisky in speaking to Ullman.

Summoned to corroborate or deny these statements, Ullman launched into a perfect storm of grief before the Judge. He said his wife was never at home, was never satisfied to stay with him. He told how she liked always to go to the Shrager's and how, when not there, she would go to New York. Ullman grieved openly because she would never get him his meals and because he had to wash his own clothes and darn his own socks. He offered to take Judge Runyon to his house on West Third street and show him what a fine home it was, "with everything on the table you could want.."

Then he launched into a tirade against Shrager, in connection with the complaint brought against him for vile language. "Don't believe that man, Judge," he said, "he is a Socialist, and will say and do anything." He then told how Mrs. Shrager was "too close a friend" to his wife and bemoaned that fact at length.

Judge Runyon dealt with the case as a misunderstanding on Ullman's part. He talked earnestly to him about his duty in the home and to his wife and urged a reconciliation Shrager promised to give his support, saying that his wife was merely acting as a friend to Mrs. Ullman, a stranger, who knew but few people. Family peace was restored, handclasps exchanged and Ullman left the courtroom finally believeing that he did not make such an awful mistake in marrying.

Postoffice Agent Delayed.

Postmaster E. H. Bird has received word that W. F. Field, the agent chosen by the Treasury department to inspect the sites in Plainfield suitable for a postoffice building, will not reach this city until next week. He has been detained at Morristown longer than he anticipated causing a few days' delay in coming here.

Gave Her a "Duster Shower."

The Boston friends of Miss Jeannette G. Addis, of Orange place, gave her a "duster shower" at the summer home of her sister, Mrs. Clarence N. Mundy, Winthrop Highlands, Mass., on Monday. Refreshments were served on the lawn and an enjoyable time was had by the large gathering of young people.

JAMES F. BUCKLE MAY BE E. M. CAVE'S SUCCESSOR

It was announced today that former Mayor James F. Buckle, of Westervelt avenue, would probably be the nominee on the Reupblican ticket in the First ward for school commissioner to succeed E. M. Cave, who declines to accept a renomination. It is a source of regret on the part of a host of friends and admirers that Mr. Cave has decided to retire from the board for it is recognized that he has performed valuable service during the several terms he has served the city.

Considering the fact that he will not run again, it is said that Mr. Buckle is the next choice and he has agreed to accept the nomination provided the party so desires. Mr. Buckle is a large property-owner in the city and for a great many years has been prominently identified with the business interests of Plainfield. He has been closely identified with city affairs, not only during his term as Mayor, but he has always taken an interest in school affairs. His friends believe that he would make an excellent representative from his ward on the board.

FORT DENIES CALLING ATLANTIC CITY NAMES

Governor Fort is incensed at the statements that are being used in Atlantic City and elsewhere quoting him as saying Atlantic City was a "saturnalia of vice" and a "sink of crime." Joseph W. Salus, the foreman of the grand jury, who criticised the Governor in a speech recently, said that the Executive falsified when he used the terms and libelled Atlantic City. The Governor says that in no interview, statement or proclamation has he used any of the expressions credited to him. He says they have originated in the brains of newspaper correspondents in writing about the Governor's proclamation. The Governor's secretary gave out this statement last night from Sea Girt:

"The statement made at the Atlantic City meeting that the Governor in his public statements and addresses to the people of the State had spoken of conditions at Atlantic City as a 'saturnalia of vice' or a sink of crime is absolutely false, and any one who read the statements carefully will attest to that fact.

The Governor has never said any such thing, and it is evident that this is being done to prejudice the people of Atlantic City. Those who made this statement showed on the face of it that they had not even read the Governor's proclamation, but had taken sensational reports about it. The truth of the matter is that the Governor praised Atlantic City in many ways in his letter to Mayor Stoy, which made up part of the proclamation."

LAUREL CLUB ENJOYING CAMP LIFE AT HOPATCONG.

The members of the Laurel A. C., of this city, who are enjoying camp life at Lake Hopatcong, are having no end of fun at the popular resort. Yesterday T. Harding and J. Kyle made a fine catch of fish, consisting of eight pickerel and five bass, and last night the club enjoyed a fish dinner prepared and served by the chef, Harry Pasch, in fine style. Following the dinner the club's new quartet, E. Kyle, J. Smith, Harry Pasch and D. McAfee, sang several of the latest songs, entertaining not only the members but a number of guests.

On Sunday the club was agreeably surprised by a visit from the Misses Alice McAfee and E. Connolly, of Plainfield, who brought with them a fine chicken dinner to which the members did full justice. On Saturday the club will give a farewell dinner to some of their friends about the lake after which they will return home.

Knows the Haines Family.

Former Mayor James F. Buckle, of Westervelt avenue, is personally acquainted with the Haines family, a member of which murdered William E. Annis recently at Bay Shore, L. I. They formerly lived at Beverly, where Mr. Buckle was born and the latter's home was directly opposite the Haines residence.

Dr. A. C. McCrea Returns.

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. A. C. McCrea, of Central avenue, returned last night from Ocean Grove, where they have been sojoruning. Dr. McCrea today resumed his pastoral duties Sunday morning he will have charge of the regular communion services at the First M. E. church and in the evening will preach.

Edward Abel of West Front street, is very ill at his home with typhoid fever.

BIG ENTRY LIST FOR CYCLE CLUB RACE MEET

The old-time enthusiasm of cycling days, when speedy spins by professionals and amateurs were recorded with head-lines on the sporting pages, is again being felt in the race meet to be held under the auspices of the Plainfield Cycle Club on Park avenue near Oak Tree, Labor Day The club members and many other local riders, together with cyclists from Newark, Paterson, Brooklyn and New York, are practising regularly for the various racing events, which include a ten-mile road race, a mile race for the local championship, a one-third mile open race and a half-mile race for boys. In addition to these events, there will be a race for boys between the ages of 10 and 14 years.

Jack Horner, chairman of the race meet committee, today announced that D. M. Adee, of New York, president of the N. C. A., would be the referee at the races Monday. The judges will be J. V. E. Vanderhoef, H. W. Farley, Harry Viebrock, R. H. Barnard, J. A. Herberman, T. J. McGann, W. R. Way, A. E. Skellenger, N. I. Willey and Roy DeCamp, of this city, and Charles Raymond of Oswego, N. Y. R. P. Gay, R. W Osland and Roy Adams are to be the timers, and Jack Horner will b starter and handicapper.

A large number of speedy local riders have entered in the various events and the entries of thirteen out of town cyclists have been received to date. Most of the local entries are practicing for the event in nightly spins, and the victory i the ten-mile will certainly be by a narrow margin. Some of the prizes which consist of medals and bicycle merchandise, are now on exhibition at Horner's cycle store on Somerset street. The complete list of entries to date is as follows:

From Plainfield: Sherman Haberle, Raymond Mantz, Edward Kilom, William Bush, A. B. Dunham, W. Cabbell, Jack Todd, Robert Guttridge, George Simon, George Adams, Thomas Powell, Harry Hook, Robert Wood, and Peter J. Simmons.

From out of town: Charles Nerent and Harry Scott, of New York city; T. J. Murphy and H. E. Winrowe, of Brooklyn; Joseph Beck, J. J. Husse and John Brander, of Newark; Gustave Corrin and E. W. Hedsofe, of Paterson; Martin Andrews, of Irvington; John Tobin, of Westfield, John Brewer, of Keyport and A. E. Petty, of Trenton.

W. L. SMALLEY, JR. FILES HIS PETITION

W. L. Smalley Jr., of Greenbrook road, today filed with Borough Clerk F. A. Martin his petition as candidate for the North Plainfield Council. The signers, all of whom are from the Third election district, where Mr. Smalley is a resident, are Councilman B. R. Waldron, Street Commissioner John Y. Barrett, Justice of the Peace S. C. Mundy, Philip H. Currin, William A. Conger, T. C. Currin, Jr., William L. Sharkey, Harrison Coddington and Frank W. Jones. The petition of Julius J. Stahl, of Somerset street, as a councilmanic candidate, will be filed tomorrow.

Candidates for borough offices are required by law to have ten signatures to their petitions from any one district in North Plainfield, or fifty signatures from the borough at large. Local petitions must be filed with the borough clerk by Wednesday, September 9, and petitions for county offices with County Clerk Anderson by Saturday night, for although September 7 is the legal date, Monday is Labor Day.

Inter-Track Fence At Asbury Park.

Because of persistent agitation by local people for a fence between the tracks at the Asbury Park station as a result of the fatal accident to William J. Kiely, of the borough, while boarding an excursion train a the station several weeks ago, th State Railroad Commission yesterday ordered the New York and Long Branch railroad to build such an inter-track fence The safeguard ha long been agitated at that station where many strangers daily come an go on excursion trains during the summer.

Democratic County Ticket.

The petitions nominating candidates for places on the county Democratic primary ticket were filed in the office of County Clerk Calvert yesterday afternoon. The list of county candidates is as follows: For Senator, Frederick C. Hyer, Rahway; for Assemblymen, William F. Brower, New Providence; Jeremiah A. Kiernan, Elizabeth, and Frederick Rieke, Elizabeth; for Sheriff, James E. Martine, Plainfield; for Coroner, Otto Wagner, Elizabeth.

THE POLITICAL FORECAST

FOWLER LIKELY TO WIN.

Ackerman Will Have No Opposition at the Primaries—Kirkland Picked for the Shrievalty.

Political experts who make it a practise to keep an ear to the ground have already reached their conclusions with respect to the political line-up in the Fifth Congressional District, in Union county.

It is felt that Congressman Chas. N. Fowler will be renominated. While enthusiasm in his behalf is not at fever heat, by any means, the opposition to his candidacy is unorganized. All the Union county candidates for delegateships to the Congressional convention in the Fifth district who have thus far filed their petitions have declared in his favor, and while the local and the county Republican machines would in all probability be pleased to have an opportunity to unite upon some other candidate, and while, in fact, endeavors to bring about such a condition by selecting a Morris county man for the support of the organization have actually been made, Fowler is still far in the lead.

Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, it is declared, will have no opposition at the primaries, and his Democratic opponent will be Fred Hyer, a lawyer, of Rahway. Ackerman's election by a comfortable plurality is regarded by politicians as reasonably certain. For sheriff, Robert Kirkland, Republican, will be opposed by James E. Martine, and while the odds are in the former's favor it is believed that the "Farmer Orator" will run far ahead of his ticket, despite the belief that Kirkland will make big inroads in the Martine vote in the lower wards of Elizabeth, where Martine has heretofore done exceedingly well.

For the Assembly nomination on the Republican side, Assemblyman Kirstein, of Rahway, Councilman Schwartz, of Elizabeth, and Assemblyman Carlton B. Pierce, of Cranford, are most prominently talked about. Assemblyman Moxon having withdrawn from the race. The Democrats have already selected their candidates, to whom there appears to be no opposition.

The most interesting fight in Union county is that for the Elizabeth Mayoralty, with General D. F. Collins, Councilman John S. Sauer, Dr. Victor Mravlag and Robert B. Cissel the candidates, the former two being Democrats and Mravlag and Cissel Republicans. Mravlag is the undisputed choice of downtown Republicans, while Cissel's strength is in the uptown wards, and particularly where Fowler is most popular. The organization is apparently for Mravlag, and disinterested observers are certain that he will be the Republican nominee. Of the Democratic candidates, General Collins is at the present time slightly the stronger, having the support of the machine, although the quiet canvass being made by the friends of Mr. Sauer is reported to be producing results which they regard as very gratifying. It is believed that this will be the closer of the two Mayoralty contests, for, while the nomination of Cissel would be regarded as a surprise, that of either Collins or Sauer would astonish no one who is thoroughly conversant with the Democratic situation .

AL. WILSON TONIGHT.

Actor Well Known to Plainfielders Returns in a New Play.

Al. H. Wilson, who is well known to Plainfielders, will return to the city tonight in his new play, "When Old New York Was Dutch," a romantic drama. The story deals with the early history of the metropolis when the Dutch were in possession and the action affords Mr. Wilson an excellent opportunity to display his talents. During the action of the piece he will sing several new songs, among them "Helen," "Songs of the Camp," "Whispering Breeze" "The Old Chimney Corner."

Those who remember Mr. Wilson for his work in "Metz in the Alps' and other plays, will be sure to be pleased by his new production. He is called the "ambassador of German dialect" and also "the golden voiced singer."

MRS. HODGSKIN PROVES OWNERSHIP OF PROPERTY

The case of Eloise Hodgskin against W. C. Chamberlain, to prove the right of property, was tried before Judge William Newcorn and a jury of six men in the district court, this morning. The defendant attempted to prove, following an execution, that the property belonged to the plaintiff's husband, but she showed that it was purchased with her money and was rightfully her own. The jury was composed of H. C. Corsa, J. M. Scull, E. F. Brown, G. A. Bauer, John Galbraith, Jr., and Isaac Shrager, and it returned a verdict for the plaintiff.

In the contract case of W. S. Urquhart Son & Co. against J. W. Woodruff judgment was given the plaintiff for $217.10, and in the contract case of Craig A. Marsh against William Young, judgment was given the plaintiff for $112. The plaintiff in the contract case of Sachar & Sachar against Charles Rogoff, was given judgment for $94.73, while in a similar action of Cadmus Brothers against W. C. Burns, the plaintiff was given $24.63.

The landlord and tenant case of the Central New Jersey Land Improvement Company against Clark A. Burd was discontinued, the defendant having moved and judgment was given the plaintiff in the landlord and tenant case of Jacob Sachar against Vanlew Cornella, the latter not appearing in court. Eight other cases were adjourned to Thursday, September 10, and five cases were laid over to Thursday, September 24. No session of the court will be held on September 17.

SHERMAN HABERLE HURT IN CYCLE RACE UPSET

While out for a practice spin on Park avenue Sherman Haberle, who is entered in the ten-mile road race under the auspices of the Plainfield Cycle Club Labor Day, got a nasty spill near South Plainfield last night in avoiding a collision with a wagon. His left arm was badly gashed at the elbow and it required five stitches to close the wound at Muhlenberg Hospital. His right hip was also bruised and he sustained abraisions about the hands and face. Raymond Mantz, another club cyclist who was riding directly behind him, was unable to turn out and crashed into the upset. Mantz was thrown heavily and his elbows badly bruised. Both players will be in condition for the race Monday.

The two riders, with A. B. Dunham, also entered in the event, were riding over the course when the accident happened. Dunham was setting the pace. Near South Plainfield, the trio had to turn close to the gutter to pass a wagon and Haberle's bike collided with Dunham's rear wheel, as Dunham turned out to allow somebody else to set the pace. Haberl fell headlong, and Mantz, riding directly behind was also spilled. It was at first thought that Haberle's injuries would keep him from riding in the event, but he was out for hi practice spin early this morning, and is in good condition.

Will Build Eighteen Houses.

Ernest T. Sharpe, of this city, will soon file plans with Building Inspector T. O. Doane for the erection of eighteen new houses in Plainfield, the cost of which will be between $5,000 and $8,000. Some of them will be erected on the old Martine tract off of Park avenue and the others in the Netherwood section of the city. The lumber has been purchased from the J. D. Loizeaux Lumber Company and the work will be started within a short time. Miss Clara Biddle, of Baltimore, who recently recorded a number of mortgages in the county register's office, Elizabeth, covering the property, upon which the houses will be built, is interested in the proposition.

Bryan Will Visit Elizabeth.

At a meeting of the Democratic State Committee, yesterday, Col. Dennis F. Collins, of Elizabeth, was elected secretary of that body. He announced today that Elizabeth would be included in Bryan's tour of the State in October and that he will make a speech at that time. Col Collins is optimistic over the outlook and expresses confidence in the probable election of Bryan and Kern

Injured in Runaway at Lake.

Becoming frightened at an automobile on Mt. Arlington Boulevard Lake Hopatcong, yesterday, a horse took fright and ran away, throwing Henry Palmer and Miss Grace Emerson from a carriage. Miss Emerson was unconscious when picked up. She lost a gold watch when she was thrown out.

BOROUGH WOMEN HURT IN FALL FROM TROLLEY

Becoming confused as she realized that she had gone past the corner where she had planned to get off, Mrs. Cornelius K. Compton, of Duer street, attempted to alight from an Arlington avenue car at the city High School last night, and was thrown heavily, sustaining a severe cut over the left eye and bruises on the hands and arm. She was removed to her home in the ambulance, and an examination by a physician showed that her injuries were slight.

The accident happened at about 8 o'clock, as Mrs. Compton was on her way to prayer meeting at the Park Avenue Baptist church. She had planned to get off the car at Ninth street, but gave no signal for the car to stop. As the car passed the street, Mrs. Compton stood up and stepping to the running board, stepped off. The car, which was in charge of Motorman Christian Weiss and Conductor T. W. Durling, was moving slowly and was about to take the switch.

The motorman immediately brought the car to a standstill and pasengers went to the assistance of Mrs. Compton. The ambulance was summoned by telephone by Mrs. H. G. Dunbar, of Union street.

CARRAR-GROSZMANN CASE SET FOR TRIAL

Constable William H. Pangborn yesterday served a warrant on Professor M. P. E. Groszmann of the Groszmann School, Watchung Crest, in the suit brought against him by John Carrar, at one time gardener at the school, to recover $25 salary which he claims is due him. Th case will be heard next Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock before Justice of the Peace Clark Mundy at the borough police court.

Carrar, who was discharged August 10, claims he has a contract by the month with the proprietor of the school, and continued to occupy the school barn as his residence in accordance with this contract until forceibly ejected by Newark detectives secured by Professor Groszmann, after he had been living in the barn with his family for fourteen days following his discharge.

James Shortell, the Newark detective, who was arrested on a warrar from Justice of the Peace Blume's court on a technical charge of assault preferred by Carrar, supplied $200 bail and waived a hearing before the Watchung justice to await the action of the grand jury.

HOPE CHAPEL ENDEAVORERS HOLD BUSINESS SESSION.

A business meeting held at Hope Chapel by the chapel Christian Endeavorers last night was followed by a delightful social, when the members spent the latter part of the evening playing games, subsequently partaking of a "spread" in the chapel dining room. The routine business transacted included the report that the society's apportionment for the fund being raised to clean the chapel had been completed, and reports were received from the chairmen of the various standing committees.

About twenty-five members were present and Allen Snyder won first prize in the donkey party, a feature of the entertainment. The consolation prize was awarded to W. Morris Hunter. The refreshment tables were tastefully decorated with bunting and cut flowers. The social committee in charge of the affair consisted of Miss Elsie Slorah, Miss Elsie Rimmer and W. Morris Hunter.

Scrappy Drunk Gets Ten Days.

George Moncton tried to pick a fight with Alfred Sanderson, colored, at Park avenue and Second street yesterday afternoon, and the pair were arrested by Patrolman Payne. At their hearing before City Judge Runyon today, Sanderson said that Moncton was drunk and took his tobacco. When he urged its return, the other struck him and tried to stir up a fight. Moncton acknowledged having had some drinks, but told the Judge he had been high and dry for several weeks. He was sentenced to a ten day term and Sanderson was freed.

Funeral of Mrs. Mary Greder.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Greder, wife of George F. Greder, of Somerville, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Sheehan, of Richmond street, was held yesterday morning from St. Mary's church at 9:30 o'clock, Father Bogan officiating. The burial was in St. Mary's Cemetery and the pall-bearers were James O'Keefe, Thomas Dorgan, James O'Keefe, 2d, James Saverd, Garret Kiely and John Brady.

Mrs. Andrew Love, Jr., of Lincoln place, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. A. E Bushnell, of Newark.

TRUNK SEWER PROGRESS

Plainfield and Bound Brook Officials Again Discuss Cost of Investigation.

STATE COMMISSIONER PRESENT

Competent Engineers Declare the Expense of Complete Inquiry and Inspection Will be About $2,000.

The special sewage commission, comprised of Councilmen R. I. Tolles, Duncan W. Taylor, Charles C. Randolph and Frederick E. Mygatt, held another conference last night with Mayor Roberts and the Bound Brook Council, when substantial progress was made in the consideration of the proposition to establish a trunk line sewer as previously suggested by Mayor Charles J. Fisk. In addition Commissioner Herbert, of the State Sewage Commission, was present and joined in the discussion and approximate figures were presented showing the probably cost of investigation, together with a plan showing the most desirable location of sewage beds, all of which were discussed in detail.

The estimate of the probable cost was furnished by well-known New York engineers, and it is believed that it will not exceed $2,000. These figures met with the approval of the Plainfield and Bound Brook officials and seemed to be very fair. As to the best location for beds, a site in Middlesex county, below Riverside Park, has been suggested, and will be considered more fully later on. While New Brunswick was not represented last night, it was learned that the State Board of Health has served a notice on the officials of that city informing them that they would have to cease sewering into the Raritan river. The notice was similar to one served on the officials of Bound Brook. This fact will place New Brunswick in the position of seeking other means of sewage disposal and it was indirectly understood that that city intends joining in the proposed movement to get relief.

Commissioner Herbert addressed the meeting and while he did not commit himself on the subject, the Plainfield and Bound Brook officials were given assurances that the proposed plans for a trunk sewer would meet with the approval of the State Sewage Commission and would be the means of solving a most difficult problem. The enthusiasm shown last night favoring the scheme was an agreeable surprise to some of those present and it is now believed that it may eventually be adopted by all the cities and towns interested.

Much of the time was given up to a discussion of general plans, the consideration of cost and how the expense can be divided. The estimate cost of the trunk line sewer was not reached definitely and the commission is not ready to furnish any figures at present. All things considered the proposition was viewed in a favorable light.

Somerville and Raritan were not represented at the conference, but they will be notified concerning the time for the next meeting which will probably be held in this city next week, and it is thought that officials from both places will attend, as well as New Brunswick. It was agreed last night that inasmuch as the Plainfield commission had been to Bound Brook twice that it would be more than fair that the next conference be held here.

As soon as New Brunswick, Somerville, Raritan and some of the other interested towns signify their intention of joining in the movement definite steps can be taken to apportion the cost of investigation with a view to engaging competent engineers.

Plainfield occupies the most independent position of any of the interested towns, as its system of sewage disposal can be uesd for many years to come, while in the case of Dunellen, Bound Brook, Somerville, Raritan, New Brunswick, as well as Scotch Plains and Fanwood and North Plainfield must find means for disposing of their sewage and the proposed plans should meet with their approval as offering one of the best solutions to the problem.

Of course, basing the probable cost of maintenance of the trunk line sewer Plainfield's share of the expense would naturally be more than in a majority of the interested towns, because of the large amount of sewage to be handled from this city. However, it is believed that the expense can be distributed in an equitable manner so that it would be fair to all places concerned.

New Jersey's Greatest Mail Order Organization.

We are justly proud of our mail order system. We feel that it is one of the strongest links in the chain of this great store's success. We want you to use it—test it thoroughly and allow us to demonstrate its many splendid advantages. The Bamberger mail order system is not the result of a day, but the culmination of years of painstaking effort. In fact, this branch of our business is so perfectly organized that you may shop as quickly by mail as in person. There are no delays—no errors—satisfaction is snugly packed with each parcel we send out. If you are not a patron (which is highly improbable) send in a trial order and you'll quickly realize the truth of the foregoing statements.

Going Away? Take Along One Of These DOLLAR UMBRELLAS

That is, we are going to sell them at a DOLLAR, but you'll readily see they are the kind usually sold at One-fifty. They are covered with fine Americam Taffeta, which has the improved "Tape Edge." They have strong steel rods and the best imported paragon frames. Sizes here for both men and women, 26 inch and 28 inch.

In handles you may choose from a collection as varied as can be. There are Pearls, Ivories, Buckhorns, Cape Horns, English Boxwood and many distinctive novelty handles which will not be duplicated. Instead of the customary $1.50 pay only a DOLLAR.

Dainty Night Gowns, 95c

THAT WERE TO SELL AT $1.25

A better lot of garments would be hard to find. They are not made on the pinch or skimp order, but full and generous to the size. The assortment includes Night Gowns made of muslin, cambric and nainsook. Some have the high neck, others V, square and a few round. Regular or chemise models may be had in either short or long sleeves. They are prettily trimmed with tucking, hemstitching, lace, embroidery, beading and ribbon. Come and see them.

WESTFIELD.

Westfield Democrats met Tuesday night, and the announcement was made that a complete local ticket will be nominated. Usually the Democrats make nominations for only the most important offices, as there is a normal Republican majority in the town of 275.

Westfield Republicans have indorsed Charles N. Fowler for Congress, and Lloyd Thompson, present town clerk, for Assembly.

George G. Gilmore has been chosen to fill a vacancy on the Westfield Republican committee from the Third ward.

Westfield business men have agreed to close all places of business on Labor Day.

The next regular meeting of Westfield Council will be held next Tuesday night.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Al. H. Wilson, the well-known singing comedian, will occupy the boards of the New Plainfield theatre tonight. The offering will be "When Old New York Was Dutch," a romantic drama in four acts by Sidney R. Ellis. If advance information can be relied upon this new production of Wilson's will be his greatest triumph. His repertoire of new songs includes some that are most entrancing musically, and, like the other Wilson songs will no doubt become very popular. Among them are "Helen," "Songs of the Camp," "The Old Chimney Corner," "Song of Home," "Auf Wiedersehn Fraulein," and the beautiful Irish ballad, "Believe Me of All Those Endearing Young Charms."

"The Three of Us" is announced for presentation at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow night. It was written by Rachel Crothers and is quite a variation from the usual play, being built upon original lines as regard the theme, development and climax. It cannot fail to delight the blase theatre-goer and it appeals to patrons of absolutely the best dramatic art. It isn't a problem play dealing with infidelity or kindred subjects but on the contrary is pure and whosesome as the mountain breezes and after seeing it, any norman man or woman feels better and realize that there is a lot of good in this old world of ours after all. It comes to us with the hearty indorsement of every important critic and has been received all over the land with unusual enthusiasm. The indication is an exact duplicate of what was used in New York during its famous run of over three hundred nights at the Madison Square theatre. The company is headed by Miss Janet Waldorf, who is surrounded by an excellent cast which will be able to meet with all teh artistic requirements of a critical audience.

What is said to be a thoroughly novel and absolutely unconventional musical production, "Lola from Berlin," by John J. McNally, will serve as a starring vehicle for the peerless singing comedienne Corinne, who comes to the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon and night. The play was produced by Klaw and Erlanger last season in the Liberty theatre, New York city, where it scored a big hit. William Jerome and Jean Schwartz have contributed some of their best lyrics of which the following are particularly distinctive: "I Think of You the Whole Year Round," "I'd Sooner Be a Has-Been," "Unter der Linden," "Beneath the Moon," "Signs," "Just Home from College," "Poor Foolish Man" and "There's Not Another Girlie in the World for Me." The supporting company includes Mark Sullivan, Hazel Carlton, Franklin Vail, Henry Carl Lewis, Lillie May White, Franker Woods, Osborn Clemson, Lillian Wilson, Freddie Scott, Pearl Revare, Bunnie Ingeborg and a large ensemble force.

"A Message from Mars" is described as a fantastic comedy, skillfully constructed with the rare merit of being novel in theme, witty in dialogue, melodramatic in stage effects and true to life in its characters. It will be presented here by a competent cast at the New Plainfield theatre Labor Day, afternoon and night.

An executive meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held in the rooms on Madison avenue, this afternoon to plan for the fall work.

On account of Monday being a holiday, the Plainfield Primary Union will meet at the Y. M. C. A. Tuesday afternoon instead. The birthday party of the Union will be held at the Y. M. C. A. Monday afternoon, September 14.

McNulty Brothers' famous team from New York will play the Clinton Avenues on Crescent Oval, Saturday afternoon, and judging from the line-up of the aggregation will give the local team the hardest game of the season. A majority of the players are minor leaguers and are known to have played good ball. The game will be called at 3:30 o'clock.

The double bill provided by Clinton Avenue for Labor Day should prove a strong attraction. In the morning at 10:30 Rahway will be here and a brass band will give them a warm reception. In the afternoon Scotch Plains, the old rivals will sport about the Oval and try to wrest victory from the locals.

GOLF.

Several competitions for challenge trophies will be one of the features at the Park Golf Club on Saturday. Thus far this season the contests for these cups have been very close and exciting and as expected have proved to be a strong attraction for the members.

Dudley H. Barrows is among the prominent local golfers who has not been taking an active part in competitions at the Plainfield Country Club. During the fall, however, he will probably be a prominent figure on the links.

Constant improvements are being made to the Plainfield Country Club course under the direction of the Green committee with a view to making it the equal of any in the Metropolitan district.

Programes are out for the third open championship of the Metropolitan Golf Association to be held at Baltusrol September 23, 24 and 25. As has previously been stated this year's affair is to be thrown open to the world, and as the array of money prizes is particularly attractive the chances are that pros from various parts of the country will compete.

The regular moneys are as follows: First, $150; second, $100; third, $75; fourth, $50; fifth, $40; sixth, $30; seventh, $20, and eighth, $10. In addition to these there will be six special prizes of $10 each for each for the best morning and afternoon scores each day, and also for the two best thirty-six-hole rounds.

The tournament proper will consist of seventy-two holes medal play. On the third day the attraction will consist of an open invitation four-ball competition under the auspices of the Baltusrol Golf Club. Conditions call for thirty-six holes, and teams must consist of an amateur and a professional from the same club. There will be three prizes—first, $100; second, $70, and third, $30.

George Low, of Baltusrol, won the M. G. A. open title the last time the tournament was held, at Hollywood, in 1906. He has been playing good golf since then, and there seems little doubt that he will make a strong bid to retain his title over the course he knows so well. All entries must be accompanied by a $5 fee and the pairing will be announced on Monday, September 21.

Competitors whose scores at the finish of thirty-six holes exceed by eighteen strokes the eighth place shall not be allowed to continue in the competition.

INDICTED OFFICIALS HELD.

Park Ridge Office Holders Plead Not Guilty to Malfeasance.

Robert Sibbald, David Braun, Edward Lyman, Henry S. Stack, Irving Van Houten, William H. Deane, Eugene Perrier and Frank O. Mittag, present and former officials of Park Ridge, were arraigned before Judge Demarest at Hackensack yesterday on indictments returned by the April Grand Jury charging them with malfeasance in office because they voted to pay bills in connection with the running of a municipal lighting plant when money for that purpose had not been legally appropriated.

Former Mayor Sibbald was also obliged to answer with James B. H. Storms and John C. Storms to another indictment which charges them with printing a weekly publication without having first filed a certificate with the County Clerk to show the identity of the incorporators, as required by law.

All the men pleaded not guilty and furnished bail in the sums of $500 and $300 each.

GRABS HER, BUT TRAIN HITS.

Young Man Instant Too Late to Save Aged Woman from Injury.

Mrs. Anna Fieldhouse, of Belleville, on Tuesday night was hit by an Erie train and sustained a compound fracture of the right leg, fractures of both arms, lacerations and several scalp wounds. She is more than seventy years old.

As she started across the tracks a train was approaching. She failed to see it, and Richard Eyre, a young man who was passing, ran to her assistance. He grabbed her, but did not succeed in getting her off the tracks in time to escape a glancing blow from the locomotive. Eyre's right hand was hit and severely cut. The doctors have little hope of her recovery.

STATE NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

Mrs. Janet Hope Craig, sixty-six years old, died at her home in Woodbury on Monday as the result of a fall, in which she broke her hip.

United States District Court Judge Lanning, of Trenton, will address the men's meeting of the Tuckerton Y. M. C. A., next Sunday afternoon.

William S. Harker, of Mullica Hill, has a large and unique collection of door keys. There are at least 500, nearly all from hotels where Mr. Harker has been stopping in his extensive travels over the world.

Following the death Monday of little Gertrude Homier from hydrophobia, Mayor Madden issued a proclamation requiring that all doogs in Trenton be muzzled for the next thirty days, under penalty of death on sight.

Through Attorney William C. French, of Camden, Alfred Hendricks yesterday instituted suit against the Public Service Corporation for $5,000 damages for alleged injuries received in a collision between trolley cars on May 14 last.

The grape vineyards at Vineland, that were sprayed and cared for under the direction of the United State Agricultural Department, show marked improvement over the surrounding vineyards. The yield is greatly increased and the fruit is finer. Farmers are fast becoming convinced that it pays to know how.

W. J. Purvis, one of Rosenhayn's pioneer residents, and a prominent veteran of the Civil War, took his first real vacation for thirty-two years Monday by chistening his summer cottage at Fortescue. During the day friends caught a sixty-pound carp and presented it to Mrs. Purvis as a souvenir of the occasion.

The new Chancery chambers were opened in Atlantic City yesterday in the presence of Vice-Chancellor Leaming and many members of the Atlantic County bar, without the slightest ceremony The court was established after one of the hardest fights ever waged by local lawyers, who were annoyed by the frequent holding up of important cases in the crowded Camden courts.

Many complaints having been made to the Camden Police Department by City Librarian William Keller that books were being mutilated, Detective Moffett was detailed on the case. Moffett found that several persons borrowed books and then removed maps or pictures. He arrested a young man yesterday, but restitution having been made by his parents he may not be prosecuted. Other arrests are in prospect.

Two men were injured and there was much excitement among the passengers when a trolley car wrecked an ice wagon at Fourth and Walnut streets, Camden, yesterday. William Lang, twenty-three years old, of Woodbury, and James Warbot, thirty-six years old, of 325 Moyer street, Gloucester City, who were in the ice wagon, were taken to Cooper Hospital, suffering from severe bruises, but later were able to go to their homes.

While George Generotzky, an employe of the Keystone Telephone Company, was riding his motorcycle through Bellevue avenue, Hammonton, yesterday, a leak sprung in the carbureter, which set the machine afire. Generotzky let himself fall from the machine, and there was a general stampede from passersby, as there was grave danger of an explosion. A lot of sand was thrown upon the machine, but with little effect, and firemen turned on a hose and stopped the blaze.

The much dreaded malady among horses which has been prevalent at times in the vicinity of Tuckerton for a number of years has again appeared, and several valuable horses have succumbed. At Manchawkin two cases are reported; at Parkertown one, and on the beach there are others. The disease usually makes its appearance at this season of the year, while veterinarians have been baffled thus far to diagnose the cases, and no cure for the disease is known.

Auto Goes Through Stone Fence.

Stamford, Conn., Sept. 3.—The motor car of Enos S. L. Richardson, a New York business man whose summer home is in Oenoke avenue, New Canaan, was wrecked last night in Darien. The steering knuckle broke and the car plunged through a stone fence, coming to a standstill fifty feet from the highway. Robert Lee, the chauffeur, William Welch, Lewis Griebel and John Swagg were in the car. All live in New Canaan except Swagg, who is a Long Island man. He was thrown out and his arm was broken.

Big Drop in Newark's Tax Rate.

The tax commissioners of Newark fixed the county and city rates for this year yesterday at $1.63 per $100 of valuation. This is the lowest rate since 1869. The low rate was produced by a largely reduced tax budget.

JERSEY CENTRAL BOAT BARELY ESCAPES COLLISION.

The steamer Sandy Hook, of the New Jersey Central fleet, on her first trip up the bay from Atlantic Highlands yesterday, had a narrow escape from collision with the iron steamboat Cepheus, in a heavy fog in the Narrows. Quick work by the officers of the former boat prevented what would probably have been a fatal accident.

The Sandy Hook, crowded with passengers, was going at reduced speed on account of the fog, when suddenly and without warning the Cepheus, on her way down from the city, came out of the mist and started to cross her bow. A collision seemed inevitable, and many passengers leaped from their seats, but, although badly scared, they kept their heads and prevented a panic.

The engines on the Sandy Hook were immediately reversed to full speed astern, and the Cepheus shot past the larger boat with a margin of only a few feet.

Captain Martin, of the aSndy Hook declared after the incident that it was the narrowest escape from collision that he had ever seen or heard of in his carreer.

HORSE 34; DOG 17.

Former Can Tell Time and Latter Is Turning Gray.

A horse that can tell time and a dog so old that it is turning gray are the unique possessions of the H. A. Rath Company, of Elizabeth. Both animals are probably the oldest, or very near so, of their kind in New Jersey, the equine being now 34 and the dog 17.

The horse is named Pete, and Mr. H. A. Rath, senior member of the firm, says that it has not been ill in twenty-three years, during which time it has been in charge of one driver, Thomas Finley. It knows when noon and 5 p. m. come around, he says, and can find its own way home. Mr. Rath says he would not part with the animal at any price.

The dog's name is Rover, and he came into the possession of Mr. Rath when he acquired the plumbing concern of L. A. Hoffman & Co., the transfer being one of the stipulations in the agreement. He has never been whipped by a rival canine, is still a good watch dog and the pride of the neighborhood.

SUES WIFE FOR DIVORCE.

New Brunswick Man Did Not Live With Her After Marriage.

John H. DeMott, a New Brunswick society man, has begun suit for absolute divorce against his wife, who was Miss Sarah Durham, and whom he married secretly at the Little Church Around the Corner, New York, on January 16, 1906. The couple have never lived together. Mr. De Mott did not bring his wife to New Brunswick after the wedding, and many of his friends did not know that he was married until the divorce proceedings were announced.

Mrs. De Mott lived at the Berkely Hotel, Bound Brook, for a long time, and then made her home in Newark and New York. Her husband charges her with infidelity. It is understood that there will be no defense. Robert Adrian, with whom De Mott read law, is his counsel. Mr. De Mott did not go to the bar, but engaged in the carriage business at New Brunswick for a time, and then took a position in Jersey City.

CAPTURE NUDE WILD MAN.

Had Been Frightening Persons About Trenton for a Week.

A "wild man," who has been roaming through the woods and fields of Hamilton township, near Trenton, for a week, entirely nude, and frightening women and children, was captured yesterday morning by a posse of constables after he had put up a terrific fight. A blanket was thrown about him and he was carried to the county jail in Trenton and locked in a padded cell.

No one in Trenton knows who he is or whence he came. His hair is long and matted and his beard reaches nearly to his knees. He has lost the power of speech and since his capture has been dancing around in his cell, clapping his hands and raising his eyes to heaven, apparently in religious frenzy.

LAWYER LOST IN ALPS.

Word was received in Hackensack yesterday that Adolph L. Engelke, a Jersey City lawyer, whose home is in Englewood, has had a severe experience in the Swiss Alps, and is now on his way back to this country. Mr. Engelke made one attempt to climb the Matterhorn and almost lost his life in the undertaking, being out on the mountains for more than twenty-four hours before a rescue party found him.

The high altitude deceived his vision and it was dark before he had gone far on his return trip. The cold prevented him from sleeping that night and he wandered around until dawn. All day he walked about trying to find his way and shouting at intervals to attract attention. As night was beginning to settle again he heard a faint shout in answer to his calls. He replied, and in an hour a party of searchers found him.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

SOMERVILLE.

Rev. Dr. William Stockton Crammer will return from his vacation this week, which has been spent at Harvey Cedars, and will occupy his pulpit in the First Reformed church next Sunday.

Arrangements are being made by the women of the Second Reformed church to hold a peach festival on the lawn by the church on the tenth of September.

Miss R. A. Miller, who has been spending two months at the Lakeside Hotel, Eaglesmere, Pa., returned to her home on West Main street yesterday.

Miss Marion Thomas and her brother, Frederick T. Thomas, arrived yesterday from Europe, where they have been traveling for several weeks.

Milton Laban and family, who have been spending the summer at Naples, Me., will reach their home on Altamont place tomorrow.

Miss Davenport and Miss Annie Davenport, of New York, are visiting their brother, William W. Davenport, on Altomont place.

Mrs. D. R. Kenyon and Miss Angle Kenyon returned yesterday from Thousand Islands, Montreal, Quebec and Adirondacks.

Mrs. Taylor and Miss Nan Taylor, who have been spending the summer in Somerville, went to Caldwell yesterday.

Miss Haines returned this morning from the coast of Maine, where she spent a month's vacation.

Mrs. A. M. Palmer, of West Cliff street, is visiting her son, Dr. A. J. Palmer, at Milton-on-Hudson.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Marcus Dey left yesterday for Colorado, where he will enter the Colorado College of Agriculture when the fall term commences. Dey is a member of the class of 1909, Plainfield High School, and holds the indoor record for the high jump, made at the interscholastic meet at the Y. M. C. A. last winter.

Charles Rogers, of New Market, injured his hand severely at the Spicer Universal Joint shops Tuesday and as a result may have to have part of the finger amputated. He was helping move a heavy machine, when it fell, crushing the digit.

George W. Day and Charles Corlell, of the registry board, have commenced their house to house canvass of voters in the borough. They found that many Dunellenites are still out of town on their summer vacation.

Pupils of the Whittier School and High School will meet tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Whittier School to rehearse music for the exercises at the unveiling of the cannon on Labor Day.

Mrs. Carrie Millard has returned home after a visit with her niece, Mrs. J Alfred Wilson, of Newark.

Kirchner & Voorhees, local people, have opened a fish and vegetable market in the Runyon block.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Rev. Franklin Matthews assumed charge as pastor of the Baptist church tomorrow night, when he will lead the regular monthly Covenant meeting of the church.

Flannery is putting up such a good game at third base, that Manager Frentz will probably hold him in the position for the balance of the season.

Joe Albert will have a chance to play against his old team mates when the local team plays at Rahway Saturday afternoon.

David R. Clark, of Newark, has been visiting his mother, Mrs. Benjamin Clark, of Prospect avenue.

Miss Mamie Clark, who has been ill with diphtheria for the past week, is reported as improving.

Mrs. James H. Buckley and daughter Anita, are spending two weeks with friends in Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Guttridge have removed from the Marsh building to Netherwood.

Twilight Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., meet tonight in the Library rooms.

SHOOT WOMAN IN MOB.

Another Injured by Keystone Constabulary in Miners' Strike.

Scranton, Pa., Sept. 3.—Following an attack by a mob on a party of non-union workmen in Gibbons street, Dunmore, yesterday afternoon, the State constabulary fired a revolver volley, seriously injuring Mrs. Lena Kalwrecka and Mrs. Annie Condeach. Mrs. Kalwrecka was in the mob, while Mrs. Condeach was sitting in front of her home.

A miners' strike was begun Tuesday at the Pennsylvania Coal Company's Mountain Colliery. There was trouble yesterday morning when a non-union man went to work in the mine, and the superintendent was struck down with a stone. Members of the State constabulary were then summoned, and it was while the squad was taking the new miners to their homes that the demonstration and shooting took place.

HUDSON TUNNELS HIRING MANY ADDITIONAL WORKMEN.

The Hudson Tunnels Company has begun to take on additional workmen. It is expected that several hundred men will be put to work and that many of them will be used to complete the construction at the New York end of the Cortlandt street tubes. A force is also to be used in that portion of the tunnel near Washington street, which connects with the Hoboken tunnel. Just when the work on Railroad avenue in Jersey City will be taken up is not announced.

Despite reports in Wall street to the contrary, engineers of the company say it has not abandoned its plan for a terminal at Sixth avenue and Thirty-third street. It has been reported the company intended to run its subway trains into the Pennsylvania terminal in Ninth avenue, between Thirty-first and Thirty-third streets, but the engineers said a plan for the McAdoo station would be adopted in a few days. Many plans had been rejected, they said, because certain difficult engineering problems had not been overcome.

The twin buildings which make up the Church street terminal of the downtown tubes contain 4,000 offices, and are the largest office buildings in the world. Unlike the uptown block, they are owned by the operating company, and not by the Hudson Companies. Yesterday connection was made between the southernmost building and the Sixth avenue elevated station at Cortlandt street. The passageway leaves the big building at the third floor, which is level with a bridge over the elevated tracks, giving access both to the uptown and downtown stations.

The express elevators in the building began yesterday to make stops at the third floor to give tenants quick connection with the elevated railroad. The buildings are now rented to 70 per cent. of their capacity, which is more than the company figured on for the first year, even before the financial troubles of last Fall.

MISS BURKE LOSES CASE.

Court Finds Against Her Claim in Recent Garter Tragedy.

Asbury Park, Sept. 3.—While the tale of the broken garter was not sung in court today quite to the satisfaction of numerous wags who had expected to hear a choice story, there was still some interesting developments when Miss Carolyn Burke of the Devonport Inn, was heard in her suit against M. Francis Cavallon for recovery of a check for $100, which he gave her, it was decided, under intimidation. The verdict was in favor of the defendant.

Testimony brought out the fact that the defendant had drawn the check when approached by a detective who said that he was in the employ of the plaintiff and declared he would throw the defendant into jail within an hour unless he paid over $100 of the $180 Miss Burke had lost out of her stocking, he having returned to her $80.

George Trimingham, a guest at the hotel, swore he saw Cavallon sign the check, and said Harry Wall, of Newark, was also present. City Attorney Carton, who was trying the case, asked this witness if he was not engaged to Miss Burke. He said he wasn't. The defendant testified that the detective had said he had a warrant for his arrest in his pocket; that his wife had grown frantic at this, and that for her sake he had given the check, upon which he stopped payment.

DRINK EXCUSE FOR CRIME.

Judge Makes It Easy for College Boys Who "Trim" Horse Trader.

Charles C. Hudson, a college student, of New York; Russell Hudson, of Wading River, and William Steinsick, of Oyster Bay, who claims to be a student at Lafayette College, and says he was formerly attached to the Secret Service, were arrested at Riverhead, L. I., yesterday and arraigned before Justice William H. Taft on a charge of assault, the complainant being Frank Smith, a horse trader.

Smith claimed that one of the young men struck him with a horsewhip and that the other two urged him on. The young men said Smith was intoxicated and called Steinsick an improper name, so they proceeded to "do him up." Justice Taft decided that as the young men had been drinking he would fine them only $5 each. A saloon-keeper paid their fines.

Missing Boy Drowned.

The Elizabeth police have been informed that the body of Charles Wittke, Jr., 15-year-old son of Charles Wittke, of 939 Elizabeth avenue, who disappeared Sunday, has been found at Howland's Hook on the Staten Island shore, near the New York end of the B. and O. Railroad bridge. The search has been led by the victim's brother, Paul. The only clue was the boy's coat and hat found on the railroad bridge. George Viebrock, his companion up to a short time before his death, narrowly escaped death himself last night by what the family claims was an accidental escape of gas in his room.

ELK HUNT AT TWO OCEAN PASS

BY

THEODORE ROOSEVELT

WOODY and I started to hunt over the great table-land, and led our stout horses up the mountain-side, by elk-trails so bad that they had to climb like goats. All these elk-trails have one striking peculiarity. They lead through thick timber, but every now and then send off short, well-worn branches to some cliff-edge or jutting crag, commanding a view far and wide over the country beneath. Elk love to stand on these lookout points, and scan the valleys and mountains round about.

Blue grouse rose from beside our path; Clarke's crows flew past us, with a hollow, flapping sound, or lit in the pine-tops, calling and flirting their tails; the gray-clad whisky-jacks, with multitudinous cries, hopped and fluttered near us. Snow-shoe rabbits scuttled away, the big furry feet which give them their name already turning white. At last we came out on the great plateau, seamed with deep, narrow ravines. Reaches of pasture alternated with groves and open forests of varying size. Almost immediately we heard the bugle of a bull elk, and saw a big band of cows and calves on the other side of a valley. There were three bulls with them, one very large, and we tried to creep up on them; but the wind was baffling and spoiled our stalk. So we returned to our horses, mounted them, and rode a mile farther, toward a large open wood on a hill-side. When within two hundred yards we heard directly ahead the bugle of a bull, and pulled up short. In a moment I saw him walking through an open glade; he had not seen us. The slight breeze brought us down his scent. Elk have a strong characteristic smell; it is usually sweet, like that of a herd of Alderney cows; but in old bulls, while rutting, it is rank, pungent, and lasting. We stood motionless till the bull was out of sight, then stole to the wood, tied our horses, and trotted after him. He was traveling fast, occasionally calling; whereupon others in the neighborhood would answer. Evidently he had been driven out of some herd by the master bull.

He went faster than we did, and while we were vainly trying to overtake him we heard another very loud and sonorous challenge to our left. It came from a ridge-crest at the edge of the woods, among some scattered clumps of the northern nut-pine or pinyon—a queer conifer, growing very high on the mountains, its multiforked trunk and wide-spreading branches giving it the rounded top, and, at a distance, the general look of an oak rather than a pine. We at once walked toward the ridge, up-wind. In a minute or two, to our chagrin, we stumbled on an outlying spike bull, evidently kept on the outskirts of the herd by the master bull. I thought he would alarm all the rest; but, as we stood motionless, he could not see clearly what we were. He stood, ran, stood again, gazed at us, and trotted slowly off.

I peered over the crest.

We hurried forward as fast as we dared, and with too little care; for we suddenly came in view of two cows. As they raised their heads to look, Woody squatted down where he was, to keep their attention fixed, while I cautiously tried to slip off to one side unobserved. Favored by the neutral tint of my buckskin hunting-shirt, with which my shoes, leggins, and soft hat matched, I succeeded. As soon as I was out of sight I ran hard and came up to a hillock crested with pinyons, behind which I judged I should find the herd. As I approached the crest, their strong, sweet smell smote my nostrils. In another moment I saw the tips of a pair of mighty antlers, and I peered over the crest with my rifle at the ready. Thirty yards off, behind a clump of pinyons, stood a huge bull, his head thrown back as he rubbed his shoulders with his horns. There were several cows around him, and one saw me immediately, and took alarm. I fired into the bull's shoulder, inflicting a mortal wound; but he went off, and I raced after him at top speed, firing twice into his flank; then he stopped, very sick, and I broke his neck with a fourth bullet. An elk often hesitates in the first moments of surprise and fright, and does not get really under way for two or three hundred yards; but, when once fairly started, he may go several miles, even though mortally wounded; therefore, the hunter, after his first shot, should run forward as fast as he can, and shoot again and again until the quarry drops. In this way many animals that would otherwise be lost are obtained, especially by the man who has a repeating-rifle.

The elk I thus slew was a giant. His body was the size of a steer's, and his antlers, though not unusually long, were very massive and heavy. He lay in a glade, on the edge of a great cliff. Standing on its brink we overlooked a most beautiful country, the home of all homes for the elk: a wilderness of mountains, the immense evergreen forest broken by park and glade, by meadow and pasture, by bare hill-side and barren table-land. Some five miles off lay the sheet of water known to the old hunters as Spotted Lake; two or three shallow, sedgy places, and spots of geyser formation, made pale green blotches on its wind-rippled surface. Far to the southwest, in daring beauty and majesty, the grand domes and lofty spires of the Tetons shot into the blue sky.

That night, as on more than one night afterward, a bull elk came down whistling to within two or three hundred yards of the tents, and tried to join the horse herd. The moon had set, so I could not go after it. Elk are very restless and active throughout the night in the rutting season; but where undisturbed they feed freely in the daytime, resting for two or three hours about noon.

Next day, which was rainy, we spent in getting in the antlers and meat of the two dead elk; and I shot off the heads of two or three blue grouse on the way home. The following day I killed another bull elk, following him by the strong, not unpleasing, smell, and hitting him twice as he ran, at about eighty yards. So far I had had good luck, killing everything I had shot at; but now the luck changed, through no fault of mine, as far as I could see, and Ferguson had his innings. The day after I killed this bull he shot two fine mountain rams; and during the remainder of our hunt he killed five elk—one cow, for meat, and four good bulls. The two rams were with three others, all old and with fine horns; Ferguson peeped over a lofty precipice and saw them coming up it only fifty yards below him. His two first and finest bulls were obtained by hard running and good shooting; the herds were on the move at the time, and only his speed of foot and soundness of wind enabled him to get near enough for a shot. One herd started before he got close, and he killed the master bull by a shot right through the heart, as it trotted past, a hundred and fifty yards distant.

As for me, during the next ten days I killed nothing save one cow for meat; and this though I hunted hard every day from morning till night, no matter what the weather. Our ill success was in part due to sheer bad luck; but the chief element therein was the presence of a great hunting-party of Shoshone Indians. Split into bands of eight to ten each, they scoured the whole country on their tough, sure-footed ponies. As they slew whatever they could, but by preference cows and calves, and as they were very persevering, but also very excitable and generally poor shots, so that they wasted much powder, they not only wrought havoc among the elk, but also scared the survivors out of all the country over which they hunted.

Day in and day out we plodded on. In a hunting trip the days of long monotony in getting to the ground, and the days of unrequited toil after it has been reached, always far outnumber the red-letter days of success. But it is just these times of failure that really test the hunter. In the long run, common-sense and dogged perseverance avail him more than any other qualities. The man who does not give up, but hunts steadily and resolutely through the spells of bad luck until the luck turns, is the man who wins success in the end.

After a week at Two-Ocean Pass, we gathered our pack-animals one frosty morning, and again set off across the mountains. A two-days' jaunt took us to the summit of Wolverine Pass, near Pinyon Peak, beside a little mountain tarn; each morning we found its surface skimmed with black ice, for the nights were cold. After three or four days, we shifted camp to the mouth of Wolverine Creek, to get off the hunting grounds of the Indians. We had used up our last elk-meat that morning, and when we were within a couple of hours' journey of our intended halting-place, Woody and I struck off on foot for a hunt. Just before sunset we came on three or four elk; a spike bull stood for a moment behind some thick evergreens a hundred yards off. Guessing at his shoulder, I fired, and he fell dead after running a few rods. I had broken the luck, after ten days of ill success.

Next morning Woody and I, with the packer, rode to where this elk lay. We loaded the meat on a pack-horse, and let the packer take both the loaded animal and our saddle-horses back to camp, while we made a hunt on foot. We went up the steep, forest-clad mountain-side, and before we had walked an hour heard two elk whistling ahead of us. The woods were open, and quite free from undergrowth, and we were able to advance noiselessly; there was no wind, for the weather was still, clear, and cold. Both of the elk were evidently very much excited, answering each other continually; they had probably been master bulls, but had become so exhausted that their rivals had driven them from the herds, forcing them to remain in seclusion until they regained their lost strength. As we crept stealthily forward, the calling grew louder and louder, until we could hear the grunting sounds with which the challenge of the nearest ended. He was in a large wallow, which was also a lick. When we were still sixty yards off, he heard us, and rushed out, but wheeled and stood a moment to gaze, puzzled by my buckskin suit. I fired into his throat, breaking his neck, and down he went in a heap. Rushing in and turning, I called to Woody, "He's a twelve-pointer, but the horns are small!" As I spoke I heard the roar of the challenger of the other bull not two hundred yards ahead, as if in defiant answer to my shot.

Running quietly forward, I speedily caught a glimpse of his body. He was behind some fir-trees about seventy yards off, and I could not see which way he was standing, and so fired into the patch of flank which was visible, aiming high, to break the back. My aim was true, and the huge beast crashed down-hill through the evergreens, pulling himself on his fore legs for fifteen or twenty rods, his hind quarters trailing. Racing forward, I broke his neck. His antlers were the finest I ever got. A couple of whisky-jacks appeared at the first crack of the rifle with their customary astonishing familiarity and heedlessness of the hunter; they followed the wounded bull as he dragged his great carcass down the hill, and pounced with ghoulish bloodthirstiness on the gouts of blood that were sprinkled over the green herbage.

These two bulls lay only a couple of hundred yards apart, on a broad game-trail, which was as well beaten as a good bridle-path. We began to skin out the heads; and as we were finishing we heard another bull challenging far up the mountain. He came nearer and nearer, and as soon as we had ended our work we grasped our rifles and trotted toward him along the game-trail. He was very noisy, uttering his loud, singing challenge every minute or two. The trail was so broad and firm that we walked in perfect silence. After going only five or six hundred yards, we got very close indeed, and stole forward on tip-toe, listening to the roaring music. The sound came from a steep, narrow ravine, to one side of the trail, and I walked toward it with my rifle at the ready. A slight puff gave the elk my wind, and he dashed out of the ravine like a deer; but he was only thirty yards off, and my bullet went into his shoulder as he passed behind a clump of young spruce. I plunged into the ravine, scrambled out of it, and raced after him. In a minute I saw him standing with drooping head, and two more shots finished him. He also bore fine antlers. It was a great piece of luck to get three such fine bulls at the cost of half a day's light work; but we had fairly earned them, having worked hard for ten days, through rain, cold, hunger, and fatigue, to no purpose. That evening my home-coming to camp, with three elk-tongues and a brace of ruffed grouse hung at my belt, was most happy.

"Pshaw!" said Applebee. "I know these three men. They're none of them in need of money, and would not have taken that means to get it if they had been."

"It remains, then, with this other fellow—Willard Smith—eh?" said the chief inspector. "What do you know of this man's history?"

"Nothing but the few words that Jobson accidentally let fall," replied the expert. "He said that the man was young and industrious. That he invested every cent in Nicaragua Midland, lost his money and took to rum as a consolation."

"That's our man," said the chief inspector, positively. "Applebee, let's get to work on this at once."

There was no time lost. Inspector Applebee and his assistants were soon scouring the city for information concerning Mr. Willard Smith, late clerk with North & Stackhouse. But the quest presented some unexpected difficulties, and when Tuesday morning came it had not yet achieved success.

Applebee was scarcely awake on Tuesday morning when the following telegram was placed in his hands:

"Hartford, Conn., 6 a. m.

"Important! Meet me at headquarters at 11.

"WHITE."

"Does he bring Stella North with him?" was the grave question that persisted in Applebee's mind during the intervening time. "If so, I am confident that we are nearing the end of this perplexing case."

He communicated his anxiety to the chief inspector, and both men waited with impatience the coming of the man who had gone in quest of the mysterious fugitive. Alas, for their hopes! Inspector White was quite alone.

The three men were closeted together as soon as he arrived.

"Not a trace of her?" exclaimed Applebee, impatiently.

"Slipped through my fingers like a fish!" said White. "Circumstances very peculiar. Whole thing mysterious; more than mysterious—suspicious."

"How do you mean?"

White placed his hand impressively on Applebee's shoulder, and though the door was shut, spoke in almost a whisper:

"I tell you, man, it is one of two things. That girl's either made away with herself, or she's had help to escape."

"It's likely enough that she had help to escape," observed the chief. "But I know of no good reason why she should go outside of the state of Massachusetts for the purpose of committing suicide."

"Wait till you have heard me," said White, eagerly. "Observe the facts carefully. I traced this girl to the Albany depot, and through the hackman, who bought her ticket to Hartford, was able to go direct to her stopping place. There I expected trouble. Not a bit of it. Everybody knew about her. Why? Well, I'll tell you why. Somebody had got ahead of us; that's all. A black-haired young man about 30 years of age, who wrote his name William C. Waterston, had been up in the morning making inquiries all over the place, representing her as insane."

"Evidently an assumed name," muttered Applebee, apprehensively. "Couldn't you get a full description?"

"You may be sure I did, even to the cut of his shoes. But wait a bit. I haven't got to the end. This young man hired a carriage at East Hartford and started out upon the road in chase of the girl. That he overtook her I have positive evidence. That she thereafter disappeared and that he went on alone I'm equally well informed."

"What?" ejaculated Applebee.

"Just as I tell you," said White. "I traced this woman to a certain place on the road between Hartford and Buckland. Abruptly all trace of her disappears. She is seen in conversation with this man, and not again by anybody in either direction. Meanwhile the man kept on alone. He was seen by several people by himself in the carriage. He drove clear to Vernon, sent the carriage back to East Hartford by a messenger, and there he disappears, too."

"Great powers!" exclaimed the chief. "We're outwitted."

"For the time it would seem so."

"For the time!" echoed the chief, irascibly. "Don't you see what this means? The girl was a greenhorn. The man was an expert. I'll bet you a hundred dollars he had that girl all the time in the bottom of his carriage. Why didn't he go back to Hartford? Can't you see his purpose? The New York & New England railroad runs through Vernon. By this time both principal and accomplice are safe in the city of New York."

The two assistants stared blankly.

"At any rate," said Applebee, "it plainly demonstrates one thing. We're dealing with professionals."

"Professional what?" asked the chief, angrily. "What is there in the line of a professional about this affair? Was there any theft, any property missing? This isn't a burglary, my friend; it's a murder."

"So, indeed," said Applebee. "But professionals have been hired before now to do a job of that kind. It's no use for you to tell me that this chap doesn't know the ropes, inspector."

The chief seemed struck by his remark, and became thoughtful.

"Write out the fullest possible description of the man," he said to White. "We'll see what we can do; though I'm afraid we've botched it."

Inspector White took out his notes, and, seating himself at a table, began immediately to comply with the request. In the midst of the work a messenger ventured to bring a card to the door.

"Humph," said the chief. "Kingman F. Thomas, of the Globe, is here, and he says that his business is important and immediate."

"Let him come in, then," advised Applebee. "I tell you that man cut his eye-teeth years ago. If he says important he means important."

The chief gave a sign of acquiescence and shortly after the door opened to admit Mr. Kingman F. Thomas. Quietly dignified, and entirely master of himself, as upon all occasions, the reporter cast a quick glance upon the group. Without a word he advanced to the table, inserted his hand in his breast, took therefrom something enwrapped in a newspaper, and laid it down before the chief inspector.

"What is it, Thomas?" queried Applebee, curiously.

"Look at it," returned the reporter, briefly.

The chief undid the wrapping and took out an old-fashioned 32 caliber, four-barreled, breech-loading pistol, about eight inches in length, and stained with rust in several places.

Everybody started and looked eagerly from the weapon to the serious face of the man who had brought it.

"It is just as I found it," he said, quietly, "with the exception of the rust. I took it out of the water, and I didn't care to wipe it much, for fear of destroying the smut on that empty barrel."

"Well," said the chief, with an assumption of indifference, "why do you bring it here?"

"I considered it my duty to do so, sir."

"To be sure; but what makes you think so? In other words, where did you find it?"

"I found it in the water on the shore at Swampscott."

"Swampscott!" ejaculated Applebee, who began to examine the weapon with avidity. "The deuce you did! When?"

"Sunday night, about nine o'clock."

"Sunday!" echoed the chief inspector, sharply, "and it is now Tuesday morning. You were evidently in no haste."

"I went out of town by a very early train on Monday. This is the first opportunity I have had, gentlemen."

"How came you to be wading in the water at Swampscott after dark, Thomas?" questioned Applebee.

"Well, sir, it won't take me long to tell you what little I know about the matter. I stipulate but one thing. This must not be given to the press. You agree? Very well. I was passing the North villa when I saw a woman enveloped in a long cloak stealing out of the garden. I followed her, deeming her appearance suspicious. She went toward the shore, and I thought I saw her throw something into the water. Waiting till she had gone, I waded out and found this. I ran up the street, hoping to catch her, but missed the last train in. She seems to have been in better luck."

The three inspectors exchanged significant glances.

"And didn't you see her face, Thomas?" Applebee eagerly inquired.

"I did not; no."

"And you have no idea who she is?"

Thomas hesitated a moment before replying.

"I don't know that I care to state theories. You have enough of your own."

"Well, Mr. Thomas," said the chief, at last, "I think you are entitled to our most sincere thanks for important evidence in the North case. Still, in matters of this kind delays are dangerous. It does seem as if you might have found some way to get this to us before this."

"I preferred to deliver it in person," said Thomas, quietly. "I never take any chances in a matter of this importance."

"You prefer to be slow but sure, I suppose," said the chief, smiling. "Well, Applebee, here it is. It won't take you long to verify your suspicions about it."

"I rather suspect that Thomas has already done that," Applebee said.

"I took that liberty, yes," agreed the reporter.

"To whom did you take it?"

"To Comfort Harwood, Swampscott."

"When?"

"This morning—the only opportunity I have had."

"And what did she say?"

"She positively identified it as the property of the late Paul North."

This appeared to be the extent of Thomas' information. When he went out, White said with a smile:

"Bless me if that man wouldn't stand as a model for this description I am writing."

"Eh!" exclaimed the chief inspector, turning suddenly in his chair. "Applebee, watch that man!"

"What? Thomas?" cried the subordinate, in amused amazement.

"That same Thomas," said the chief, dryly, "unless you want the newspapers to get ahead of us in this matter. For I tell you that man knows more than he has told us."

CHAPTER XIII.

STILL THE MOISSOT WOMAN.

Early in the morning of the Monday, when Thomas was on his way to Hartford Detective Lamm unlocked his office door. Almost the first object to catch his eye as he entered the room was a folded note lying upon the floor.

"Am called out of town on an important case," ran the brief, hasty pencil message. "Will see you as soon as I get back. Meanwhile look out for developments at Swampscott. [illegible]"

John Lamm was puzzled and curious, but, as he had already taken the additional precaution to put both Moffett and an intimate friend of the butler, the parlor maid at the North villa, upon his salary list and was reasonably confident that they meant to serve him faithfully, he was not particularly anxious.

He opened his desk, ran through the letters that had come, and then sat back in his chair to hastily peruse the morning papers.

"Not a thing new in the case," he mentally commented. "What a lot of words that man Thomas can string together about nothing, and yet leave the impression on our minds that we have really been reading something important! Evidently he didn't think his clue ripe enough to give it to the public."

He turned the paper over carelessly. Suddenly he started and clutched the newspaper with a nervous grasp.

"Hullo! Hullo!" he exclaimed aloud. "What the deuce does this mean?"

For there, staring him in the face, was this:

"Wanted—Information concerning the whereabouts of Marie Moissot, formerly of New Orleans, recently of New York, creole extraction; 27 years of age. Large reward will be paid for reliable information if sent immediately. Address D. 136, Globe office."

"Well, this is a coincidence," Mr. Lamm reflected. "The same day that my advertisement to the same effect appears in New York, the advertisement of some other party appears in Boston. Now, who is it?"

A prolonged reflection, leaning back in his chair under the stimulation of a fresh cigar, was unproductive of a satisfactory answer to the detective's query. But the reverie ended in active measures.

He suddenly arose, closed his desk, locked the office and went out. Bending his steps in the direction of the Globe office, he was soon conversing with one of the clerks, but the result was not propitious.

"Oh, we don't pretend to know who puts in any of these 'wants,'" the clerk said. "There are too many of them. We know these advertisers only by the tickets. When a man puts in a want, we give him a ticket, dated and numbered with a stamp. That ticket is good for mail for ten days from the date of it."

"Did you take this 'ad.' yourself?"

"Haven't a doubt of it; but I took no note of the person who presented it. Couldn't even say whether it was a man or a woman."

The detective returned to his office and began a search for suitable writing material. He was not long in finding what he wanted, for his desk was amply provided with stationery adapted for all possible contingencies. Selecting a modest envelope, notepaper of a poor quality, a fine pen, and a bottle of pale ink, he took infinite pains to produce the following:

"D. 196, Globe Office.

"In answer to advertisement of this a. m. would say I have information that may be useful. If you care to see me, will be at corner of Shawmut avenue and Dwight street at seven p. m. Look for lady with red cherries on her bonnet.

"CONFIDENTIAL."

Examining with a critical eye this effusion, John Lamm became convinced that he could not better it, sealed it and hastened to the post office with it. On his return he found one of his assistants in the office.

"You know where this lady lives in Shawmut avenue?" he said, presenting a name on a bit of paper. "Well, get down there before she gets away, and tell her that I must see her at once on important business."

The man departed, leaving John Lamm in sole possession of the office.

Eleven o'clock brought him news of the failure of North & Stackhouse, news which he received with admirable imperturbability.

"And how much do they fail for?" he asked his informant.

"Everything, I hear. Even North's personal property is likely to go. His town house and his house at Swampscott."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Sept. 6, 1908.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Songs of the heart.—IX. A life lived with God.—Ps. xci. Consecration meeting.

A life with God! It seems impossible that such a life could be lived by man, and yet we have the teistimony of both God and man that it is. "Enoch walked with God." He lived in intimate association with God, and when his enemies sought him to destroy him "he was not, for God took him." He who had lived with God upon earth was destined also to spend eternity with Him. Abraham was called "the friend"—"the friend of God." Friends also live together in sweetest fellowship and companionship. Thus Abraham lived with God. Christ says, "Abide with Me," and Christ is God. Therefore it is possible for all Christians to live with God, to "have our lives hid with God in Christ." The psalmist also bears testimony to the same fact when he says, "He that dwelleth in the secret place of the Most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty." Sweeter words containing a most precious truth have seldom been written. If we dwell in the secret place of the Most High and abide under the shadow of the Almighty we must indeed live close to God.

"The secret place of the Most High," where we should dwell, has been variously defined, but it undoubtedly refers to the holy of holies, where God dwelt upon earth. It was entered by the high priest alone, and that but once a year, bearing the blood of the atonement. But, if this be the place referred to, what does it mean? No man ever dwelt literally in the most holy place. The sense is therefore spiritual. The Jews entered there in the person of their representative once a year, but spiritually, or as long as they trusted God and obeyed Him, they figuratively abode there, even beneath the shadow of the Almighty. And during this time no evil befell them and no plague came nigh them. Today in the Lord Jesus Christ, our great High Priest, we dwell with God after the same fashion—that is, through trust in Him and obedience to His law we also are beyond harm. Sin's power, earthly care, danger and harm do not beset us, for "He hath given his angels charge of us, and they shall bear us up." To be sustained above adversity is equivalent to having no adversity, and if our lives are with God we should make it known to others, that they also may desire and seek and find this great blessing.

BIBLE READINGS.

Ps. xxvii, 1-7; xxxvii, 1-5; lxxxiv, 1-12; xc, 1, 2; cxxxix, 1-10; John xiv, 15-20; xv, 1-10; Rom. v, 1, 2; viii, 1; I John ii, 27-29.

Spiritual Workshop of the Church.

No! You are mistaken, brother. Christian Endeavor is distinctively a religious organization. It is the spiritual workshop of the church, the training school for young people in preparation for more efficient service as soldiers of the cross. As members of the Christian Endeavor society we have entered into a covenant with the Lord "to do whatever He would like to have us do." We are in "partnership" with His Son and should be faithful in attending to the Master's business. Our endeavor partnership is not a limited partnership, wherein a person is only responsible for the amount of his investment in the business. Neither must it be compared with corrupt political organizations that place state funds in banks for the purpose of financiering railroads, wreck banks at leisure, destroy homes and blight the lives of many innocent people. But it is a partnership, an organization, a stock company, if you please, wherein every man, woman or child can take stock according to their ability—stock that is always above par and never watered or sold in the pit where lambs are shorn, a company that always has its books open for inspection, where there is no necessity for keeping a man on the lid and where the highest dividends on investments are declared and paid daily in blessings received from God.—A. J. Shartle in Secretary's Bulletin.

Christian Endeavor's Magna Charta.

Dr. Clark in an introduction to Rev. F. B. Meyer's charming little volume "I Promise" enunciates these important truths:

"The prayer meeting covenant pledge is the mainstay of Christian Endeavor. It is to Christian Endeavor what Magna Charta was to British liberty, what the constitution of the United States is to the American patriot, what the Mayflower compact was to the Puritan, what national covenant was to the covenanters. The societies that adopt and live up to the covenant pledge with fidelity have always prospered. No society that has ignored or weakened the pledge has long continued to do a conspicuous good work."

In Dr. Sheldon's Society.

The Christian Endeavor society in Dr. Charles M. Sheldon's church, Topeka, Kan., has a splendid money raising record for last year. It paid out for its running expenses $79.76; for work in Tennessee town, the colored settlement for which Dr. Sheldon has done so much, $78; for outside Christian Endeavor work in general, $54.60; for a missionary to the Indians in Arizona, a member of the society, $120; for Micronesian missions, $200; for a missionary in Africa, $10, and for a colored boy in an industrial school, $10. This record for a society of only about a hundred members is an indication that Dr. Sheldon's Endeavorers are walking "in His steps."

Baseball and General Sports

BASEBALL.

Manager Dorflinger will depend on Clifford Randolph to pitch his team to victory on Saturday against the strong McNulty Brothers' team of New York.

By pitching and winning two games for Providence against Rochester on Sunday, Jack Cronin has earned the title of "iron man" in the Eastern League. Yet Plainfield fans can remember when Cronin allowed Somerville fifteen hits on Crescent Oval.

The Detroit American League team has decided to test the law in that city which provides that baseball shall not be played on Sunday. The Detroits and Clevelands played at the former place Sunday for the purpose of testing the law.

McQuillen, one of the star twirlers on the staff of the Philadelphia Nationals, blanked Brooklyn on Tuesday by a score of 9 to 0. He not only pitched great ball, but his hitting was a feature.

The Giants appear to be determined to win the National League pennant. On Tuesday the team took two games from Boston and well that they did for Pittsburg continued to win, although Chicago dropped one to St. Louis.

The latest dope is that Jim McGuire, recently deposed as manager for the Boston Americans, is to become manager for the Yankees next season. The Metropolitan sporting writers have figured it out that he will succeed Elberfield. The whole season has practically been one of experiment for owner Frank Farrell and if he does not begin to get returns a big shakeup is promised.

GOLF.

Gilbert Nichols, the long driving professional from Boston, won the seventy-two hole open golf tournament at Van Cortlandt Park, Tuesday, with a score of 294, or an average of 73½ strokes per round. H. H. Barker, of Garden City, who made such a good showing the first day, was second.

"Marty" O'Loughlin, who engaged in the first day's play at Van Cortlandt Park, did not continue on Tuesday, as expected. No doubt the fact that his wrist still troubles him had something to do with keeping him out of the tournament.

In the second round of the Irish open golf championship at New Castle, Ireland, on Tuesday, D. Grant, an American, beat Newett, who was the Irish champion in 1905, at the twenty-second hole.

Somerville vs. High Bridge.

The West Ends, of Somerville and the High Bridge team will clash at Somerville, Saturday afternoon and the friends of Jimmie Montross, who will twirl for the Somerset county club, are sure that he will continue his winning streak. Last Saturday Jimmie defeated the Clinton Avenues by a score of 2 to 1 and as the latter defeated High Bridge a few weeks ago, Somerville should have no trouble in winning out Saturday.

LACKAWANNA APPEALS LEVY.

State Assessors Hear Testimony in Application for $3,100,000 Reduction.

The New Jersey State Board of Tax Assessors began taking testimony yesterday in Jersey City in the appeal of the Lackawanna Railroad Company from the local board's shore front assessments in Jersey City and Hoboken by the board. The railroad wants its assessment on its Jersey City property reduced from $7,000,000 to $3,900,000.

The assessors have valued the shore front railroad property in Jersey City at $39,000,000. William D. Edwards and Richard V. Lindabury appeared for the Lackawanna, and Corporation Counsel Warren Dixon, Corporation Attorney James J. Murphy and Harry Lane for Jersey City, and Corporation Attorney Horace Allen appeared for Hoboken. Testimony was taken concerning the value of the Lackawanna's shore front property in Hoboken. President Henry J. Lohmann of the Hoboken Tax oBard testified that the Hoboken board assessed it at $2,122,356, which is $150 a foot front.

Harvest Home and Grand Rally.

Under the auspices of the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church, a harvest home and grand rally will be held at the church on Wednesday and Thursday, September 16 and 17, for the purpose of raising $200 with which to meet some of the debts of the church. The stewardesses and Trustee Aid, under the supervision of John Jones, steward, and Rev. E. B. Maynard, trustee, will have direction of the affair. An old-fashioned country dinner, roast pig, chicken pot pie, etc., will be served from 2 o'clock in the afternoon until 10 o'clock at night, and an open-air concert will be held each day. The re-union grand rally will be held on Sunday, October 4. The committee of arrangements comprises Rev. J. T. Diggs, pastor; Mrs. Anna Holmes, president of stewardesses; Mrs. Anna Jones, president of Trustee Aid; Emma Thompson, secretary of committee, and A. P. White, church clerk.

WRECK VICTIM RECOVERS TO DOCTORS' SURPRISE.

Notwithstanding that the surgeons in Overlook Hospital, Summit, ceased operating several times, believing that death had claimed him, Leon Emmons, the twenty-two-year old brakeman who was caught between the edge of the roof of a car and the embankment when his train, known as the "Millionaires' Express," was wrecked on the Passaic and Delaware branch of the Lackawanna, near Millington, the morning of June 5, is today walking about "as good as new."

Young Emmons was seated on a trunk in the combination passenger and baggage car, next to the engine, when the car left the rail and tipped over on its side, the young brakeman being thrown through the door, the edge of the car roof dragging against his body the length of the car before the engine came to a stop.

When Emmons was extricated, the physicians believed he could live but a few hours. He was hurried to Overlook Hospital, where Drs. I. W. Gray and William H. Lawrence, Jr., found Emmons was suffering from internal hemorrhages. It was while endeavoring to check the hemorrhages the surgeons ceased work several times, believing death had intervened. Besides the hemorrhages the young brakeman suffered from a fracture of the right collarbone ,fractures of both pelvis bones, compound fracture of the right thigh and the left ankle was broken.

The victim finally began to show signs of improvement and after ten weeks' stay in the hospital he was able to walk about his room. A few days ago Emmons left the hospital and is now at his home in Gladstone, although being still under the care of the physicians.

DEFECTIVE SWITCH CAUSES A BAD COAL TRAIN WRECK.

For the third time within two months, both east and westbound trains on the Pennsylvania Railroad were tied up at South Elizabeth last night, when a coal train of nine cars was derailed by a defective switch. The train was bound east and was traveling at a fair rate of speed. Several of the cars were thrown over on the westbound passenger track, and all traffic was tied up. The eastbound trains were unable to run for upwards of an hour, while the westbound tracks were blocked until daylight this morning.

The wrecking train from Jersey City arrived on the scene shortly after 10 o'clock. The derailment occurred about 9:30, and an immense crowd gathered. Owing to the great darkness prevailing the repair gang found it difficult to work.

The wreck occurred 100 yards north of the South Elizabeth station. It was on this spot, one month ago, that ten cars of a freight train were derailed. Two weeks previous a broken axle on a freight car resulted in the wrecking of a passenger train, which was running parrallel to it. Three passengers were injured at that time.

Long Prison Terms for Two.

Flemington, Sept. 3.—William Bannon and Joseph Williams, who were arrested recently, charged with robbing Abram Peters, a veteran of the Civil War, five months ago, were sentenced to serve five and three years, respectively, in the penitentiary by Judge John L. Connell yesterday morning. Peters was beaten and robbed of about $80 pension money at his home, near Rocktown. Bannon was formerly assistant rural mail carrier between Lambertville and Mt. Airy. Bannon and Williams disappeared after the robbery. Bannon appeared at the Mt. Airy harvest home a few days ago and was arrested. Williams' arrest followed at Allentown, Mercer county. They confessed their crime.

Rounds Out Years of Service.

Rev. Dr. Thomas O'Hanlon, former president of Pennington Seminary, rounded out a quarter of a century as the preacher of the "washday" sermon at the Ocean Grove camp yesterday. He was greeted by a number who heard his first sermon twenty-five years ago. Eva Sharp, the singing evangelist from Philadelphia, was heard in the Fellowship service.

"Chimmie Fadden" for Congress.

E. B. Townsend ("Chimmie Fadden" is being proposed by Democrats of Montclair for Congress from that district. Mr. Townsend has never taken active interest in political affairs, but his friends believe that he would make a capable representative at Washington, and they want him to run.

Harry Brick, of South avenue, who has been employed at L. W. Randolph's pharmacy this summer, will return to his studies at the High School, when the Fall term opens.

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Staats, of the borough, are sojourning at Netcong.

Mrs. A. G. Jenkins, of First place is visiting Mrs. Charles Spencer, of Bayonne.

Mrs. William Egbert, of Brooklyn is visiting friends in this city for a few days.

Miss Mary Dunham, of West Front street, has returned from her summer vacation.

Miss Jeanne Muir, of Essex street, has returned from a week's visit with relatives at Paterson.

Mr. and Mrs. William Holmes, of Arlington avenue, have returned from their summer outing.

Edmund Kenney, of Watchung avenue, has returned from a visit with relatives at Bound Brook.

George L. Tunton, of this city, will spend Saturday, Sunday and Labor Day with relatives at Bayonne.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis DeLacy Hyde, of Mountain avenue, have returned from their summer outing.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford D. Manning, of Washington avenue, have returned from an outing at the seashore.

Mrs. J. B. Dovell and daughter, Miss Marion Dovell, of Newark, are guests of Miss Etta S. Raybert, of East Second street.

Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan and Wilbur Randolph, of Duer street, are sojourning at Auburn, N. Y. They report good fishing.

Harrison Fahn and Clements Bechtel have returned from a sojourn at at Asbury Park, where they were registered at the Montauk.

Allen E. Beals, of East Front street, New Jersey editor of The New York Tribune, has been spending a few days at Asbury Park.

Mrs. Charles W. H. Hamilton and children, of East Fourth street, left this morning for a visit to Mr. Hamilton's home in Maryland.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Hand, of Watchung avenue, are planning a trip to Canada, this month. They will be away about ten days.

Mr. and Mrs. George Cornwell, formerly of this city, but late of Cranford, have moved into their new home, at East Seventh street and Watchung avenue, formerly owned by J. Wesley Johnson. They are the parents of Dr. F. W. Cornwell, of East Front street.

Andrew Carey and his sisters, the Misses Clara and Cora Carey, of West Fourth street, were called to Virginia yesterday on account of the critical illness of their father, Rev. G. C. Carey, formerly pastor of the New York Avenue Baptist church, colored, of Westfield.

Samuel Giles, of Craig place, an employe of the Union Beef Company, on East Third street, underwent a successful operation at Roosevelt Hospital, New York, yesterday, and his speedy recovery is anticipated. He had been detained at home for several days by illness before his physician decided that an operation would be necessary.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Christian church will hold a peach and ice cream sociable tonight.

The decorations and work of renovation at Grace church are nearing completion and the rector, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, has planned to hold the re-opening services in the church on Sunday, September 13. The services on Sunday will be held in the parish house.

STAY IN HERRON CASE.

Judge Cowenhoven, of New Brunswick, yesterday secured a stay of execution for Archibald Herron, the Metuchen murderer, sentenced to be electrocuted some time next week.

Open Shop Not Opposed.

The open shop plan of the Master Plumbers' Association of Elizabeth, went into effect yesterday, and the plumbing contractors report no serious interference with their work. Union men have nothing to say and, as far as can be learned, none of them has refused to return because of the new conditions. As far as the building trades are concerned, Elizabeth is now practically an "open shop" town, both the masons and carpenters having recently failed in their efforts to establish unilimited union conditions there.

Lang is Officially Sane.

No action has been taken as yet regarding the inquiry into the mental condition of Frederick Lang, the New Brunswick murderer, under sentence of death. Judge Booraem has been instructed to conduct such a trial, to determine whether Lang is crazy, but he has not summoned a jury as he has not heard anything as yet from the counsel for the condemned murderer. As the time of execution is this month, it is expected that something will be done soon. In the meantime Lang is officially sane.

Mrs. Mary Kling.

Mrs. Mary Kling, of Newark, died Tuesday afternoon at the home of her son, Charles Kling, of Stebbins place, aged fifty-one years. She was on a visit to her son when she died and had been ill for sometime. The remains will be taken to Newark, where the funeral service will be held from St. Peter's church tomorrow. The burial will be in the Holy Sepulchre cemetery, Newark.

LIGHT COMPANIES ARE WAGING A MERRY WAR

Merchants of the central business section of Newark are finding much to interest them in a war that is being waged between the big Public Service Corporation of New Jersey and a new $40,000 company known as the Arcade Block Lighting Company, which seeks to win away from the multi-million dollar corporation some of its patronage at three cents per kilowatt hour less than the monopoly has been exacting.

The fight took a crucial turn yesterday when it became whispered about that the Arcade people were in some mysterious manner, conveying electricity across the property occupied by Adolph Eisele's shoe store next to their offices in Broad street and was supplyink the buildings to the south of that establishment.

The Public Service office was notified and its officials concluded their rivals had secretly dug a tunnel under the Eisele building.

All day a gang of laborers was at work in the cellar of that structure digging for the supposed tunnel. When darkness stopped the work it had not been discovered.

While the Public Service men were frantically striving to find the hidden spring from whence the mystic fluid of the Arcade Company was flowing into the premises beyond that controlled by the big company, the officials of the Arcade Company remained in their offices and smiled at the tactics of the enemy. Clayton J. Morse, its secretary and treasurer, said:

"Let them enjoy themselves seeking for our supposed subterranean passage. We are furnishing electricity to the former and present customers of the Public Service. How was are doing it is our secret. Maybe we have solved the problem of wireless transmission of electrical current in a commercial way."

DISPUTE WAXES OVER ROAD.

Dr. Trimmer Adds to the Whitehouse Highway Discussion by New Letter.

High Bridge, Sept. 3.—Stone road building in Hunterdon county still remains in the limelight, especially the Whitehouse-Flemington road, now in course of construction.

Dr. E. D. Trimmer, member of the local Common Council, has issued another appeal to the taxpayers and a reply to Colonel Frederick Gilkyson, State commissioner of roads. The letter follows an open letter addressed to Colonel Gilkyson by his father, former Assemblyman L. H. Trimmer, printed in the State papers August 29. Dr. Trimmer's letter reviews the conditions that point to limestone being used instead of traprock on the road, reasserts taxpayers are being duped and says the material used should cost $13,000 less than it really does.

Mrs. Frank Linke, of West Front street, who has been abroad, is now on her way home.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew E. Kenney, of Watchung avenue, have returned from a visit to Boston.

MORE ASSEMBLY NAMES

A. W. Schwartz and Charles Timble Now Mentioned for Moxon's Place.

BOTH ARE ELIZABETH MEN.

County Chairman Smith in Town for a Brief Stay but Throws No Light on the Situation.

Now that Assemblyman John R. Moxon, of Elizabeth, has withdrawn from the race and will not take a renomination, the Republicans at the county seat are looking around for a strong candidate to run on the ticket with Assemblymen Kirstein and Pierce, both of whose petitions were filed with the county clerk today. The return of County Chairman F. H. Smith from the Adirondacks for a few days was thought to have some significance, but when Mr. Smith was questioned this morning prior to his return to the mountains again, he simply smiled and said: "There's nothing doing."

Among those mentioned for the nomination are Augustus W. Schwartz, advertising manager for The Evening Times, of Elizabeth, and Charles Timble, a lawyer at the county seat, but neither one is considered especially strong. Mr. Timble, it was said today, believes that he has an excellent chance, but some of the wise ones give a wink of the eye and shake their heads. Lloyd Thompson, of Westfield, was mentioned but he is now said to be out of the race. The nomination rightfully belongs to Elizabeth and it is thought that a good man will be found there to make the fight.

There is still considerable mystery about the Congressional nomination and the appearance of County Chairman F. H. Smith at home this week did not tend to clear the atmosphere. Congressman Charles N. Fowler's friends and supporters declare that he cannot be beaten for the renomination, that will have a sufficient number of delegates to again put him in the race. On the other hand there are other prominent members of the party who think otherwise, although they are not saying a great deal about it. A close friend of Congressman Fowler said yesterday that it would be an exceedingly difficult matter to beat him for the nomination or a re-election. He considered Mr. Fowler the strongest possible man in sight, and pointed to the fact that Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert recently declared himself in favor of the Elizabeth man. This he considers of great importance, adding that there is probably no better financier in the country than Mr. Gilbert who is in a position to know the strength of Mr. Fowler in matters of finance and the value of his currency measure.

Settling On Armory Site.

The Somerset County Board of Chosen Freeholders have about closed the deal with the Hebrew Society for the lot of ground on east Grove street for the armory site. It was at first thought that the price asked for the ground was too much, but as the society would not consent to sell for any less than $2,000 it was finally decided that the amount should be paid, as the site at that point had been approved by the State Military Board.

Y. W. C. A. Juniors' Jollification.

About a score of members of the Junior Department of the Y. M. C. A. had a jolly evening of informal entertainment at the association rooms last night. The time was spent in playing all sorts of games, and in connection with the informal program, Miss Helen Wooley gave two delightful recitations. Miss Margaret E. Mosher and Miss Mina Bock formed the association committee in charge of the affair.

Council Committee Meetings.

The Councilmanic street committee held a short meeting last night, transacting little or no business. Several matters pertaining to street work were not ready for consideration and they will come up at another meeting. Councilman Herbert Buxton, chairman, has called a meeting of the finance committee for tonight.

College Dedication August 18.

Dedication exercises for the New Mount Saint Mary's College on the mountain will be held Friday, October 18, and not October 11, as stated in another paper. Bishop McFaul, of Newark, will be in charge of the ceremonies.

Borough Fathers To Meet.

The September meeting of the North Plainfield Council will be held tonight in the borough Council chamber.

UNION FREEHOLDERS IN MONTHLY SESSION

The Union County Board of Freeholders at its September meeting in the Court House, Elizabeth, yesterday, transacted but little business, and none of direct interest to Plainfield. It was stated that the freeholders would probably take up the the request of the Elizabeth City Council regarding the delay of the Morris County Traction Company in completing its road, at the next meeting.

Freeholder Fred B. Cladek, of Rahway, secured an appropriation of $500 for the repair of the Hazelwood avenue bridge in that city, and County Engineer Jacob Bauer reported that a similar amount would be needed to repair the piers of the bridge over the Rahway river at Rahway. These piers are now crumbling away.

The board received an invitation to send a representation to the convention of the American Automobile Association, Good Roads' Association and New Jersey Grangers to be held at Atlantic City September 24-25, and Major King, director, said that he would probably attend. Other freeholders may also go to the seashore.

John Haddon, of Elizabeth, who presented a bill to the board for damages to the tires on his motorcycle caused by oiling the streets, was advised that the board has no authority to reimburse him. County Attorney W. R. Codington, who reported on the matter, said that the streets are oiled for the benefit of the public and Mr. Haddon has no claim for damages such as he claims.

THIMBLE CIRCLE HAS A DELIGHTFUL OUTING

The Thimble Circle, of this city, of which Mrs. Floyd T. Woodhull, of West Fron street, is an enthusiastic member, was entertained yesterday in royal fashion at "Barwood Cabin," the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Woodhull at Lake Hopatcong. Mrs. Woodhull conceived the idea of having the circle visit her before she returned to Plainfield, and not a thing was left undone in making the trip one of great delight to all.

The members of the circle were met at Nolan's Point by Mr. Woodhull and his son, Edson, and given a cordial reception after which they were invited to get into Mr. Woodhull's launch, "Kate B." In a few minutes the party arrived at "Barwood Cabin," where another cordial reception awaited the women. With due care and thoughtfulness, Mrs. Woodhull had arranged every detail and the pretty summer home looked its very best.

After thoroughly enjoying the delights and comfort of the broad veranda, the company was invited to partake of a fine dinner. One of the features was the elaborate decorations of the table, made possible by a gift of beautiful flowers from Stanley, the florist of this city. A happy and pleasing conclusion to the repast was the distribution of souvenirs by Mrs. Woodhull to each member. They consisted of a napkin tied with ribbon to which was fastened a thimble and a celluloid circle, bearing the name of the recipient and the words "Barwood Cabin, September 4, 1908." Each guest also received from Mrs. E. C. Martin, a member, who is in the Thousand Islands, a souvenir postal card bearing different views of the Thousand Islands.

Following the dinner and all the pleasant features, the party was given a two hours' sail on the Lake in Mr. Woodhull's launch and this proved one of the most enjoyable events of the day. Mr. Woodhull stationed himself at the wheel, while his son, Edson, filled the position of engineer, to the satisfaction of all. All of the beauty spots of the Lake were visited and the guests were delighted with the trip and before they started on the homeward journey, personally thanked Mr. and Mrs. Woodhull and Edson, for their entertainment.

The members of the circle who enjoyed the trip comprised Mrs. John E. Dunn, Mrs. William H. Druse, Miss Lelia Druse, Mrs. Fred T. Dickerson, Mrs. Winfield Schomp, Mrs. Frank P. Storr, Mrs. A. L. Force, Miss Lillian A. Force, Mrs. Robert Clark, Jr., of this city, and Mrs. Frank Wynkoop, of Dunellen.

NEW MARKET PASTOR AT NETHERWOOD CAMP

"Jesus Christ, the Magnet," was the topic of a powerful and practical talk by Rev. George H. Gardner, pastor of the New Market Baptist church, who, with a delegation of twenty-five of his parishioners, conducted a service at the Netherwood Camp auditorium last night. In developing his theme, the speaker likened mankind to so many nails and Jesus Christ as the magnet. He had with him a powerful magnet, and brought home the lesson to the campers by using it to lift all sorts of nails, bright and rusted, straight and crooked. His illustration as to how the Chrisitan influence of the personality of Our Lord operated was especially powerful, for he used his magnet to raise a bright nail from a glass of muddy water. The nail typified the person who tries to lead the right kind of a life, though living in sordid environment.

Miss Minnie Naylor rendered three violin solos, "Love Song," "Petite Bolero," and "Home, Sweet Home," and the entire New Market delegation joined in the rendition of "The Lord's Business" and "Oh, Make Me Pure." Mrs. Charles S. Day presided at the melodeon and the devotional exercises included prayer by George Hadley, of the camp committee.

NEW JERSEY VETERAN NOW HEAD OF G.A.R.

The annual election of the Grand Army officers was held yesterday afternoon at Toledo, O., and resulted as follows:

Commander-in-chief, Henry M. Nevius, of Red Bank, N. J. (unanimously); senior vice-commander-in-chief, General J. K. Hamilton, of Toledo; junior vice-commander-in-chief, C. F. Royce, of California; chaplain-in-chief, J. F. Spence, of Knoxville, Tenn.; surgeon, General G. Lane, of Tennyhill.

Commander Burton in his annual report showed that on December 31, 1906, the members of the G. A. R. in good standing numbered 229,932. On December 31, 1907, the membership numbered 223,157, a net loss for the year of 4,775. During the year of 1907 the loss by death was 10,242, which was partly offset by the addition to the muster roll of 5,467.

He declared that the G. A. R. suspended list is very large and he urged that whenever it is apparent that a comrade cannot pay his dues without detriment to himself or family, that his post should remit them.

The New York delegation, at the afternoon meeting tomorrow, will introduce a resolution urging the G. A. R. to urge before Congress an amendment to the McCumber act making the maximum rate of $20 per month pension apply to the age of 65 instead of 75 years, as now.

Commander Nevius last night announced that the adjutant-generalship will go to a representative of the Department of New Jersey.

SUNDAY "CLOSING DAY" AT THE NETHERWOOD CAMP.

The closing service of the season at the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp will be held in the camp auditorium Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, when the program will include remarks by several friends of Miss Curry in the work, a short history of the fifth season—which is just concluding, and a special service of vocal and instrumental music. George E. Hall of the camp committee, will be in charge of the service. The New York children, nearly three hundred in number, will leave for their city homes on Labor Day.

Thanked The Daily Press.

The executive board of the City Union of The King's Daughters, at its regular meeting yesterday, extended a vote of thanks to the Daily Press for the kindly interest taken by this newspaper in the baby camp work during the past summer and for the efficient service in collecting and forwarding funds for the cause. Notice of the action was sent to this office by Mrs. Josephine H. Lapsley, corresponding secretary.

Somerville Firemen's Parade.

At a meeting of the officers of the Somerville Fire Department held in the engine house in Somerville, it was decided to hold the annual parade and inspection on Wednesday afternoon October 21. A number of officers of the Plainfield, Morristown and other neighboring fire companies will be invited.

TROLLEY CAR RAN WILD

Went Three Blocks After Motorman Was Knocked Off the Platform.

STOPPED BY THE CONDUCTOR.

Injured Man Afterward Found Unconscious in the Roadway—Can't Explain the Accident.

A main line trolley car, east bound in charge of Motorman William Bates and Conductor Giener, both of this city, ran a distance of three blocks at Roselle, last night, without a motorman, the latter being thrown off his car in some way which he cannot explain. The conductor quickly discovered that Bates was not on the car and he took charge, running the trolley into Elizabeth. A westbound car found Bates lying alongside the road, picked him up and brought him to Plainfield.

While he could not explain how he happened to fall off his car, Bates was not injured in the least, and he reported for work this morning as usual. Superintendent Leuhr in speaking of the matter today, said that yesterday being pay day he was afraid that someone had jumped on the car last night in an attempt to rob the motorman. There have been rumors that rough looking men have been seen hanging about dark corners along the line of the trolley. When Bates was picked up an investigation showed that no attempt had been made to rob him. He had his money and watch and nothing about his person was disturbed.

While returning to Plainfield Bates occasionally complained of a pain in his head and the only explanation that is offered concerning the accident is that the motorman may have suffered a dizzy spell which caused him to lose his balance and fall from the car.

DEATH OF MURDERER DELAYED

Counsel Enabled to Carry Herron's Case to Jersey's Highest Court.

Death in the electric chair next week will not be the fate of Archibald Herron, who killed the Rev. S. V. D. Prickett in Metuchen on July 15. Herron's end was fixed for next week, but his lawyers have saved him temporarily. Vice-Chancellor Walker, acting for Chancellor Pitney, who is on his vacation, has refused to grant a writ of errors bringing Herron's case before the State Supreme Court on the grounds of insanity. The refusal enables C. T. Cowenhoven, Herron's counsel, to carry the case to the Court of Errors and Appeals, where it will be argued at the November term. Pending a decision there Herron's sentence will not be put into effect.

From his cell in the death house at Trenton, Herron has been sending out appeals to friends. He complains he has been confined too long, and that his rheumatism will become more painful if he is not released soon. Recently he wrote to President Roosevelt, and his friends assert this bears out the theory that Herron is insane.

Carnival a Great Success.

An amusement carnival was held on the grounds of William H. Ten-Eyck, Iselin road, at the head of Dark Lane, yesterday afternoon and evening, for the benefit of Marconnier chapel. The affair was a great success, largely patronized and the chapel will realize a good sum of money. In the afternoon there was a butterfly hunt for the children and a large number of summer resort attractions brought a great many people together last night. The large lawn and grove were beautifully decorated and illuminated for the accasion and in addition to the amusements, refreshments of all kind were sold and good music was provided. Many Plainfielders atended the affair making the trip from this city by means of an auto-bus which was run every half-hour from Thompson's garage.

McMurty Back From Asylum.

John McMurty, of the borough, who was removed to the State insane asylum at Trenton about a month ago, as a result of a hallucination he had which landed him in a North Plainfield police court cell, has been discharged from the institution, and has returned to his home on Manning avenue. McMurty had the idea that he was being pursued by a band of whiskey distillers, who sought his life, and came to Chief Marshal Weiss for protection. Physicians declare the mental condition was but temporary and was probably brought on by the heat.

Mrs. Charles H. Grannatt, of West Fifth street, has returned home after a six weeks' pleasure trip to Canada.

SOMERSET'S TAX RATE TO BE LOWER THIS YEAR

Former Mayor N. B. Smalley, together with other members of the Somerset County Board for the Equalization of Taxes, is at Bernardsville today, investigating the tax assessments. It is reported that the ratables for Somerset county will be increased more than $4,000,000 over last year, when they totalled to nearly $23,000,000. It is also said that the county tax rate, which was 66 cents last year, will be reduced to about 60 cents.

Tax Assessor Justus H. Cooley said today that it is impossible for him to give even a general idea of the borough ratables, for his books are at present at Somerville and the values he assessed may be changed. The Board will meet at Somerville again Tuesday and after thot meeting the North Plainfield valuations will be definitely known and the tax rate can be figured out.

The cut in the county rate comes in spite of the fact that the Board of Freeholders has increased its annual budget by $10,000, owing to the purchase of the new armory site at Somerville and extra expense on roads. In Bridgewater township, it is reported, the rate will be much reduced, and there will also be reductions in many other districts.

BOROUGH MAY ADOPT DUST PREVENTATIVES

That "The Borough Bountiful" will follow "The City Beautiful" in using some sort of a dust killer on the North Plainfield streets next year is practically certain, but the "safe and sane" policy will prevent the borough officials from reaching any decision as to the process to be used on the streets for some time to come.

Mayor Samuel Townsend, who has just returned from his summer vacation, is much interested in the tarvia and asphaltoilene processes being tested on the city's streets, and is gathering data for the use of a similar patent dust-killer in North Plainfield. He has said that he thinks the processes are just what is needed in the borough, but added that nothing would be done until time enough had elapsed to prove the efficiency of the two methods of road treatment.

North Plainfield has had considerable experience with roads and great care has been used by the street committee of the borough Council to secure the best highways possible for boroughites. The Hassam pavement on Somerset street was an experiment in a road process for the business section, but many North Plainfielders are dissatisfied with it. It has been reported that brick pavement, similar to that used on the Union county section of Somerset street, is being considered as a pave for the rest of the thoroughfare, but the question of a dust killer for the residential section is being agitated more actively at present. Mr. Townsend thoroughly appreciates the "dust nuisance," and believes that with the adaption of a process treatment the borough water wagon may easily be put on the retired list and there will be fewer complaints from residents troubled by the dust of automobiles.

Reunion of Veterans.

The eighteenth annual reunion of the Thirtieth Regiment, N. J. Vols., will be held with Gen. Wadsworth Post, No. 73, G. A. R., at Somerville, on Wednesday, September 16. James Vanderveer, of North Branch, is the president of the association, and Nelson Runyon, of this city, the vice-president, while James Bowman, of South Branch, is the secretary. The Plainfield members of the association are as follows: Nelson Runyon, Sergeant C. H. Randolph, Theodore I. Runyon, Deputy Sheriff Peter V. Weaver, Corporal David R. Weaver, J. B. Stryker, John Giddes, Jacob Manning, J. Lance Mundy and Randolph Thorn, all of whom expect to attend the reunion.

Home for a Few Days.

County Chairman F. H. Smith, who with Mrs. Smith, has been spending some time at Long Lake in the Adirondacks, returned home this week for a couple of days on business. He left today for the Adirondacks, where he will remain until just before the time for holding primaries. A fine coat of tan indicates that he has been thoroughly enjoying outdoor life.

Dissolved Co-Partnership.

The shoe firm of A. E. and A. L. Giddes, of 302 West Front street, corner of Madison avenue, has dissolved co-partnership and the business will hereafter be conducted by Amos E. Giddes.

Miss Minnie Hahn, of East Second street, has returned from a visit with Somerville relatives.

JERSEY CENTRAL PUTS STOP TO PETTY STEALING

Determined to put a stop to the practice of petty stealing of ice on the part of employes for personal use, the New Jersey Central has during the past two weeks laid off several men who have been found guilty of appropriating summer coolth in this manner. In nearly every case the ice has been taken from the terminal at Jersey City and carried to various homes. The practice has become so common that the railroad officials have been forced to take action. In several instances some of the oldest employes of the company have been affected and they have been instructed to lay off for awhile.

It is said that the practice has chiefly been carried on by conductors and brakemen on passenger trains, it being an easy matter for them to take ice in various quantities and place it on their trains when making the last run home. It finally became so general, it is said, that the company's attention was called to it, hence the action.

Another practice of employes, it is said, has been to help themselves to coal. This would be carried home in small bags and during the summer months they could easily get along without purchasing necessary fuel for their homes. One of the men laid off a week ago, is a Dunellen conductor of a passenger train and has been in the employ of the company for a great many years. His reputation is the best and it is said that he has made no secret of the fact that he helped himself at times to ice. The action by the company has greatly stirred the employes affected.

LIQUOR DEALERS TO FIGHT EXCISE COMMISSION

Newark liquor dealers are the leaders in a movement aimed at the State Excise Commission. The movement is to take definite form at a convention of the New Jersey State Liquor Dealers' Association, to be held at Newark on October 8. At that time a proposed bill will be submitted, embodying the views of the members of the association on the excise question. This bill will be "put up to" the various candidates, and those who will agree to stand by it, it is promised, will receive the support of the association, irrespective of party. The proposed law would establish more liberal conditions in the excise field, and would eliminate the State Excise Commission as a factor in the situation.

"The liquor dealers in Newark think they have been treated most unfairly by the Excise Commission," says John Schuster, president of the Newark association. "The commission discriminated against us in almost every possible way. This was shown particularly in the treatment of Atlantic City. After the commissioners sat in Newark and Elizabeth they stopped, and wouldn't have gone to Atlantic City at all if Bob Davis hadn't said they didn't dare go there. Even then they waited two or three weeks, till the season was practically over."

County Committee Plans Activity.

At a meeting held at Cawley's Hotel in Somerville, yesterday, the Somerset County Executive Committee decided upon the appointment of an auxiliary committee, consisting of one member from each voting district, to have charge of arranging for meetings and other campaign work. These members are to be named by the regular committeemen, and they will meet with the committee in an advisory capacity. They will have no vote in the sessions. A vigorous campaign is to be started and it will be kept up until the polls close in November.

Announce Engagement.

Mr. and Mrs. E. L. VanCampen, of East Second street, have announced the engagement of their son, Albert Van Campen, formerly of this city, but now of Brooklyn, to Miss Ruth Emma Taylor, of Taunton, Mass. The wedding will take place at the home of the bride on September 26.

Council To Meet On Tuesday.

The Common Council will hold its regular September meeting Tuesday night, on account of Monday being a holiday. As this will be the first session in several weeks, it is expected that there will be considerable business.

Holiday at the Library.

The circulating department of the Plainfield Public Library will be closed on Monday, Labor Day. The reading room will be open from 2 to 6 in the afternoon, with a member of the staff in attendance.

CAMP GETS A WINDFALL

Miss Curry's Netherwood Institution Will Receive a $100,000 Bequest.

FROM MILLIONAIRE'S ESTATE.

Her Day Nursery Also to Benefit by the Will of Frederick C. Hewitt, of Owego, N. Y.

There is joy in the heart of Miss Sara Curry, matron of the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp and of the Little Missionary's Day Nursery in New York city, today, over the news of a bountiful bequest for her work among New York poor, mentioned in the will of Frederick Cooper Hewitt, the wealthiest citizen of Tioga County, N. Y., who died last week at his home in Owego, N. Y. According to the will, the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp is to receive $100,000 and the Little Missionary's Day Nursery will get $200,000 of the seven million dollar estate of Mr. Cooper, cousin of Senator Thomas C. Platt.

Speaking to a Daily Press reporter about the bequests today Miss Curry seemed so overjoyed and grateful because of the unexpected thousands that she could not tell what would be done with the money.

"Mr. Hewitt, who was a personal friend of Alexander Morgan, vice-president of the camp corporation, has been interested in our work for the past three years," she said, "but his bountiful bequests were entirely unexpected. Three years ago, when we decided to purchase the building at 93 St. Mark's place, New York, for the work of the Little Missionary's Day Nursery, he donated $2,000 for the building through Mr. Morgan. Since then he has frequently contributed sums toward the support of the work.

"I can say confidently that there will be changes in the camp at Netherwood, for the accommodations are sadly inefficient for the work we are arying to do. I believe that additional sleeping accommodations will be the first use for the money. At the camp this summer, we had many mothers with sick babies whom we brought out from New York. It was a source of regret to me that these mothers and their little children could not have separate room accommodations. As it was, they all had to sleep in beds in the large loft in the Green House, which afforded but a poor protection from storms.

"I do not believe that the work will be transferred from Netherwood and certainly if I'm in charge another year we will be back at the Mary Morgan Home."

Miss Curry started her work among New York's poor thirteen years ago, when with $14 of her own she began by offering to take care of the tenement house babies while their mothers were away at work during the day. The work grew and being without funds, Miss Curry organized it with a board of directors and purchased the property on St. Mark's place at a cost of $29,000. There is still a mortgage of $18,000 on the building, and this will be at once paid off.

The same year, in 1895, Miss Curry started the summer camp project by taking about a score of New York children to Westfield, where she had annual summer camp, with a tent colony, until five years ago this fall. At that time, Alexander Morgan, vice-president of the camp corporation, secured the main building of the present camp and built others, donating the use of the place as the Mary Morgan Memorial Mome, in memoriam of his wife. Mr. Morgan was a personal friend of Mr. Hewitt.

Other bequests by Mr. Hewitt will follow: New York Post-Graduate Medical School, $2,000,000; Metropolitan Museum of Art, $1,500,000; Yale, $500,000; Free School for Crippled Children, New York, $100,000; Coburn Free Library, Owego, N. Y., $30,000. The remainder of the big estate is to be divided among Mr. Hewitt's relatives and friends.

Will Resume Regular Services.

All of the regular services will be resumed at the Firs M. E. church, on Sunday, the pastor, Rev. Dr. A. C. McCrea, having returned from his vacation. The Sunday school session will be held at 10 o'clock in the morning, preaching service and communion at 11 o'clock, Epworth League at 7 o'clock and evening worship at 7:45, with preaching by the pastor.

Y. W. C. A. Ride Tomorrow.

Two large stages have been secured for the drag ride of Y. W. C. A. members tomorrow, and those who are to make the trip will meet at the association at 3 o'clock. The praty will drive to Chimney Rock, where supper will be served, and will make the return trip by moonlight.

WESTFIELD.

When the trolley rails were laid in Broad street, Westfield, nine years ago, at Broad and Elm streets, where the rails turn the corner, a straight line extension of about ten feet was laid to connect with the line at that time proposed to go to Springfield. The Springfield line was tied up by a permanent injunction secured by the property owners and the ten feet of straight rail across Elm street has been jokingly referred to by the townspeople as the Springfield line. The tracks through Broad street are being relaid, and yesterday the Springfield line was taken up and unbroken curves put in, removing the last evidence of the proposed trolley line from Westfield to Springfield. The promise of the trolley company to build this road was the main consideration for granting the franchise in the town.

The house-to-house canvass by the election boards is being made in the several wards.

Miss Mary E. Doughty is ill at her home on West End avenue.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Rachel Crother's successful play, "The Three of Us," will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre tonight.

"Lola from Berlin," the latest musical work from the pens of John J McNally, William Jerome and Jean Schwartz, will come to the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow afternoon and night, with Corinne in the leading role. "Lola from Berlin" received introduction in the Liberty theatre, New York city, last season under the management of Klaw and Erlanger, where it won instant approval. An exceptionally strong cast has been engaged to support Corinne, including Mark Sullivan, Hazel Carlton, Franklin Vail, Henry Carl Lewis, Lillie May White, Osborn Clemson, Lillian Wilson, Franker Woods, Pearl Revare, Freddie Stott, Bunnie Ingeborg and a large ensemble force.

"A Message from Mars," which will be presented at the New Plainfield theatre Labor Day, afternoon and night, is the story of Horace Parker, an Englishman upon whom fortune has bestowed some of its most substantial blessings in life. He has youth, health, wealth, pleasing exterior, a charming sweetheart, to whom he is engaged to be married; but he is beset by too many vices, which are by no means uncommon in the general run of mankind. He is richly endowed with self-conceit and a selfishness that seems without limit. At the beginning of the play his supreme indifference to the happiness and comfort of those about him nearly costs him the love of his betrothed, who is a sweet, innocent, patient and self-sacrificing maiden. She is his opposite in every way. She is angered at his indifference at a request she has made of him to order for her a cab on a stormy night to drive to the home of a friend. She leaves him in anger and he cooly sits down to read an essay on the planet Mars, when he is visited by one of its inhabitants, whose mission on earth is to reform the most selfish man alive, and this is Horace Parker. Mr. Parker is at once subjected to heroic treatment. The messenger first reduces him to complete tameness by means of potent electric currents, then takes his arm around town in the snow, shows him the contempt in which he is held by his acquaintances, tries to awaken his compassion by exhibitions of human misery which he compels him to relieve and finally, all milder measures failing to rouse his conscience or lessen his self-esteem, reduces him to starvation and beggary and, by actual suffering teaches him the beauty of life in having regard and consideration for others.

When Robert Gaillard appears here as the star of "Strongheart" next Thursday night, Plainfield playgoers will see a comedy-drama of American college life that has no equal on the American stage. This has been proven by the great hold the play obtained on popular interest when it was first produced three years ago and its subsequent success. The idea upon which "Strongheart" was founded is absolutely original, and in making an Apache Indian, a college graduate and in every way the equal of his fair-skinned associates, William C. De Mille, created a play which is designed to live in public regard for many years. Henry B. Harris has fitted his star with a splendid company and furnished a handsome and thorough scenic production.

On account of Monday being a holiday, Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., will hold its regular meeting the following night.

The nineteenth anniversary of Miantonomo Tribe, No. 118, Improved Order Red Men, will be observed on Wednesday, October 14.

Rev. Dr. Howard Gross, of New York, will occupy the pulpit of the First Baptist church on Sunday.

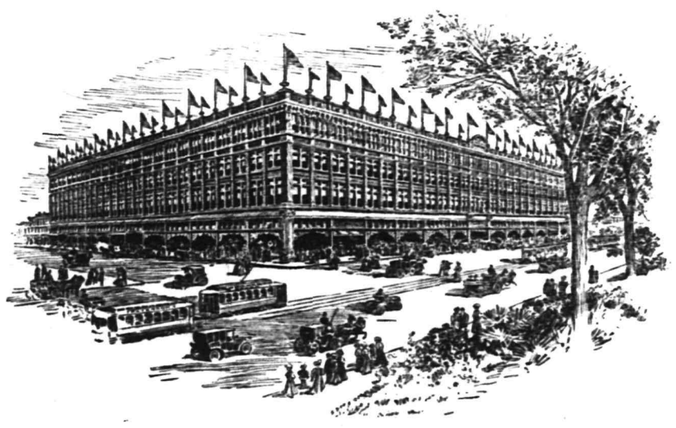
A BIG STORE'S ANNIVERSARY.

The Great Hahne & Co.'s Establishment in Newark Will Pass the Fiftieth Mile-Post This Month.



Almost every reader of this paper is familiar with the fact that the great Hahne & Co. store in Newark is New Jersey's largest and most important retail establishment, and they will be interested in knowing that this enterprising, progressive institution will celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the establishment of the business, and the seventh anniversary of the occupancy of the present mammoth building, beginning next Tuesday, September 8.

An event of this kind is of no small importance to the public. Few stores attain to such an age, maintaining the full vigor of youth. Few live so long at all, and when one does, and still retains its place in public confidence and favor, the celebration of its fiftieth birthday is a matter for rejoicing, not only by the proprietors, managers and employes, but the public as well, for great institutions such as this have important everyday relations with the public of such a character as to make the store the store of the people.

Hahne & Co. never do things by halves, and in planning the celebration of the golden jubilee they have made preparations for doing it on a huge scale. The mammoth building on Broad street at New—the largest and handsomest retail establishment in the State—and one of the finest in America, will be lavishly decorated, and the illumination will be the greatest the country has ever seen, the most powerful lights ever erected in the world being employed for the purpose. Inside the decorative scheme will be magnificent also, the predominating color being gold. On Tuesday morning, September 8, there will be a street parade in Newark of the many wagons and automobiles used by the firm in their free delivery system, which, with a band of music, will make an impressive showing.

What will be, perhaps, of most vital importance to the public is the gigantic sales of merchandise planned to begin with the first day of the anniversary, and to continue until the end of September. Most amazing values will be offered the public. There will be no souvenirs other than the merchandise at low prices.

There will be splendid concerts indoors and much else that will interest the public. Everybody for miles around Newark should visit the State's metropolis during the first week of Hahne's & Co.'s Anniversary Celebration, see the wonderful decorations and participate in the distribution of dependable merchandise at prices that will make the anniversary memorable.

The local game of great interest tomorrow will be on Crescent Oval between the Clinton Avenues and McNulty Bros.' team of New York. The strength of the visiting team is such that it will put the locals to the test and will show whether they are playing championship ball. The game will be called at 3:30 o'clock.

The Y. M. C. A. team will battle with Bound Brook at the latter place tomorrow afternoon and the chances are that Manager Listman's aggregation will cop the contest by a good margin.

Labor Day morning Rahway will be the attraction at Crescent Oval and the Clinton Avenues will try their best to send them home minus their scalps. A band concert will be thrown in as an extra attraction. This will serve as an appetite for the afternoon struggle with Scotch Plains, when there will be something doing.

Billy Phyle, of the Torontos, made his sixteenth home run this season on Tuesday, playing against Newark.

Roy Rock, the Providence shortstop, is out of the game with an injured knee.

Plainfield fans will be interested to know that Al. Farmer, formerly of the local team, caught the second game for Brooklyn against Philadelphia on Tuesday, one of the Brooklyn catchers being injured. Al. made a fine showing. This season he has been playing at Branchville.

Jose, the star pitcher of the Cleveland American League team, let Detroit down with one hit on Tuesday, Ty being the lucky man to get the safety.

McGraw, of the Giants, is certainly showing great headwork this season in handling his team and if he does not win the pennant it won't be his fault. Mathewson has offered to pitch every other day, if necessary, to help out.

The Newark club has so far escaped losing any players to the major leagues by the drafting process. In the list issued by the National Commission the names of only four Eastern Leaguers appear. The New York Americans have taken Schmidt, the young pitcher phenom of the Baltimore club; Cleveland has put in a claim for two twirlers, Stanley, of Montreal, and Barger, of Rochester. The Chicago National League club has snapped up Jimmy Archer, the speedy little Buffalo catcher.

GOLF.

Commencing tomorrow the Fall handicap, Classes A and B, will be the weekly attraction at the Plainfield Country Club, and should result in bringing out a large number of players every week. On Labor Day there will be special competitions, as usual, and the social features at the clubhouse.

"Marty" O'Loughlin did not engage in the play at VanCortlandt Park on Wednesday, although his many friends expected that he would be a prominent contestant for honors.

The attraction at the Park Golf Club tomorrow will be the play for the challenge trophies and the President's and Golf Club cups. Several matches have been planned for the challenge trophies tomorrow and a large field is expected to take part in the competition for the other cups.

C. B. Morgan has not been playing the game for several weeks and will probably not take up the sport again until after Labor Day.

W. Lester Glenney is another country club player who has been missed from the local course. He has been spending his vacation in the Adirondacks.

Labor Day will mark the return of many golfers to the local courses. During the summer there has been an unusually large number away from the city, but with the return of autumn weather the courses will take on a lively aspect.

There will be special competitions at the Westfield Golf Club and the Middlebrook Country Club, at Findern, on Labor Day, suitable prizes being offered in the various contests.

There has been a noticeable absence of team matches on the local golf courses this season, and in fact there are but few clubs in the Metropolitan district that schedule matches. They used to be very popular but in recent years there has been a falling off in the interest.

Labor Day Races on the Essex County Fainr Track, Olympic Park, Newark, N. J.

As a forerunner of the ten days and evening exhibition of the New Jersey Fair, October 10 to 19, the fourth series of races will be given on Labor Day, September 7, on the Essex county fair track, Olympic Park, Newark.

High class trotting, pacing and runing races will be the events, with a grand display of fire works in the evening.

The large and finely situated grand stand has just been overhauled, and put in first class condition, including a nicely designed cover. Many other improvements are in course of construction, which will add materially to the comfort and pleasure of all who attend.

The track is in fine shape, much work having been done on it all summer. Its superiority is so well acknowledged that many horses are using it daily for practice.

Mr. J. M. Beldon, manager of the speed department reports a fine list of entries, many of the best horses in and around New York have entered.

Carriages and automobiles will be admitted as usual to the grounds free on this day.

Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Musson, of West Front street, are home from Silver Bay, Lake George, where they spent their vacation and Mr. Musson will preach at Faith chapel on Sunday as usual.

THE FORUM.

The Dog Ordinance.

Editor, The Daily Press:

I need not ask if a city ordinance is binding, for surely it is, but I am in a quandary. Can you tell me what to do? I have a Boston bull terrier, so faithful, wise and affectionate, I could not think of passing him over to the care of a stranger. I cannot keep a muzzle on his short nose; tighten the muzzle as I will, I cannot make him submit to the "indignity" imposed upon him; with his paw it is immediately removed. Now I should like to know can a license be obtained? and if so, what liberty does it grant? Does it free the dog from the cruel obnoxious muzzle? I have already taken too much of your valuable time, but if it is worth a passing thought, would receive your information gratefully.

A READER OF THE PRESS.

Plainfield, Sept. 4.

[The city ordinance relative to muzzling dogs applies to all seasons of the year but it has been the custom to enforce it only during the heated months. There is no license to be procured that will exempt any owner from applying the muzzle to a canine.—Ed.]

Bishop O'Connor to Manage Paper.

Bishop John J. O'Connor, of the Roman Catholic diocese of Newark, acquired "The Monitor," a Catholic newspaper, yesterday for the diocese. Hereafter the Bishop will manage the paper with the following directors: Vicar General John A. Sheppard and the Rev. John F. Ryan, of Jersey City, and the Rev. Dr. Isaac P. Whelan, of St. Patrick's Cathedral, Newark. Father Sheppard is president, Father Ryan vice-president and Father Whelan secretary and treasury. The Rev. William P. Cantwell, of Long Branch, will be the editor, and Henry J. Batters, of Jersey City, the managing editor.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

A very successful carnival containing many new features was held yesterday afternoon and evening on the grounds of W. Ten Eyck. Large parties from South Plainfield, Plainfield, Metuchen and other places met on the beautiful lawn and thoroughly enjoyed the event. Every amusement booth was well patronized and large numbers were turned away from the fortune tellers tent. The decorations were most lavish. By 10 o'clock every article was sold and everything eatable was eaten, and by 12 o'clock the grounds were empty but the Oak Tree chapel treasury was full.

The Young Men's Christian Association will meet the Bound Brook team in a game of baseball at Bound Brook at 3:30 tomorrow afternoon. The Plainfield High School favorite, Phil Smith, will pitch for Bound Brook.

The public school will reopen after the summer vacation on Tuesday, September 8. The school has been practically refurnished and concrete sidewalks and curbs have been laid down.

The alleged watermelon thieves case, in which sentence was suspended, at the hearing on Tuesday, will come up before Judge Smith on Tuesday next.

Rev. John Wellington Hoag, of La Crosse, Wis., has announced his acceptance of the call to the pastorate of the First Baptist church, Trenton, and will begin his work there on October 1, at a salary of $2,400 a year.

Atlantic City's 9,000 negro inhabitants welcomed the annual negro excursion to the shore yesterday. More than 15,000 members of secret societies and church bodies came from Philadelphia, Chester, Wilmington and Baltimore.

Ground was broken yesterday for the new William Mulligan High School building at Woodbury. Vice-President Robert D. Hughes, of the Board of Education, in the absence of President Underwood, dug the first shovelful of earth.

Congressman John J. Gardner will be the chief speaker when Atlantic City's $100,000 municipal hospital is dedicatel in October. Former Governor Stokes and health officers of Philadelphia, New York, Baltimore and Washington will be among the guests.

While gunning for reed birds along Woodbury Creek, Woodbury, yesterday, Wesley Westcott, of Woodbury, was shot in the head, neck and face by a hunter who was hidden by the tall reeds. Westcott was badly peppered, but was able to walk home. He lost considerable blood.

Seriously injured about the back and abdomen, Joseph McGovern was taken to the home of his mother at 238 Chestnut street, Camden, yesterday. He received his injuries by jumping off a Reading Railway train in Philadelphia, while on his way to Washington, D. C. He walked home after the accident, but is in a critical condition.

Charles Shick, who a few years ago was thought to have made a fortune through beer bottling, was taken to Bridgeton jail yesterday, unable to find anyone who would furnish $500 bonds for his appearance. Shick has been arrested many times for a violation of the liquor laws, and each time has paid his fine until it has cost him a large sum.

The runaway team of James S. Rowen, after knocking him over yesterday at Broadway and Viola street, Camden, ran through the back fence of the home of Thomas Mullen, 1832 South Fourth street. Mrs. Mullen was cooking a meal at the time, and when the horses landed at the kitchen door she was frightened into hysterics. The animals received but a few scratches.

Samuel Haines, seventy years old, whose body was found in a meadow pool in Atlantic City Tuesday, week after his disappearance, fell overboard while trying to reach his home during a blinding storm and was not murdered, as the police suspected. Investigation to bear out suspicion of foul play was abandoned yesterday with the approval of relatives of the dead man.

While crossing the tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad, a quarter of a mile below the Riverside Sattion, yesterday, an unidentified man was killed by the train. The body is that of a man about thirty years old. A card in one of his pockets bore the name of William Scott, water carrier, and he is believed to have been a laborer employed by contractors constructing sewers there.

Harry Walker, a contractor, who met with his thirteenth accident on Sunday, when his automobile turned turtle near Hammonton, was brought to his home in Gloucester City from the Pennsylvania Hospital yesterday. He is suffering from internal injuries and injuries of the hip. His mother-in-law, Mrs. Thomas Conover, who sustained two broken ribs, was also brought home yesterday from the same hospital.

HAD A HURRY-UP WEDDING.

Two men and two women rushed into the office of Justice of the Peace Samuel Engler, at 57 Newark street, Hoboken, at 11:15 a. m., yesterday and wanted to know if a marriage could be performed inside of five minutes.

The Justice guessed he was swift enough for that, and, sure enough, inside of five minutes the four were on a run to the Hamburg-American docks. One of the couples boarded the steamer Amerika just as the last gangplank was about to be pulled aboard. They were Harry and Alma Allen, both of Philadelphia. The other two were Randolph L. Beifus of 931 North Fiftieth Street, Philadelphia, and his bride, who was Essie Moore, of Camden.

The latter couple had come to Hoboken to see Mr. and Mrs. Allen off, and while waiting for the Amerika to sail talk led to the proposal that Mr. Beifus and Miss Moore should marry, which they did.

HELPFUL HINTS FOR HURRIED HOUSEWIVES.

A Perfect Butter Cooler—Invert an ordinary earthenware flower pot over the butter on a plate. Over the whole lay a piece of flannel wrung out of cold water. Keep the flannel always damp, and the result will be butter as firm as in winter.

If the kitchen floor cloth looks shabby, as it does when the colors begin to wear off, it may be made to look equal to new by being treated in the following manner: Procure some brown paint; four or five tins will do a large floor. Choose a time when the kitchen door can be closed for two days. Coat all carefully over and when thoroughly dry give a good polish with furniture cream. The result will pay for labor expended.

Cold roast meat or poultry can be kept perfectly sweet and fresh during the hottest weather in the following manner: Place the joint in a clean, large glazed pan, tie down tightly with butter muslin, store in a cool pantry, if possible on a stone floor. The pan and muslin must be washed and dried every day. This is far better than a wire dish cover or meat safe, as it is quite impossible for flies to get to it.

To remove a label from a bottle or jar is often rather a difficulty. This method will always act without trouble: Wet the label thoroughly and then hold it near the fire for a moment. The steam immediately acts on the paste or gum.

To Clean Furniture—Before applying furniture cream, wash the furniture well all over with a little vinegar and water. This will remove all dirt and grease, and a much better polish is obtained.

To keep lettuce fresh and crisp, put a little water in a deep pan, lay the lettuce in it and cover tightly with a wet cloth to exclude the air. By doing this they will keep beautifully fresh for two or three days.

A Good Liniment—Ingredients, one-half cup of strong vinegar and of turpentine, one egg and three tablespoons camphor. Add the vinegar to the turpentine, then break in egg and shake well until creamy. Add three tablespoons of camphor and shake the mixture thoroughly.

To remove the smell of onions, wash the pan thoroughly in the usual way and wipe dry with a dishcloth. Next sprinkle with salt, set on the stove and allow it to brown, shaking the pan well from time to time. Rinse again in clean warm water to which a lump of washing soda has been added, when all taste and smell of onion will have disappeared.

Rusty Screws—Heat a poker red hot and hold it for a few moments to the head of the screw. Then use the proper sized screwdriver to fit the slot of the screw and it will come out quite easily and with very little trouble.

To cool a room, procure a piece of wide-meshed muslin. Wet it thoroughly in cold water and stretch it across the bottom sash of the window, which should be thrown wide open, and let the lower end of the muslin hang down into a bowl of water. This will cool every breath of air that comes into the room and make the atmosphere refreshing and pleasant. The muslin, being quite transparent, may be easily seen through, while the effect from the outside is merely that of a plain muslin curtain.

Falling Hair—Try massaging a very little pure white vaseline or good olive oil well into the scalp once or twice a week. This will nourish the roots and promote fresh growth. It is rather a greasy remedy, but qpite safe and very effective. You will find that your hair needs washing rather often, but the improvement in it will well repay this extra trouble. Perhaps the ends of your hair are split and require cutting and singeing. If so, I should advise you to visit a reliable hairdresser and have it seen to.

CONVENIENT FOR MANY THINGS

Just now, when bargains in ribbons are to be picked up, is a good time to lay in a supply of all widths and colors to do duty as presents for next Christmas or as prizes for parties all through the year.

A useful and dainty bag that is less common than many shapes is to hold the corsets when traveling or the extra pair that is laid away.

Get (?) yards of flowered or fancy ribbon five or seven inches wide. Double over the ribbon and turn in two or three inches at the top, according to the depth of frill desired.

Hem the top with invisible stitches or baste and cover with briar stitching and put in an extra row of half inch above for a casing.

Overcast the edges together with very fine stitches. It can be done on the outside if the ribbon is a kind that wrinkles easily with turning.

Run narrow ribbons through the casing in opposite directions so the bag draws easily. These should be of the predominating color of the bag.

Dantier but more expensive and less serviceable are similar corset bags made of broad filet or Cluny lace over a colored satin ribon.

The New Insanity Plea.

The reciprocal insanity plea iscalculated to befuddle the jury. The lawyer who can offer it without laughing in the face of the judge is a solmen party who doesn't know how to laugh.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

THE OLD POKE IN THE MOTOR CAR.

For motoring the milliners have induced us to try the old-fashioned "poke-bonnett," and it proves so very becoming to those that it happens to suit that it will not be surprising if the style should gai more every day and general adoption.

It is not a big "poke"—that would defeat the object so far as motoring is concerned of protecting the ears in rushing through the wind and yet avoiding resistance to the currents of air. Thus, the "front elevation" of the bonnet is but slight, but enough to allow the hair to appear prettily when the veil is turned off the face, and a full rosette of ribbon at each side of the cheek gives a very "fetching" finish.

The tendency of all the new millinery is to sit more closely upon the head than recently it has done. The caplike "Charlotte Corday" shape is very becoming when worn with a dainty little frock in printed muslin or soft ninonde-soie; but even the larger shapes in hats are made to sit down without any bandeau, close upon the curls and the full plaits passing round the head that are the latest ideas in the coiffure. The high-crowned hats that Paris is wearing have so far not been adopted largely here.

BRIDAL SUPERSTITIONS.

The girl who is superstitious will do well to avoid certain acts on her wedding day, that while quite natural, indeed, that it will take a good memory to avoid doing them—are from olden times said to presage misfortune.

First of all the bride must not try on her wedding ring, and it is even unlucky for her to look at it until the bridegroom has put it in place.

To tear one's wedding gorwn or any of its trimmings is also unlucky, doubly so if one repairs the damage with a pin, and to try on the gown before the wedding also forbodes misfortune.

Hardest to avoid of all, perhaps, the bride must not look at herself in a mirror after donning her bridal array until after the ceremony. On her way to the church she must not look over her shoulder, nor must she cry, even for joy.

The bride should also never receive a telegram of congratulation until after the ceremony, while to forget the bridal bouquet is disastrous in more senses than one, nor must it be dropped, for that, too, brings ill luck.

If a bride observes all these precautions she is making a good bit for happiness, but what a lot of pleasure in the way of being natural and enjoying her wedding gown in advance she foregoes.

FIRST AID TO THE INJURED.

Dyspeptics should eat breakfast bacon often. It is said by some to be almost a cure for dyspepsia.

When a cut will not heal, saturate a piece of absorbent cotton with coal oil and bind on.

For sudden attacks of rheumatism, pains in the joints, etc., a liniment made of mustard and water will often prove an effective temporary remedy.

A strong solution of salt and warm water applied to bandages will be found very useful for sprains and bruises when nothing better is at hand.

For a nervous headache a flannel cloth dipped in hot water and placed first on the temples and then on the back of the head at the base of the brain is sure to give relief.

Simple Cure For Faintness.

There is no more sure cure for an attack of faintness than a hearty sneeze. It immediately stimulates the blood vessels of the brain. In many persons fainting never goes so far as a loss of consciousness or loss of control of the limbs. And in these the sudden weakness is often brought to an end by a sneeze caused by nature herself without any external aid. A grain or two of pepper, snuff or tobacco introduced into the nose or tickling its interior lightly will usually insure a sneeze. These simple procedures or others similar in character may prove invaluable when smelling salts and other elegant aids are absent.

Homesteading.

A young man who intended to take up a homestead claim, but did not know how to do it, sought information of a friend about it.

"Mike," said he, "you've taken up a homestead, and I want to know what you had to do to prove up and earn your title to the land."

"Well, Jerry, I don't know the law word for word concerning homesteading, but it seemed to me like this: The government is willing to bet ye one hundred and sixty acres of land agin fourteen dollars that ye can't live on it five years without starving to death."—Judge.

Bringing Home the Crime.

Barber—You certainly needed a hair cut.

Customer—Yes. Been away. Hair in bad shape, eh?

"Fierce. Must have been in the country."

"Cut by a farmer?"

"Yep."

"That's right."

"He certainly didn't know his business."

"That's so."

"Where was it done?"

"You did it before I went."—Life.

WRITTEN IN RED

By

CHAS. HOWARD MONTAGUE AND C. W. DYAR

(Copyright, by The Cassell Publishing Co.)

"And in that case, how much of an inheritance does he leave his daughters?"

"Ah, poor things! Nothing!"

"So, so," said John Lamm to himself, after his informant had departed. "That's how the wind blows, does it! Well, it remains for me to find out who profits by North's death, and who by the failure. Certainly it is neither Marion Stackhouse nor Stella North."

The detective was not aware of Paul North's little transaction in life insurance, and it is not probable that it would have made much difference in his opinion if he had been.

But John Lamm's attention was now taken by the arrival of his assistant in company with a keen-eyed woman about five-and-thirty, modestly dressed.

"Ah, Miss Dallison! Good morning," said the detective, cordially. "Are you engaged to-day?"

"Some things on hand," she said, in a brisk, business-like way, "but if it's important—"

Lamm waved his hand toward the door of his inner office, and the lady preceded him into the small retiring room which the detective preserved for his most important conferences.

"And now, Bill," said Lamm, turning to his assistant, and speaking in a low tone, "I want you to go to Swampscott. You know where the North villa is. You will easily find it without any obtrusive inquiries, you understand. At the upper right-hand corner, at the part of the house away from the water, is a square tower with green blinds. If a small white handkerchief is placed over the sill, go to the servants' door and deliver an express package to Mollie White. Take that receipt along with you and have her sign for it. She will leave what she has for me in the book. See? If there is no signal by four o'clock, you may come back."

When Detective Lamm had dispatched his assistant, he locked the door and saluted his female caller over again.

"Allow me to pay my respects to the only female detective in America who is worth her bread and butter," he said. "How are you?"

"Is it because I'm so good or the rest are so poor, Mr. Lamm?" she returned. "Or because there isn't much money in your case, and you want me to work cheap? Or what?"

"No, Miss Dallison, I don't want you to work cheap," replied Lamm, becoming serious and drawing up a chair near to her. "If you can do what I want I shall willingly let you put your own price on it."

"Well, what is it?"

"I can't say yet just what it will be. I have taken the liberty to make an appointment at your house with a party unknown at seven this evening. If the party puts in an appearance, you will have the simple task of finding out all he or she knows, while pretending to give him or her some information which you do not possess."

"Really," said Miss Dallison, sarcastically, "it is very simple indeed."

"Unfortunately," said Lamm, "there is no other way that I can see to get the information necessary. I will tell you how the case stands." And producing the copy of the Globe, the detective proceeded to explain his plans. "You see," he said, in conclusion, "I merely desire to have you personate the writer of the letter I wrote this morning, and to draw out as much as possible about the purpose of publishing that advertisement from the person who turns up in answer to my note. There are two things I wish to find out—the first is, who inserted the 'ad.,' and the second is, what is wanted of Marie Moissot. And, incidentally, if I can find out who this Marie Moissot is, why so much the better."

Miss Dallison was exceedingly dubious about the result, but as she was willing to try, after arranging the matter more in detail, Lamm made an appointment at her house for seven o'clock, and bade her "good morning."

"Good heavens!" muttered Lamm to himself, when he was alone, "this is the first time I ever was employed in a case where I was obliged to go to such trouble to find out a few facts which the man who employed me could give me in five minutes, if he only would. Is it because he doesn't care to, or because he doesn't dare to? I'll find out, or my name isn't Lamm. I always like to know what sort of a man I'm working for. It's convenient sometimes."

With these reflections, Mr. Lamm betook himself to other matters connected with his puzzling and thus far unsatisfactory quest, for he really hadn't got far enough along to be able to form a theory that positively seemed reasonable to him.

His assistant returned during the afternoon.

"The white rag was out when I got there," he said. "So I went to the house at once and returned by the next train."

He handed Mr. Lamm a message sealed in an envelope, which (relieved of the peculiarities of its orthography) contained information as follows:

"Stella North has run away. Her bed was not slept in last night. Miss Harwood had to force open the door. When she saw the way the room was she fainted dead away. Mrs. Stackhouse attended her. She was very pale, but did not say anything. Moffett said she had a 'distracted' look about the eyes, but I couldn't see her different than usual. As soon as Miss Harwood came to, Miss Marion (she has forbid any of us to call her Mrs. —), sent Moffett to Mr. Fetridge's house. He came over right away. They had a long talk, which I did not hear. Then Mr. Fetridge took Moffett away with him to look for Stella. Since then Miss Marion has been in her room walking up and down. I don't believe she has sat down once. Just keeps walking all the time. She must have walked six miles. Moffett says that Mr. Fetridge sent him to the police office, but he didn't go himself. Nobody knew when Miss Stella went out. She went up to bed very early, and we thought she was locked in her room to cry. I hope this will be of service to find her, as nobody could wish her any harm."

"Ah! that woman is a rough diamond," murmured Mr. Lamm, as he conveyed the letter to his capacious pocketbook. "A professional couldn't have done much better!"

"But in the name of wonders," his thought continued, "what does it all mean? If it had been Marion I might have understood it—but this 17-year-old baby! There is some salient feature in this case that I haven't yet come across. Now, what is it? Where shall I look for the missing link?"

Profoundly abstracted and reserved John Lamm continued to be throughout the remainder of the day. All the way to the house on Shawmut avenue, whither he betook himself rather in advance of the appointed time, he was not in a condition to recognize acquaintances or know of what sort the weather was. His mind was wholly absorbed with the knotty problem that the North case now presented. The latest development in it had aroused a new train of suspicions.

Once inside the modest rooms of the woman detective, however, Lamm threw off the burden of speculation and devoted all his energies to his immediate purpose. The windows of Miss Dallison's front chamber (her suite was on the second floor) overlooked the corner to which Lamm's letter of the morning was designed to lure the author of the mysterious want "ad." The detective reasoned that if the advertiser was as importunate as he appeared to be, he would surely call for answers before night, and unless there was some more tangible reply from another quarter, the decoy was sure to bring him. And he was quite right. Miss Dallison was already arrayed in the bonnet with the red cherries, and stood at his side looking with him between the half-closed blinds toward the opposite corner when the clocks struck seven.

"Thornton Stackhouse, as I live!" exclaimed Lamm a moment later, "and prompt to the minute! There is your man," he said, quickly, pointing him out. "Bring him here. I will be in the next room as arranged. If he asks you any questions, wait a bit before answering. If the feather sways twice, it means say 'yes;' if once, it means 'no.' If not at all, you are left to your own discretion. You generally will be."

John Lamm referred to a large peacock's feather ornamentally arranged over a bookcase. He had connected it with the adjoining room by a bit of silk thread.

A very few minutes thereafter Miss Dallison and Thornton Stackhouse entered the front chamber. The man took the seat offered to him, back to the bookcase. If Miss Dallison had been familiar with his personal appearance, she could not have helped observing that the lines of care in his face had deepened heavily since the day of his partner's death. He had the sleepless, worn expression of an anxious watcher by the bedside of a serious illness.

"Well, well, woman," he said, abruptly, in no very conciliatory tones, "I trust after bringing me here you don't disappoint me. What do you know of this Marie Moissot? Speak quickly, for my engagements are pressing."

"Well, now, my dear sir," began Miss Dallison, in a nervous, high-keyed manner, very unlike her natural self, "you'd better understand me, to begin with. I'm not going to betray any confidences that I may have made with any of them as I may be pardoned for calling friends without I know the why and the wherefores of it."

"What do you mean?" asked Stackhouse, darkly. "Do you expect me to tell you my business with her before I know anything about you? You must think me a fool. I offered a reward for information, and came here to get it; not to give it."

"Very well, indeed, sir, so you did," returned Miss Dallison, with a very shrewd air of suspicion. "But you have to satisfy me that you don't mean no harm to a body, for I'll not speak a word to injure any friend of mine. So that's just what you and I have got to settle before we go ahead."

"Well, in the first place," said Stackhouse, changing his tactics, "suppose we settle whether you have any information about the person that I want. Describe the woman you refer to?"

"Oh, sir! I'm no good that way. She was about 27, dark, quite dark—well, medium height, I should say—and what I call reasonably good-looking."

"Ah! and what is she doing for a living?"

"Oh, there's where I can't answer, you see, until I find out why you want to know."

Stackhouse made an impatient gesture.

"Has this woman you speak of been in Boston lately?"

The feather swayed twice.

"I see no harm in saying 'yes' to that, sir. No harm. But more I won't say. You see, sir, circumstances are peculiar. She confided me that circumstances are peculiar."

"You mean to say, don't you, that she was here for private purposes, and that she wanted her presence here kept a secret?"

"I shouldn't wonder."

"Have you known this woman long?"

The feather swayed twice.

"A good many years, sir."

"And under that name all the time?"

"I decline to state what names she has gone under," said the woman, with considerable asperity. "You may be one of them detective fellers. How do I know? Coming up here to pump evidences out of a poor woman as has herself to look after. I know fast enough—I know the woman you want. I knew it the minute I read that in the paper. But I ain't going to be caught in no trap, nor I ain't going to get into no trouble. So there's how the land lays, and you may as well know it first as last."

Stackhouse seemed to be sitting on pins and needles.

"Hang it!" he cried. "Don't be a fool! I have no wish to harm her, nor you, either. I only wish to see her; that's all—to talk with her."

"Well?"

"Is she in Boston?"

"That I decline to say, sir."

"Ah!" said Stackhouse, coming to his feet. "I see she is, or you wouldn't be so cunning about it. Now, where is she? In this house? Tell the truth. Didn't she herself send you to answer that advertisement? As a matter of fact, isn't she listening to this very conversation?"

He made a sudden movement toward the half-open door behind which Lamm stood. But the woman was quicker than he was, and she intercepted him.

"Don't you dare, sir!" she cried, standing with her back against the door. "She may be and she may not be; but if you attempt to go into that room, I'll scream for help."

"Ah!" said Stackhouse, significantly, "as I thought. You are too smart, woman. You have betrayed yourself."

"Well, then," said the woman, doggedly, "you can't see her; that's all."

"Oh; that's what she told you to say, is it?"

"Never mind. You can't see her. If you've got any message for her, write it, and I'll see that she gets it, and she will reply by mail. You can't see her. You ought to be ashamed to try to, after treating her as you have." This sole real bit of information which Miss Dallison possessed outside of the patent facts of the advertisement, delivered at this opportune time, must have dissipated any doubts still lingering in Stackhouse's mind.

"Very well," he said, in an altered tone, "I will write to her." He turned toward the outer door, and Miss Dallion followed him. He had actually opened the door to pass into the entry, and she was quite off her guard, when, with a quick spring, he leaped back into the room, thrusting her aside, and before she could prevent him, had flung wide open the door to the adjoining chamber.

But John Lamm was too old a bird to be caught in any such trap. At the first intimation of Stackhouse's suspicion he had taken his departure.

The room was empty!

OFFICE OF THE STREET COMMISSIONER.
City of Plainfield,
New Jersey.

To ROGER IRWIN OR ROBERT IRWIN, or unknown owner of No. 341 to 347 Johnston Avenue.

Pursuant to the requirements of Sections 3 and 6 of the ordinance of the City of Plainfield, entitled "An Ordinance concerning the construction, maintenance and repair of sidewalks," approved April 10, 1899, amended by ordinances approved August 4, 1902, June 6, 1905, June 6, 1906.

You are hereby notified and required on or before November 1, 1908, to construct a sidewalk abutting on the premises owned by you, situate number 341 to number 347 Johnston Avenue, in the City of Plainfield, Union County, and State of New Jersey, which sidewalk shall be constructed of bluestone flagging, smooth and even on the surface and properly laid in one course under the direction of and on such lines as shall be given by the Street Commissioner; the flags shall not be less than four feet long transversely to the length of the street, not less than two feet wide lengthwise of said street, and not less than one and one-half inches thick in the thinnest part, or said sidewalk may be constructed of concrete slabs of same dimensions as specified for flagging, excepting that said slabs shall be not less than three inches thick, and shall be composed of concrete containing at least one part of Portland cement to two and one-half parts of sand and two and one-half parts of broken stone, or it may be constructed of concrete laid in place, the construction of which walks shall be under the direction and subject to the approval of the Street Commissioner.

In default of compliance herewith, the Common Council are authorized by law to order the required work to be done and paid for; to make the amount of the expense and costs a lien upon the said abutting lands in front of which said work is done, to be collected in the manner provided by law and to bear interest at the same rate as other assessments; or payment may be enforced by action in any court of competent jurisdiction, as provided by the statute.

PLAINFIELD A.C. DEFEATS NELSON'S ROYAL GIANTS

The Plainfield A. C. defeated Oscar Nelson's Royal Giants on Hope Common, yesterday afternoon, by the score of 11 to 6. George Wunderlich twirled for the Plainfield A. C., and made an excellent showing, fanning seven batsmen and allowing no free passes. Mason pitched for the Giants for six innings, when he was replaced by Allan Squier, who allowed but one run off his delivery.

Henry Albert, the star batter of the Scotch Plains team, and Nelson, the Giants' catcher, each made three hits, one of Albert's being a two bagger. The score:

BASEBALL.

Jack Hayden, the former Baltimore and Providence outfielder, will get another chance in fast company, the Chicago Cubs having drafted him from Indianapolis. Hayden is having an exceptional good season and is leading the American Association in hitting. Hayden was with the Boston Americans for a brief period two seasons ago.

John Miller, the Kearny boy, who signed a Pittsburg contract, and was later let out to McKeesport, has been drafted by Cleveland. It was the general supposition that the Pirates had a string attached to Miller when he was turned over to McKeesport, but it now appears that such was not the case.

The Iola Club will journey to Lebanon tomorrow, where it will play its first game of the season with the team at that place.

Rahway on the Warpath.

The Clinton Avenues have three hard games to play tomorrow and Labor Day, meeting the McNulty Bros.' team tomorrow, Rahway and Scotch Plains on Labor Day. Of the three games Rahway will probably put up as strong a fight as any one of them, for they are particularly sore over their last defeat at the hands of the Clinton Avenues. The Rahwegians will lineup as follows: Madden, rf; Crosby, ss; Arnheiter, 3b; Armstrong, 1b; Potter, 2b; R. Potter, cf; Goodwill, lf; Freeman, c; Clark, p; Mundrane, p. The game will be called at 10:30 o'clock in the morning.

Peacock to Pitch Tomorrow.

"Jack" Peacock and Ralph Schoonmaker will be the battery in the game between the Y. M. C. A. and Bound Brook nines at Bound Brook tomorrow afternoon. The local nine had a fast practise with the full squad out on Crescent Oval yesterday afternoon.

PROPOSALS FOR BRIDGE.

Sealed proposals will be received by the Committee of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union until three o'clock p. m., Wednesday, September 9, 1908, at the Court House, Elizabeth, N. J., for the construction of a bridge over Cedar Brook, Terrill Road, between the City of Plainfield and Township of Fanwood, New Jersey.

Plans and specifications are on file and may be seen at the office of F. J. Hubbard, County Engineer, 201 Park avenue, Plainfield, N. J.

The Committee reserves the right to reject any or all bids if they deem best for the interests of the county.

OBITUARY.

Laura May Hansen.

Laura May Hansen, the six-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hansen, of West Front street, died this morning from typhoid fever with which she had been ill for over a week. The child was particularly bright and of a happy disposition and her death is mourned by a host of friends and playmates. The funeral service will be held from the residence of the parents Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Patrick J. O'Sullivan.

Patrick J. O'Sullivan, of East Second street, a well-known resident of Plainfield for a great many years, died at 2:30 o'clock this morning at Muhlenberg Hospital, where he was operated upon for appendicitis. He was taken ill last week, but waited too long before deciding to have an operation. Mr. O'Sullivan was employed for many years as gardener on the Harburger place at West Front street and Giraud avenue. He was a native of Ireland. His wife died a year or so ago. He is survived by seven children, the eldest being about seventeen years old. Arrangements have not been completed for the funeral, but it will probably be held on Monday.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Rev. J. W. MacDonald, of Somerville, will preach at the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church Sunday night at 7:45 o'clock and administer the Lord's Supper. Rev. J. T. Diggs, the pastor, will receive new members and conduct the baptism. Rev. E. B. Maynard will preach in the morning and the Union Bible Class will meet immediately afterward.

Rev. Edwin Shaw, who with his family, is expected to return home today from Boulder, Col., where he has been attending the general conference of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, will occupy the pulpit at the Seventh-Day Baptist church, tomorrow morning and have charge of the Lord's Supper. His theme will be from 1st Cor. 11:24.

GAMBLERS OPEN UP FOR ONE DAY.

But Official Backers in Atlantic City Get Scared—Reformers Put Up War Against Stoy.

Atlantic City, Sept. 4—Gambling houses, closed two weeks ago by order of Governor Fort and Ditrict Attorney Goldenberg, opened up again Wednesday night in defiance of threats that their owners would be jailed. Raids had been prepared for last night, but news that the gamblers had decided to defy the authorities became public yesterday afternoon and hurried orders were given that once more closed them.

Discovery by big hotel men and financiers that the gamblers had taken another chance of again drawing down the wrath of the Governor on the resort resulted in a secret session yesterday, during which it was decided to make an open fight against the Kuehnle-Stoy Republican ring now in control. D. S. White, chairman of the finance board of City Council and owner of the big Hotel Traymore, has been asked to take the nomination at the head of the reform ticket.

Saloon keepers who believe that the resumption of gambling will cause another Sunday closing crusade, are prepared to join the movement for the election of the reform man, and if he can be induced to accept his election is assured.

TRENTON'S NEW CITY HALL.

Contract Awarded to Philadelphians for $447,000.

J. G. Doak & Co., of Philadelphia, were yesterday awarded the contract for building Trenton's new City Hall for $447,000. The Philadelphia firm agrees to employ only Trenton labor on the work, with the exception of the stone dressing and electric wiring, for the latter of which Francis Brothers & Gillette, of Philadelphia, were lower than any Trenton subcontractor.

The bid of McCall, of Philadelphia, for $439,955, and that of Prior & Brock, of Trenton, for $445,000, were rejected, because of informalities. The building is to be of white marble with a granite base. Work will be begun at once.

Cut Sleuth's Bill $10.

Excise sleuthing may not be objectionable to the Union County Board of Freeholders, but it doesn't want to pay much for it. At yesterday afternoon's meeting the prosecutor's detective submitted a bill for $16.70 for scouting around Elizabeth to see that the screens in the cafes were raised to the proper height. The bill was reduced to $6.70.

PASTOR WILL WED DIVORCEE PRIVATELY.

The Rev. Dr. W. H. Lawrence, pastor of Trinity Methodist Episcopal church, Richmond Hill, L. I., whose marriage with Mrs. Frances May Gurney Edwards, a divorced woman, did not take place in the John Street Methodist Episcopal church, Manhattan, Wednesday at the time announced, said last night at Ocean Grove, where both he and Mrs. Edwards are stopping, that there were no other reasons except that the bride-to-be had been taken ill suddenly with nervous prostration due to heart trouble and the strain and anxiety in connection with the public church ceremony.

"There are no underly causes and no trouble with my congregation," said Mr. Lawrence. "When it was seen that Mrs. Edwards would not undertake the journey from Ocean Grove to New York telegrams were at once sent to Dr. J. U. Buckley who was to have officiated; the church organist, sexton and others concerned.

"We are not married. The publicity given us is so painful we will leave Ocean Grove as soon as Mrs. Edwards is able and be privately married."

Friends kept the newspaper men from Dr. Lawrence Wednesday night, he says, and that prevented him making a statement then.

Leading members of Trinity church in Richmond Hill verify their pastor's claim that there is no trouble in the congregation over his approaching marriage.

The story that Dr. Lawrence has decided to appear before his parishioners at the next Wednesday prayer meeting to make an explanation is denied by all the church officials.

SEA YIELDS UP ONE OF ITS DEAD.

Body of Miss Strickland Found Floating Fifteen Miles Off Atlantic City.

Atlantic City, Sept. 4.—The mystery of the capsized launch was cleared yesterday when the dead body of Clara Strickland was found floating fifteen miles at sea. The body was in a good state of preservation and easily identified. Miss Strickland and Chrales Bateman, of Philadelphia, went out on a launch trip last Wednesday. They never returned. It ws rumored at the time they might have eloped.

It is now said that they entered a suicide pact because Bateman was said to be suing for a divorce so he could marry the Strickland girl, but the divorce was being strenuously fought. Bateman's body has not been found. The upturned boat was found floating in the bay. Fisherman say that the two must have met with a storm and the launch upset with them.

DROWNED AFTER FEAST.

Victim, Earl Lashe, Was ex-Manager of Former Governor Voorhee's Farm near High Bridge.

Accidental drowning is given as the cause of the death of Earl Lashe, forty-one years old, former manager of former Governor Foster M. Voorhees' farm, near High Bridge, which occurred last night in the south branch of the Raritan river at "the Arches," Califon.

With several other persons Lashe had been feasting on the banks of the Raritan, when he decided to take a swim. He entered the water, swam across and in attempting to climb the opposite embankment fell back in the water exhausted and went down in the sight of his companions before help arrived. He was carried by the swift current to the whirlpool below.

After much searching his body was found in twelve feet of water by E. C. Wentzel and Councilman E. C. Trimmer. It was removed to Naughright's morgue. Coroner Hoffman viewed the body and issued a burial permit.

Lashe was born in Germany and came to this country several years ago, locating in Canada. He became manager of the Voorhees farm three months ago and resigned last Saturday. He has no relatives in America. He fought in the German army. His body will be buried in Evergreen cemetery, Clinton, this afternoon.

GAVE COURT PIECE OF HIS MIND

Sidney Jackier, a Far Rockaway, L. I., bottler, didn't like it because Justice Rasquin, of Jamaica, made him pay his stableman some wages for which the latter sued. Consequently, he wrote a letter to the court clerk, inclosing the amount of the judgment, and incidentally relieved his mind in uncomplimentary terms as to the qualifications of Justice Rasquin.

Jackier was surprised and grieved at once to find himself on the carpet for contempt of court. His lawyer advised apology. Accordingly, Jackier wrote a most abject letter to the justice, but made the mistake of appealing to him as a brother Mason.

"A Mason has no more standing than a hod carrier," said the irate justice, when Jackier stood before him yesterday. He was finally forgiven, however.

He paid his stableman, also a lawyer for defending the suit, likewise another lawyer for telling him to apologize. Incidentally he learned something new about Masonry.

MONTCLAIR KILLS VOTING MACHINES.

By 909 to 205 the Citizens of the Town Decide to Abolish the Devices.

At the special election yesterday in each election district of Montclair, to decide whether the voting machines should be retained or the old time ballot boxes restored, the retention of the voting machines was defeated in every district by large majorities.

Those who were opposed to the retention of the machines had no doubt of carrying the Second and Fourth wards against the machines, but they expected a bitter fight in the First and Third wards. The fight in the Third ward did not materalize, but a determined effort was made in the First ward. Seward Davis, president of the Republican Club of the first district of that ward, hustled voters to the polls in his automobile, and a determined effort was made to retain the machines, which resulted in the largest vote in town. The fight in the second district was given up at noon.

A total of 1,114 votes were cast in the town, and the vote stood 205 for the retention of the machines, while 909 votes were recorded against the machines.

Te vote was about one-third of the total registry, and nearly one-half of the vote cast last election.

TONY PASTOR LEAVES $10,000 TO ACTORS' FUND.

The will of Tony Pastor, the theatrical manager, who died some days ago at his home at Elmhurst, Queens Borough, was filed yesterday in the Surrogate's office, in New York. The bulk of the estate, the value of which is not given, is left to his widow. The Actors' Fund of America receives $10,000; $2,000 is left to Henry Pastor, son of the late William Pastor, and $1,000 is bequeathed to Mrs. Adele Pastor, widow of the testator's brother, Frand Pastor.

The dramatic, musical and other manuscripts of Mr. Pastor, as well as his wardrobe, are to be sold at auction. His name, as a trade mark, is also to be sold, and also his leasehold in the Fourteenth street theatre

To the executor of the will, Abe Hummel, the disbarred lawyer, and to his sister, Bertha Hummel, the executrix, are left various medals and pieces of jewelry. To Henry Sanderson is devised $500 and a gold watch. David May and Magistrate Joseph H. Moss were the witnesses to the will and its codicil, which was executed Jan. 21, 1899.

The estate is said to be of considerable value.

CUTLER TO STIR UP "UNCLE DAN."

Democratic Leader in Morris Believes He Can Defeat the Republican Boss.

Former Judge Willard W. Cutler, Democratic leader in Morris county, is preparing to make the campaign of his life against the Republican candidates for office this fall. There's dissension in the Republican party and Mr. Cutler believes he sees a chance to beat "Uncle Dan" Voorhees' candidate for county clerk.

Morristown and Morris county folk are, like the voters of some other residential districts, open of mind and ready to listen to political arguments. The Democratic leaders believe that, as in times gone by, the day of reckoning has come for their political enemies and that Republicans and "Uncle Dan" are going to be put to the sword of public disapproval.

Morris and Essex county Democrats have always worked in harmony, while there hasn't been a very close relationship between the men of Morris county and Hudson. There is gratification among the workers that an Essex man, City Counsel James R. Nugent, of Newark, has been made State committee chairman.

BRAVE WOMAN SAVES TWO.

Climbs Along a Cornice Into Gas-filled Room.

While spellbound spectators watched her from the street, Mrs. Walter J. Jarman coolly picked her way along the cornice of a lodging house at Atlantic City, owned by her husband, and forced an entrance through a window to a room where R. H. Geise and Edward Wilson had been overcome by gas. When the police arrived the resourceful woman had thrown wide the windows and doors and done everything in her power to revive the unconscious men.

Doctors declared the bravery and prompt action of Mrs. Jarman had saver the men's lives. The escaping gas came from a tube which had been disconnected from a gas stove.

Sleeper Perishes in Flames.

Penned in by flames, Frank Gallagher of Jamesburg was burned to death in a fire which destroyed a house owned by John Held, in that place, early yesterday. It is believed the man was asleep at the time the fire started, and that, if he woke up at all, it was after the fire had advanced so as to make escape impossible. The Jamesburg fire department responded to an alarm, but the fire had gained such headway that the firemen were successful only in saving adjoining buildings. Gallagher lived in the house by himself. The origin of the fire is unknown.

"TRUSTY" PREVENTS JAIL DELIVERY.

Guards Catch Men Convicted on Tuesday Trying to Flee Jersey Jail.

"Watch the bathroom tonight at 8 o'clock. Do not come near me or say a word. Be sure and follow instructions. Watch from outside and get the whole bunch."

This note was slipped into the hand of Deputy Sheriff Dilts in the Hunterdon county jail at Flemington by a "trusty" Wednesday afternoon. At 7:30 o'clock Wednesday night an investigation showed that a portion of the flooring had been torn up. Descending to the cellar, the guards found two prisoners busily engaged in trying to pry off the bars of an outside window. The prisoners, William Bannon and Joseph Williams, who were sentenced Wednesday to five and three years, respectively, in the penitentiary, for robbing Abram Peters, a veteran of the Civil War, of his pension money, were taken back to their cells.

J. Henry Crane and Robert Newton Crane, of this city, left yesterday for Asbury Park, where they will remain until after Labor Day.

PETITIONS FILED TODAY

Complete Tickets in Union County Made Up By the Parties.

MANY ASSEMBLY NOMINEES.

Somerset Republicans Present Their Candidates But Democratic Nominations Not Received by Noon.

The complete Republican and Democratic tickets in Union county were filed in the office of County Clerk James C. Calvert, Elizabeth, today, according to the new law. The list shows that there are seven nominees for the Assembly on the Republican ticket, while the Democrats have confined themselves to the nomination of three candidates.

Robert Kirkland, of Elizabeth, has been nominated on the Republican ticket for sheriff, and he will be opposed by James E. Martine, the choice of the Democrats. State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, of this city, will have for his opponent, Fred C. Hyer, of Rahway, who has been chosen by the Democrats to make the fight. The complete tickets as nominated by the Republicans and Democrats follow:

Republican.

For State Senator—Ernest R. Ackerman. For the General Assembly—Assemblyman Carlton B. Pierce, of Cranford; Assemblyman A. F. Kirstein, of Rahway; Lloyd Thompson, of Westfield; Augustus W. Schwartz, R. F. Henry, Frank C. Stultzlef and Charles A. Trimble, of Elizabeth. For Coroner—Dr. Adolph Degenring, of Elizabeth. For Sheriff—Robert Kirkland, of Elizabeth.

Democratic.

For State Senator—Fred C. Hyer, of Rahway. For the General Assembly—Wilbur F. Brower, of New Providence; Jeremiah A. Kiernan, and Fred Rieke, of Elizabeth. For Sheriff—James E. Martine, of Plainfield. For Coroner—Otto Wagner, of Elizabeth.

The Republicans of Somerset county filed their complete ticket today, but there appears to be some doubt as to the full Democratic ticket. However, a complete list of the nominees may be filed before tonight. The Republican ticket for the county follows:

For State Senator—Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, of Somerville. For member of the General Assembly—W. W. Smalley, of Bound Brook. For County Clerk—A. G. Anderson, of Somerville. For members of the Board of Freeholders—Joseph Fitzga, Somerville; P. H. Smith, Bound Brook; J. V. Bunn, Bernards; T. E. Gibson, Franklin.

The Democrats have nominated Col. Nelson Y. Dungan for State Senator, and it was reported today that Horace Coddington had been nominated for the Assembly. The petition of Walter Linbarger, of North Plainfield, was filed today for county clerk, and he will fight it out with G. W. Anderson, former deputy surrogate, of Somerville, for the nomination. Among those mentioned as nominees for members of the Board of Freeholders are John Slattery, of Raritan, and Joseph Fields, of Bound Brook.

While the majority of the petitions have been filed by the Republican nominees in Plainfield, the time for doing this will not be up until next Saturday. The only Republican who has thus far failed to file his petition is Councilman Frank DeWitt Randolph, but he will probably comply with the law within a few days. Thus far the Democrats have not filed their petitions and it is not known just who the party will place in nomination.

Favor Martine For Sheriff.

At an enthusiastic meeting of the recently organized James E. Martine Club, of Elizabeth, held last night, resolutions were passed favoring the candidacy of James E. Martine for sheriff and the 150 Democrats present cheered the action for several minutes. John J. Woodruff was elected president of the club. The speaker of the evening was Attorney Jeremiah A. Kiernan, one of the Democratic nominees for the Assembly. He spoke entirely on National affairs, frequently mentioning the name of William J. Bryan and James E. Martine. He did not refer to his candidacy, neither did he say what course he would pursue if elected.

Church Closed for Repairs.

No services will be held by the First Presbyterian congregation tomorrow, the church being closed for repairs. It will be opened the following Sunday when Dr. Herring will observe communion.

A Private Clambake.

A private clambake arranged by Erwin Y. Neighbor will be he held at Sebring's Mills tomorrow. About fifty Plainfielders and guests from Elizabeth and Somerville will attend.

PASTORS TO OCCUPY THEIR PULPITS TOMORROW

In a number of instances the pastors of the local churches have returned from their vacation and will occupy their pulpits tomorrow, when the regular services will be resumed for the fall and winter. The announcements for tomorrow are as follows:

Park Avenue Baptist church, preaching by the pastor, Rev. A. E. Finn, morning and evening; First Baptist church, preaching by Rev. Dr. Howard Grose, of New York, morning and evening; Faith chapel, preaching by pastor, Rev. J. W. Musson, morning and evening; Trinity Reformed church, closed on account of cleaning and repairs; Congregational church, preaching by pastor, Rev. C. L. Goodrich, no evening service; First Presbyterian church, closed for cleaning and repairs; Monroe Avenue M. E. church, preaching by pastor, Rev. C. S. Kemble, morning and evening; First M. E. church, preaching by pastor, Rev. Dr. A. C. McCrea, morning and evening; Grace M. E. church, preaching by pastor, Rev. Ora J. Shoop, morning and evening; Hope chapel, preaching by pastor, Rev. L. R. Howard, morning and evening; Warren chapel, preaching by pastor, Rev. J. O. McKelvey, morning and evening; St. Peter's Lutheran church, Rev. Theodore Polleske, of Ocean Grove, will preach in English at 10:30 and in the evening in Swedish; Rev. J. W. MacDonald, of Somerville, will preach at Mt. Zion A. M. E. church in the evening and Rev. E. B. Maynard will preach in the morning.

BOROUGH STREET NAMES CHANGED BY ORDINANCE

The ordinance providing for the changing of the names of certain streets in the borough, was adopted on third reading at the September meeting of the North Plainfield Council, last night, and the changes will become effective October 1.

The changes made are as follows: Mountain avenue, between Grove street and Jefferson avenue and between Prospect avenue and Cedar street, to be known as Ridge avenue; Maple avenue, between Magnolia and West End avenue and between Rockview avenue and Willow avenues, to be known as Tappen avenue; Cedar avenue, between Willow and Rockview avenues and between Magnolia and West End avenues, to be known as Locust place; Prospect avenue to be known as Interhaven avenue.

In the case of Prospect avenue, which is situated near the home of Former Mayor N. B. Smalley in the upper part of the borough, a peculiar incident arose. Half of the avenue is in the borough and the other half outside. It was first changed to Edgewood avenue, but later another street of the same name was discovered, hence the second change.

After the meeting last night, Mr. Smalley came in and he questioned the right of the Borough Council to change the name of half the street, but Mayor Townsend quoted his authority from the book of borough ordinances, showing that the governing body has the right to change the names and number of streets. It is not at all likely that Mr. Smalley will make any vigorous protest against the change of the name of the street and he will probably call his half of the street by the same name as the other half.

Bible Society Convention.

The ninety-second annual convention of the Somerset county Bible Society will be held Tuesday, September 15, in the Reformed church at Harlingen. The sessions will be at 10:30 a. m. and 2 p. m. The sermon at the morning session will be delivered by Rev. Floris Ferwerda, of Millstone, and the special address in the afternoon by Rev. William H Morgan, D. D., of Newark. Contributions should be sent to Rev. Dr. William H. DeHart, treasurer, at his address, Raritan.

Father Bogan a Speaker.

Many interesting addresses were features of yesterday's session of the fourth annual convention of the Catholic Young Men's National Union in Philadelphia. Among the speakers were Rev. B. M. Bogan, of this city, and Rev. Edward F. Quirk, of Newark. Rev. Mr. Quirk's subject was "Common-sense Views on Education."

Will View Niagara.

Elmer V. Ackor, Borough Clerk F. A. Martin, Albert Steiner and Arthur Humble, left today over the Lehigh Valley Railroad for Niagara Falls, where they will remain until after Labor Day.

COLORED SWINDLER HAD A LOCAL MAN'S LETTER

Eugene P. Pinchback, colored, who, under various aliases has acquired a police record, and at one time posed as a son of former Governor Pinckney S. B. Pinchback, of Louisiana, was arrested in the office of the Goerke Company, in Market street, Newark, yesterday, by Patrolman King, of the First Precinct plainclothes squad. It is alleged he attempted to pass a worthless check for $10 upon Theodore Gerth, treasurer of the company. The check was drawn on the Union National Bank, made payable to "Edward C. Steward" and signed and indorsed "C. S Nugent."

Several blank checks from the counter of the same bank, with a number of letters showing the prisoner has been busy with many political leaders in Union county, were found in Pinchback's pockets. Included among the letters was one from Assemblyman Kirstein, of Rahway, and another from County Clerk James C. Calvert, each of which refers to politics. The Kirstein letter referred to a donation sent to Pinchback by the Assemblyman.

With the letters was a subscription list which represented Pinchback as chairman of the Afro-American League of Union county. Mr. Calvert's letter referred to some political proposition made by Pinckback August 8. Mr. Calvert explained that he could take no part in "the financial" phase of the scheme and went on to state that "Mr. Kean or Mr. Smith" might make the necessary arrangements." The county clerk invited Pinchback to visit him. Another letter, written on a letterhead of the Senate, came from Charles S. Sminck, secretary of Senator Ernest A. Ackerman, of Plainfield. This missive advised Pinchback that his "esteemed favor" had been received and that Senator Ackerman was out of the country.

"JUDGE" VON MINDEN OUT FOR ASSEMBLY

The petition of Justice of the Peace Rene P. F. Von Minden, of New Market, as Republican candidate for assemblyman from Middlesex county was today forwarded to County Clerk Conger, at New Brunswick. It has the endorsement of some of the county's leading men in politics, among them former Assemblyman William R. Drake, of Stelton. There are three candidates for the vacancies, the other two being Assemblyman Voorhees, who is seeking re-election, and Edwin McKeag, of New Brunswick.

"Judge" Von Minden is widely known throughout Middlesex as an efficient justice. Since his election, he has had more than 400 cases and in but a single instance has his decision been reversed. He has a large circle of friends and supporters at his home in New Market and through out the county.

Named for State Deputy.

At a district meeting of the Daughters of Rebekah held with Esther Lodge, of Elizabeth, last night, Mrs. Jacob F. Kettenring, of Friendship Lodge, this city, was nominated for the position of state deputy of the lodge. The delegation from Friendship Lodge at the meeting included Mrs. Jacob F. Kettenring, Mrs. Mary Walsh and Mrs. P. H. Latourette. On Tuesday night a delegation from Esther Lodge, accompanied by the State assembly and Mrs. M. T. Randolph, of Elizabeth, one of the State officers, will pay a fraternal visit to Friendship Lodge in this city.

St. Stephen's Calls New Rector.

Rev. Morgan Ashley, pastor of the Episcopal church at Butler, has received a call from the vestry of St. Stephen's church, Netherwood, to succeed Rev. Arthur Searing Peck in the parish. It is reported that the call will probably be accepted and that Rev. Mr. Morgan will begin his duties in the local field about October 1. Until that time, Rev. Charles Kidden, of Asbury Park, will be the supply.

A Real Estate Trade.

Robert McNabb has traded his new two-family house, No. 95 Westervelt avenue, with Woolston & Buckle for a plot of ground at East Front street and Johnson avenue, 159 feet on Front street, by 200 feet on Johnson avenue. Mr. McNabb intends building several houses and selling or renting them. Chas. H. Lyman conducted the deal.

Mrs. Mead to Lead Meeting.

Mrs. F. G. Mead will be in charge of the vesper song service for September, to be held at the Y. W. C. A. tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock. Singing will be a feature of the service.

WHAT'S DOING LABOR DAY

Baseball, Horse Racing and Golf Attractions in Local Sporting Circles.

BICYCLE RACING REVIVED.

Tennis Matches at the Clubs and Italian Fireworks at Night —Many Will Go Away.

Marking as it does the waning of summer and the commencement of fall, Labor Day will supply an unusual variety of sporting and social events and if the day be clear, local crowds will throng the ball fields, race tracks, tennis courts and golf links. Many Plainfielders have already left to spend the holiday out of town, but nearly as many others will entertain guests.

The Clinton Avenue baseball nine will figure in a double-header at Crescent Oval on the holiday. In the morning, their opponents will be their old rivals from Scotch Plains and in the afternoon they will cross bats with the strong Rahway nine. The Y. M. C. A. boys will journey to Somerville to play the West Ends in the afternoon. Other local nines will battle for supremacy on diamonds of city and borough.

The "Biking Bug" has struck town again, and road races will be held under the auspices of the Plainfield Cycle Cinb at Avon Park. In the afternoon. Among the events will be a ten-mile road race and a mile race for the local championship. There will also be a championship race for boys under fourteen years of age. The racing will begin at 1:30 o'clock.

A special holiday match will be held at the Park Golf Club links and there will be unusually large crowds of golfers on both courses. In the evening there will be several dinners served, and dancing will end the holiday at both club houses. Tennis will also attract many to the courts at both the Country Club and the Park Club. The Watchung Hunt Club members will also have a holiday tennis tournament.

Of especial attraction to horse lovers will be the races to be held in the afternoon at the Gentlemen's Driving Park, and an excellent card is announced. Over in the borough, the Independent Gun Club will turn out for a holiday shoot, and there will be special events at both the ranges and the traps. In the evening the local Italians will have a fireworks display at Crescent Oval in connection with a band concert.

Theatre-goers will find entertainment at the New Plainfield theatre, where the attraction afternoon and evening will be "A Message from Mars."

The Jersey Central Railroad will take many Plainfielders on the holiday excursions to Lake Hopatcong and Mauch Chunk, and some will go from town to attend the regatta and canoe races on the Rahway river at Cranford.

SOMERSET FREEHOLDERS DISCUSS ROAD IMPROVEMENT.

A sepcial meeting of the Somerset County Board of Chosen Freeholders was held yesterday. The members met at Blawenburg and viewed the road applied for to be improved under the State Aid road act from Blawenburg to Stoutsburg. Organization was effected at Hopewell. Members Smith and Codington were absent.

State Road Commissioner Gilkyson of Trenton, was present and addressed the session. J. Hervey Stout and a number of taxpayers were heard in advocacy of the early improvement of the road, after which the board freely discussed the matter and further action was deferred until the regular meeting of the board on Tuesday, September 8, in the court room in Somerville.

Mrs. Victoria Miller.

Mrs. Victoria Miller, aged 77 years, died last night at the home of her daughter, on Jackson avenue, following an illness of two weeks with pneumonia. She had been a resident of Plainfield twenty-eight years and is survived by a husband and several children. The funeral service will be held from the residence of the daughter, Monday morning at 8 o'clock and from St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock, where mass will be said for the repose of the soul.

New Pastor at Mt. Olive Church.

Rev. M. W. Vaughn, formerly of Roselle, who accepted the call to the pastorate of the Mt. Olive Baptist church, will enter upon his new duties tomorrow. Mr. Vaughn comes to Plainfield well recommended by the white and colored people of Roselle, where he was pastor of a colored Baptist church for nine years. He will administer the Lord's Supper tomorrow night and will preach in the morning.

ANOTHER CYCLIST TUMBLES IN ROAD RACE PRACTICE

The second accident in connection with training for the ten mile road race to be held Labor Day took place early this morning when Harvey Douglas, of the Plainfield Cycle Club got a nasty spill as the result of running into the rear wheel of the rider in front of him while on the South Plainfield leg of the course. Douglas had his right arm bruised from wrist to shoulder by the macadam and his knee was also hurt when he tumbled. He will be in condition to go in the race Monday, unless his leg stiffens up so as to make pedaling impossible.

The accident happened when Douglas tried to take the lead in the bunch of cycle club members who were out for an early morning spin. Douglas, who was speeding up, ran into another cyclist and a moment later sprawled headlong. His wheel was not badly damaged.

Sherman Haberle, who was injured in a similar spill a few days ago in practicing for the same race, was at Muhlenberg Hospital today to have his elbow dressed. He declares that he will be ready to ride in the event Monday, although he is carrying his arm in a sling. He is reported to be in excellent condition and has been making some fast laps.

BIG "TEDDY B" CAUSES CHIEF WEISS' RETREAT

One of those trick dancing bears which travels around the country in charge of a terpsichorean manager from Italy had Chief Marshal Weiss of the borough police force picked out for an embrace on Somerset street yesterday afternoon, when the Italian on the other end of its rope was warned to leave the borough with the managerie delegate. Teddy was attracted by the display of brass buttons and sauntered over to the Chief with such an earnest expression of hunger that the officer reached for his whistle. But a yank on the rope by the Italian "saved his life."

The bear's manager, accompanied by his wife, two children and an attendant mule are traveling from town to town in a wagon drawn by a shabby gray horse. The wagon is their home as well as their means of transportation and the bear is supposed to "lumber" along behind the vehicle en route, and execute intricate Salome movements when furnished with the proper dance music. And Somerset street was one of the stops, yesterday afternoon. The animal was poised on its hind legs, shuffling from place to place on the borough's main street, to music, jerks on the rope, and personal remarks by the Italian, when Chief Wiess espied them.

Like Plainfield, the borough has a strict ordinance prohibiting village street performances, and it was only yesterday that Chief Weiss hustled a one-man marionette orchestra out of town. Accordingly he told the Italian of the ordinance and requested him to leave the borough. As the two stood talking by the wagon, His Rooseveltship discontinued the dance and walked seriously over to the Chief. And Mr. Weiss changed his position so as to put the wagon between him and the "approaching animal." In so doing he fell over his wheel, but, picking himself up, used it as a barrier. He then continued to state facts about the borough ordinance and the penalties for its violation, until finally the Italian reeled in "Bruin waked up the horse, and started the caravan of music and animal along the highway toward Watchung.

Held Up Auto Driver.

Patrolman John Kelly, while stationed at Park avenue and Front street, this morning, brought a colored chafteur up with a sharp turn because he insisted on driving his machine to the left side of the corner against the recently-established rule. The officer jumped on the running-board of the auto and called the driver down, adding that if he did not know how to run the auto he should give up his job. The colored man explained that he took the course he did to avoid ruuing a woman down, to which the officer replied that he should have stopped his machine rather than take any chances.

Major Casler Here Tomorrow.

Captain and Mrs. A. Hopkins will conduct the services tonight in the Salvation Army Hall on East Second street. Special services will be conducted tomorrow at 4 o'clock and 8 o'clock by Major and Mrs. George F. Casler, of Newark, divisional officers for New Jersey. The Major and and his wife are very interesting speakers and all are invited to hear them, this being their first visit to Plainfield.

WOMAN TELLS STRANGE STORY OF DESERTION

Claiming kindred with well-known Plainfielders and asserting that she is a descendant of the Fitz Randolph family with relatives in England, Mrs. John Randolph, who says her home is in Summit, came to police headquarters early today with a wierd tale of desertion by her husband. The woman, who is about fifty years old, says that she has been married for eighteen years and has been living in Summit. Last week she and her hsuband went to Reading, Pa. While there, the man developed a violent attack of temporary insanity, and persisted that Mrs. Randolph was not his wife—never had been, and is harming his reputation by being with him. He refused to stay with her any longer, and, she claims, deserted her in the Pennsylvania city on Wednesday.

Mrs. Randolph was short of funds, but had money enough to reach Plainfield, where she called on the police to help her recover her husband. Chief Kiely told her that she should apply through the police at her home town, Summit, and that he could do nothing toward recovering her husband for her. She told a consistent story, so he referred her to a local Randolph when she said that if she could see some of her local "relatives," she could soon identify herself and secure an advance.

She accordingly went to the man designated this morning and repeated her story of desertion. The latter told a Daily Press reporter that her claim of relationship is without foundation. She finally secured some money and started off on a trolley car for Summit.

BOSSCHEITER CASE MAY BE PARALLELED AT SUMMIT

The rumored implication of a number of young married men of Summit, in the mysterious death a few days ago of a young servant girl has stirred that city, and the promise of an open investigation and prosecutions has terrorized the members of the coterie blamed for the young woman's death. The case promises to be a parallel of the Bosscheiter crime at Paterson.

Those whose names are mentioned and who probably will be called before the Grand Jury next Thursday have denied all knowledge of the death of any young woman of their acquaintance, and declare that the whole sensation is based upon reports which have no foundation.

At the same time they admit that they have held almost nightly revels of some kind for a year past, meeting in offices and stores after the town became quiet at night, and that young women, most of them servant girls employed in the city, have been entertained by them.

The missing woman was a young foreigner of attractive appearance, and is said to have been brought to one of the nightly revels by another servant girl. The missing girl was attracted by the midnight parties, but those who knew her believe that she attended in a spirit of fun, and that her entertainers were greatly disappointed by reason of her unyielding attitude.

The matter is now being investigated by the Union county prosecutor's office and sensational developments are expected in a few days.

ANDREW CARY'S FATHER DEAD AT HIS VIRGINIA HOME.

Rev. G. C. Cary, colored, father of Andrew Cary and the Misses Cora, Clara and Helen Cary, of West Fourth street, died at his home at Esmont, Virginia, yesterday. He was pastor of the Rose Hill church there and had been ill for some time.

Mr. Cary and his sisters were summoned South several days ago by a telegram reporting their father's illness, and were at his beside when the end came. Rev. Mr. Cary has visited this city several times and has spoken at the colored church at Westfield. He is survived by a widow and ten children.

At Netherwood Fresh Air Camp.

George E. Hall, one of the officers of the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp which closes for the season tomorrow, showed a series of excellent stereopticon views of European scenes at the camp auditorium last night. The pictures included views of points of interest in Germany Switzerland, Italy, India and Scotland. Following the exhibition of pictures, Mr. Hall distributed chewing gum to the camp children and each one also received a souvenir bank and a cake of toilet soap.

A NEIGHBORLY PROTEST

BOROUGH COUNCIL PETITIONED.

Adjoining Owners Ask That His Request for an Improvement Permit Be Refused.

Declaring that he was sorry that his acquisition of property on Watchung avenue in the vicinity of Pearl street, had caused a feeling among his neighbors, Henry DeMott, of Somerset street, addressed the Borough Council, last night, following a vigorous protest from the adjoining property-owners against improvements which Mr. DeMott has planned and for which he has asked permission to make. He explained that he purchased the property a year ago and had since been trying to rent it to respectable people. He admitted that he had misjudged some of his tenants, but is now in a position to maintain the property in a respectable manner.

Mr. DeMott further explained that after acquiring the property Mary Riley, whose rent is paid by the borough, arranged to occupy the place, and he did not consider her an objectionable character. He denied that she was an Italian, the protest against his improvements being on the ground that he was maintaining Italian shanties. In fact, he said, that there was but one Italian family there.

"I bought the property a year ago and paid for it," continued Mr. DeMott, "notwithstanding the report that I had acquired it, paid $100 down and did not care who occupied it. Just to show how accommodating I am I will loan the borough $1,000 tonight if they want it. I recently sold my Somerset street property for a big price and would like to finish up the improvements planned and I assure you that I won't rent to Italians. I try to live decent and peaceable with my neighbors and I hope that my petition for permission to go ahead will be granted. I want to say now that in the spring I will present a petition to erect a 100 foot barn on the property.

"Recently, during the absence of Mayor Townsend and several other members of the Council, I obtained a temporary permit to move the building in question back from the street. My plan now is to cover the frame part with concrete and erect a cement block front to be used for an office."

The protest against Mr. DeMott's plans and improvements was presented by Mrs. E. Meyer, George Feller and a dozen other property-owners in the neighborhood of Pearl street and Watchung avenue. They declared that ever since Mr. DeMott had acquired the property it had been a disgrace to that particular section. They objected to what they termed "the Italian shanties," and they protested against the granting of Mr. DeMott's petition.

The protest was received by the Council early in the evening and the members decided in view of the discussion and objection to Mr. DeMott's petition to lay the matter over until they could take time to investigate further and learn he exact situation.

Grace Church Services.

The services at Grace church tomorrow will be held in the auditorium of the parish house. The church has been thoroughly renovated and redecorated throughout and will be reopened with appropriate services on Sunday, September 13. The service on that date will be of a character suitable to the occasion as follows: 7:30 a. m., celebration of the Holy Eucharist; 10:30, Holy Communion and sermon by the rector; 5 p. m., Evensong and address.

W. C. T. U. Annual.

The annual meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held in the rooms on Madison avenue, Thursday afternoon, September 10. It will be an all-day meeting with a lunch-box repast at noon. The State president will attend the meeting and have something to say during the afternoon, at which time a reception will be given to Mrs. Mahala Sims, the oldest member.

Will Hold a Lawn Fete.

Several enterprising children interested in local charities, will give a lawn fete at the residence of Mrs. D. S. Alpaugh, on East Sixth street, Thursday afternoon, from 4 to 6 o'clock for the benefit of The Day Nursery. Ice cream, home-made cake and candy will be for sale. The admission will be free.

Senator To Be The Speaker.

State Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, of Somerville, will be the speaker at the Harvest Home celebration at Middlebush on Monday.

HEAD OF SCHOOL BOARD IS ACCUSED

William E. Burns, president of the Board of Education of Highland Park, near New Brunswick, was arrested Thursday night on a serious charge made by Nora Gilliland, 13 years old. The arrest on such a charge has created the most intense excitement. His family is one of the most prominent in the town. He has been president of the Board of Health and tax assessor, and, besides holding other offices of high trust, has been one of the leading business men of the community.

He has been leading the vigorous fight now under way in the Republican party against the machine politicians and was considered one of the most upright and high-spirited citizens.

From his cell, where he is held in $3,000 bail, he declared yesterday that his arrest was a part of a conspiracy to blackmail him, and his friends believe that it was instigated by his enemies in politics.

The charge is made against him by Nora Gilliland, whom he took into his home from the Catholic Children's Home, at Hopewell. The girl, who is pretty and bright, made the complaint first to her mother, she says, and then to the prosecutor. For two days the prosecutor and the police investigated before taking action, and on the reports of two physicians, who had interviewed the girl, the arrest was made at 7 o'clock Thursday night, while Burns was at dinner with his family.

WIFE OF A YEAR KILLS HERSELF.

Arrayed in Wedding Gown She Lies Down and Sends Bullet Into Her Heart.

A 16-year-old wife locked herself in her room yesterday during the absence of her husband and sent a bullet into her heart. Her husband on his return to the house for lunch had to get a small boy to climb over the transom to open the door, and when he entered the bedroom of his wife he was horrified to see her lying in bed arrayed in her wedding gown. The pistol was still clasped in her right hand. The body was cold, showing she had been dead at least two hours.

Mrs. Louis Yarsas, of Bayonne, is the dead bride. She was married about a year ago. Her husband is only 20 years old, and is employed in the Standard Oil works at Bayonne. He left yesterday morning, as usual, to go to work. As soon as he left the house the young bride must have started preparations for death, as the breakfast dishes were found unwashed on the table. She got out her wedding dress, which she had not worn since her wedding night, carefully arrayed herself in it, and put on white shoes and stockings. After locking all the doors and bolting the windows in the apartment, she went to her bedroom and, lying on the bed, shot herself.

The police were notified and Yarsas said his domestic life had been a very happy one and there was no real reason for his wife to end her life. The couple lived in a three-story apartment house at 163 East Twenty-second street. Those in the house heard no report of the pistol.

PISTOL UNDER PILLOW CAUSED CHILD'S DEATH.

Agnes Bole, the eighteen-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Bole, of Trenton, was killed at her home yesterday by the accidental discharge of a revolver which had been placed under a pillow in the bed occupied by her parents.

After arising yesterday the father began to play with Agnes, when another child, William, who is three years old, awoke from his sleep, and, crawling out of his own bed, was about to join his sister in play, when he pulled a pillow off his father's bed.

The revolver dropped to the floor and exploded, the bullet passing through the little girl's abdomen. The child screamed and after a hasty examination the father telephoned for a physician, but before the latter arrived the child had expired.

Because of a number of robberies of late in his neighborhood, Mr. Bole had recently purchased the revolver.

'GATOR AT LONG BRANCH.

Fourth Found in Brook Which Gave Name to City.

Long Branch, Sept. 5.—While flushing the Long Branch brook, Frank White, John Lenon and Joseph Jackson yesterday found an alligator under a pile of dead grass and weeds. It measured twenty-three inches and is thought to be about two and a half years old. It is on exhibition at the Arcade Hotel.

This is the fourth 'gator caught within a year in the brook and along the Shrewsbury river. All were about the same size. Some discussion was aroused when the other three were found. It is thought that Hartwig Baruch, who summers by the river, brought them from the South and lost them from his pen.

FIFTY LINKS IN THE CHAIN OF SUCCESS

A Great Store's Golden Jubilee

Hahne & Co.'s 50th Anniversary

Celebration, Beginning Tues., Sept. 8th

Magnificent Decorations! Dazzling Illuminations!

New Jersey's greatest retail establishment will celebrate its 50th anniversary in September. The business was established fifty years ago. The new store was opened seven years ago.

We combine both celebrations into one grand jubilee.

We invite all New Jersey to come to our birthday party.

The store, outside and in, will be magnificently decorated and illuminated—nothing like it has ever been seen in New Jersey, or perhaps in the United States.

Besides wonderful decorations and illuminations there will be daily concerts, and on Tuesday morning, Sept. 8th, there will be a street parade of the many wagons and automobiles employed in the delivery service.

Best of all, perhaps most important to you, will be the

ANNIVERSARY SALE

Beginning Tuesday, September 8—Continuing Thruout the Month

in which every department in the store will participate with offerings of new and dependable merchandise at the most astonishing prices ever quoted. There will be no souvenirs other than the bargains we offer, but the goods you get at the prices we will name will make the event most memorable.

People for many miles around will attend our anniversary celebration, for it is seldom that they have the opportunity of taking part in an event so momentous as this.

Come and bring your friends, not only once but often.

The fans will have an abundance of baseball between now and Labor Day and all good attractions. Today the Clinton Avenues will play McNulty Brothers' team at Crescent Oval and on Labor Day they will meet Rahway and Scotch Plains, the former in the morning and the latter in the afternoon.

Through a misunderstanding there will be no band of music at Crescent Oval, Monday morning, but there will be a good baseball game with Rahway.

Hal Chase, the one-time star first sacker of the Yankees, has flown to the Pacific coast, where he will play outlaw baseball. Perhaps, if Owner Farrel got rid of some more stars and engaged ordinary players in their places, he would be able to win a pennant. A team made up of stars exclusively never did work well together.

The Y. M. C. A. team went to Bound Brook this afternoon, where they will cross bats with Manager Newhouse's aggregation.

Clifford Randolph will have his hands full pitching today and Monday for the Clinton Avenues.

The seventeen-inning battle betweeen Brooklyn and Philadelphia in the Quaker City this week, in which the Phillies came out victorious, 3 to 2, was remarkable in the fact that Corridon, who pitched the entire game for the Phillies, struck out only one man, but he didn't give a base on balls. McIntyre and Rucker, who twirled for Brooklyn, had a total of seven strikeouts. McIntyre getting three in the nine innings he operated while Rucker fanned in the eight innings he pitched. Despite the fact that he had only one strikeout to his credit, Corridon was effective and held the Superbas to nine hits. The Phillies registered a total of thirteen off McIntyre and Rucker, four of which were made by Corridon.

The Phillies, when the ninth inning opened looked like sure winners with the score 2 to 0, but Tim Jordan was responsible for making the contest go overtime. In that inning Alperman doubled and reached third on a passed ball. Hummell brought Alperman home with a single, and Hummell scored on Jordan's triple.

Corridon won his own game in the seventeenth on a timely hit, which brought in the winning run. Bransfield reached first on a single and scooted to third on a sacrifice. With two out Corridon hammered the ball to right and Bransfield tallied the winning run.

The National Baseball Commission in session Wednesday, made two important rulings. The first was the case of Leslie Grant and Mike Doolin, of the Philadelphia National League Club, who played with the Jersey City Club in an exhibition game against the New York Giants in Jersey City during the season, and fined the Philadelphia club $50 for allowing these players to take part in the game.

It appears that the men played with Jersey City with the consent of their club, and as the club assumed all responsibility the players themselves were not penalized, but a fine was imposed on the club management.

The other was on the rule regarding waivers by major league clubs for purchased minor league players, which rule was amended at the meeting of the commission.

GOLF.

The members of the Park Golf Club will play for the challenge, President's and Golf Club trophies today and on Monday there will be play for the Holiday cup and an approaching competition, mixed couples.

The Fall handicap, classes A and B, will be started at the Plainfield Country Club today and continued every Saturday during the balance of the season. On Monday there will be special holiday events.

The usual weekly dinner-dance will be an attraction at the Plainfield Country Club tonight.

Frank O. Reinhart has been away from the city for several weeks and in consequence he has been missed at the Plainfield Country Club.

Leighton Calkins, president of the Plainfield Country Club, has also been away from home considerable this summer, during which time he has played the game more or less.

It is doubtful whether "Marty" O'Loughlin will be able to do much in playing golf this season on account of the injury to his wrist. As soon as he engages in a match the injury bothers him.

The Green committee of the Plainfield Country Club, of which George Schoonmaker is the chairman, has lost no time in keeping the course in shape for the opening of the fall play and the members are sure to find it very satisfactory.

Aside from the increasing interest in golf at the Park Golf Club, some of the members find a great deal of pleasure in playing tennis on the club's courts. They have been very popular this season.

MOXON'S WITHDRAWAL.

John Rutherford Moxon, for two years the machine Assemblyman from Union County, has withdrawn from the contest now in progress and is no longer a candidate for renomination. His given reasons are, because his employers do not want him to devote so much time to outside affairs. The chemical company with which he is associated expects big business during the coming year and feel that Mr. Moxon's whole time and attention will be needed to handle it.

Mr. Moxon's employers are not the only ones to be congratulated. His constituents in Union county are in no wise claiming commiserations. Moxon has been a machine man from the first. He was put forward, nominated and elected in the interests of John F. Dryden, but was compelled to admit shortly after his election that nine out of ten of the voters he met in Union county were opposed to Mr. Dryden's re-election to the United States Senate.

There were other besides business reasons that made it wise for Mr. Moxon to withdraw. In the first place he had all the local option people opposed to him. In the second place the temperance forces antagonized him. In the third place the "new idea" men—of whom Union county has more than a few—had been so persistently insulted by Moxon that they would have moved in a body against him. And, fourthly, the machine itself didn't want a man, for a third term, quite so palpably subservient as Moxon.—Newark Evening News.

The story prited in many newspapers yesterday about a trolley car running three miles without a motorman was a good one from a reportorial standpoint but would fall flat after a moment's consideration. There are so many reasons why it would be impossible under the circumstances an attempt to enumerate them would be a waste of time. As a matter of fact, the car went exactly three blocks after the motorman fell from the platform.

Monday being a legal holiday, there will be no issue of The Daily Press on that Date.

"IS DEATH A SLEEP?"

Eighth of a Series on Heaven by

REV. DR. CHARLES E. HERRING

There is very little comfort in the theory which says that, after death, the soul loses consciousness until the distant resurrection day. The souls that have passed away might as well be dead as unconscious till that time. We sometimes speak of our friends as asleep! but it is figurative language that we are using. To all appearance they are asleep, but in reality they have departed and are living with Christ. Their mortal remains are with us.

This theory probably arose as a method of accounting for the place of the soul between death and the resurrection, because it was thought impossible that the soul could live apart from this bodily organization. If the body sleeps in the grave, the soul must likewise sleep until, by the power of God, it is reunited to the body. According to this theory, the soul must have a human body in order to be consciously alive; and yet Paul had an experience where he said, he knew not whether he was in the body or out of it. He believed that apart from the body he might have a spiritual experience. In the very creation of man, we read of the two processes by which he was made, first, there was the creation of his body out of the dust of the ground; and second, the creation of his soul as God breathed into him the breath of life. Again, our Lord said to his disciples. "Fear not them which kill the body and are not able to kill the soul." Persecutions might come which would destroy the body,' but these, in no sense, would affect the soul. The soul, then, is not absolutely dependant upon the body for its conscious existence. In the language of Solomon, "the dust will return to the earth but the spirit to God who gave it."

The scriptures do speak of death as a sleep. It is said of Stephen, for example, that he fell asleep. In another place, we read "'we shall not all sleep but we shall be changed.' The phrase is figurative and must be interpreted by other texts of scripture. Scripture speaks very definitely of God as the "God of the living and not of the dead." When the Lord was transfigured, Moses and Elias appeared with Him. It is evident, therefore, that they were not dead; or in a state of lethargy awaiting the resurrection day. The Lord replied to the thief on the cross. "Today thou shalt be with me in Paradise." Paul tells us that Paradise is but another word for the heavenly world; for he said that he was caught up into the third Heaven which he explains as Paradise. In the parable of the rich man and Lazarus, we are taught that there is consciousness in the other world. Then the Lord declares that because He lives we shall live also. This living with Christ can be nothing less than conscious union with Him.

Paul speaks of this relation with Christ in the other world as far better than any experience here. For this reason, he had a desire to depart and be with Him. He was not thinking of relapsing into a state of unconsciousness and remaining in that condition until the distant Resurrection day.

Again, it is said that "he that believeth hath everlasting life.' He hath it now, and therefore shall never die; because he is in spiritual touch with His Lord. Paul speaks of being absent from the body and present with the Lord as a most satisfying experience.

There are those who believe that when the body perishes the spirit lingers near it. The early Christians believed this, so likewise did the Jews. The early church went so far as to forbid striking a light in a grave yard for fear of disturbing the spirits. In a similar way, some theologians hold that there remains with the body after death something which does not decay. This something, they contend, will be the basis of the resurrection body, and because this remains in the grave the spirit has a particular interest in it as its future home and so remains near it, but, in reality, our departed are "Far from this world of toil and strife; They're present with the Lord."

The theory that the soul sleeps after death until the final resurrection day is not only unscriptural, but I am sure that it does not satisfy us in any way as we think deeply upon it. It is not like the consolation of the Gospel. We want to feel that our dear ones are not in the grave or hopefully staying near it for hundrdeds and thousands of years. That certainly would be a great tax to their patience. We want to feel that our loved ones are dwelling in conscious joy with Christ today. There is nothing uplifting in the thought that they are in a state of unconsciousness, and will remain so until the distant resurrection day. That day may not be for hundreds or thousands of years. Christ's coming will be as a thief in the night, but we must remember that this prophecy is now two thousand years old.

The true theory is that though the body perishes, the spirit returns to God who gave it. God giveth the soul a body as it pleaseth him. The earthly house of this tabernacle dissolves, but the assurance is this that we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. That does not mean our heavenly home, but the embodiment for our spirits. That embodiment is not granted in order that the spirit may sleep in the dust of the earth.

The theory of the soul's sleep is not only unsatisfying, it is unreasonable; for why should the soul which has been maturing here be arrested in its development?

To some souls, there have been given inshinings of the other world as they have approached the border land. Bunyon describes this experience in what he says of the land of Beulah. To him Beulah is the borderland of the heavenly world. "Now I saw in my dream," he says, "the pilgrims were got over the enchanted ground, and were entering into the country of Beulah, whose air was very sweet and pleasant; the way lying directly through it; they solaced themselves there for a season." It was here that they heard the singing of birds and saw the glorious flowers of the country. They were within sight of the eternal city. It was the experience of souls who are about ready to pass over. Why such an experience if the real truth was that they were to relapse into a state of prolonged unconsciousness?

The Heidleberg Confession of the Reformed church interprets the Scripture to mean: "My soul after this life shall be immediately taken to Christ, its head." The Shorter Catechism of the Presbyterian church says "The souls of believers are at their death made perfect in holiness and do pass immediately to glory." We have here the real truth. There is no sleep of the soul. The chill of that thought need not be yours. The Scriptures give us positive instruction, and teach us that our dear ones do pass immediately to glory and are today in heavenly felicity with Christ. This truth stimulates our faith. Let us believe and rest in it.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The peach and ice cream social held last night under the auspices of the Presbyterian church Christian Endeavor Society proved a great success, and a neat sum was netted for the society's treasury. A feature of the affair, which was held in the church parlors, was a concert by the Y. M. C. A. orchestra, in charge of Martin A. Korff. The program was well arranged and each number was fully appreciated.

Rev. and Mrs. Casselberry have returned from their summer vacation, spent at Adams, N. Y., and the pastor will preach at tomorrow's service at the church. During his absence, Rev. T. Moore, Smith, formerly pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, has been acting as his supply.

Rev. A. S. Phelps, rector of Holy Innocents' church, has returned after spending his vacation at Jewett, N. Y., and will occupy the pulpit at the morning and afternoon services tomorrow.

Evening services at the New Market Baptist church will be resumed tomorrow, and Rev. George H. Gardner will preach at the service which will be at 7:30 o'clock.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Corrine, who is considered a musical comedy star of the first magnitude, is reported as scoring the success of her particularly bright career in the McNally, Jerome and Schwartz musical work "Lola from Berlin.' The production was originally staged by Klaw and Erlanger in the Liberty theatre, New York city, where it received the popular verdict of the press and all those who witnessed it. The original paraphernalia will be used on the tour of the cities, and the cast of Broadway favorites is a strong one including a singing and dancing chorus of beautiful girls. "Lola from Berlin" will be at the New Plainfield Theatre this afternoon and tonight.

No doubt can be entertained as to the reception awaiting "A Message from Mars." Clean, bright entertainments are not so numerous that any can fail to gain approval. It will be seen here at the New Plainfield Theatre Labor Day afternoon and night.

"Strongheart" is the attractive announcement from the New Plainfield Theatre for next Thursday night. The play had quite a notable run in New York on its first presentation and was received with equal favor on a return visit. Henry B. Harris, whose productions are all of an unusually high class, will present the company here and this is ample assurance that they will be introduced under the most favorable conditions, as Mr. Harris is always extremely particular regarding the supporting company and the production.

Miss Henrietta Crossman the comedienne and an interpreter of Shakespearean roles, will be presented here by Henry B. Harris and Maurice Campbell at the New Plainfield Theatre next Friday night, appearing as Rosalind in "As You Like it." Recognized as one of the most delightful characterizations of this beautiful part that has been given to the stage for a great many years. Miss Crossman is considered to be an actress of unusual ability, possessing a most marvellous personality—in fact a born comedienne.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The Bethany Mission of Brooklyn will have charge of the W. C. T. U. meeting tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock.

Rev. Dr. Howard Grose, of New York, will preach at the First Baptist church tomorrow, morning and evening. In the morning the monthly communion service will be held.

Regular Sunday morning and evening services will be resumed at the Park Avenue Baptist church tomorrow. The communion service will be held in the morning, Rev. A. E. Finn, the pastor, being in charge.

POLLY STOPS BUSINESS.

Lower Bayonne Turns Out to Capture Barber's Pet.

Trolley traffic and business in the lower section of Bayonne was entirely suspended for an hour yesterday, while a merry chase for a poll parrot, which escaped from Harry Kopf's barber shop at Broadway and Silver street, took place. Three policemen, half a dozen firemen, a score of merchants and several hundred boys and girls took part and Polly, frightened badly, took refuge in a tree and climbed to a top branch.

Policeman Rigney was for shooting the bird, but was prevented by the barber. Two of the firemen essayed to climb the tree, but quit after falling to the ground. Finally a small boy captured the poll parrot and returned it to the barber. As Polly was placed in its cage it said "Kept you busy."

—The Somerset County Board of Freeholders will meet in regular session at Somerville on Tuesday.

—Owing to the fact that so many of the Board of Trade are away from the city the regular meeting was not held Thursday night. President H. W. Marshall will announce the date for the next meeting in a few days.

Miss Annie Emmons, of this city, has been visiting relatives at Somerville.

Alvah Tunison, of Somerville, has been visiting his cousin, Voorhees Tunison, of this city.

TIME IS THE TEST.

The Testimony of Plainfield People Stands the Test.

The test of time is what tells the tale. The public soon finds out when misrepresentations are made, and merit alone will stand the test of time.

Plainfield people appreciate merit, and many months ago local citizens publicly endorsed Doan's Kidney Pills; they do so still. Would a citizen make the statement which follows unless convinced that the article was just as represented? A cure that lasts is the kind that every sufferer from kidney ills is looking for.

Mrs. J. C. Manchester, 120 Lafayette place, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I was a sufferer from kidney and bladder trouble for a long time. I doctored with physicians but failed to be cured and in 1905 when I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, I made up my mind to give them a trial. Good results followed their use and my kidneys and bladder were soon restored to a healthy condition. I believe my cure is a permanent one and I will always give Doan's Kidney Pills my endorsement when an opportunity occurs."

AMUSEMENTS.

During Labor Day week an exceptionally strong bill will be presented at Proctor's Newark Theatre. Miss Flo Irwin, who will appear in a one act comedy, entitled "Mrs. Benson's Bigamy." The skit tells the story of a woman who believeing her first husband dead and married again to improve her financial condition. One of the most pretentious acts of its kind in vaudeville will be "The Sunny South," ac olored singing and dancing act with elaborate scenic effects. Franco Piper the clever banjoist will make his first appearance here with his dexterity in the playing and manipulating of his instrument. Edwin Brandt will be seen in a dramatic sketch assisted by a capable company. Criff London's funniest juggler will amuse with his antics and dexterity. The Florenz Troupe, the wonder of two continents will be seen in a series of acrobatic gyrations. John and Bertha Gleeson and Fred Noulihan will appear in a potpourri of songs, dances and piano playing; Miss Gleeson is the champion dancer of the world. An act that will tickle one's risibles will be presented by Martini and Maxmillian the burlesque illusionists. New animated pictures complete the bill.

FORMER ASSEMBLYMAN ACCUSED OF ASSAULT.

Former Assemblyman Randolph Perkins, residing in Westfield, but with law offices at 50 Exchange place, Jersey City, and Captain Jack Graham, will have to appear before Police Judge Farmer in the First Criminal Court, Jersey City, on Wednesday next to answer a charge of assault and battery preferred by Captain George H. Willett, caretaker of the tailoring shop of C. W. Schwinn, 47 Montgomery street, Jersey City.

Warrants were issued for Mr. Perkins and Mr. Graham yesterday after they had visited Schwinn's place. According to allegations Perkins and Graham appeared at the tailoring place with three negroes, who pushed up the outer iron door, and forced the inner door. Then it is alleged Perkins and Graham ejected Willett.

Schwinn says that on May 1, this year, he executed a lease with Perkins, the owner of the property which was to run for six months. On Friday, August 21, Schwinn says he sent a check for the August and July rent and informed Perkins that he had sublet the place to a firm named Wendt & Barsch, former employes of Schwinn.

Perkins declares that Schwinn told him he would surrender the premises on September 1 and that accordingly he had taken possession of the property. Congressman Eugene Leake, attorney for Schwinn, tendered the September rent on August 31, but it was refused.

Through his attorney Schwinn has entered a suit against Perkins for $147.50 for clothes made and Willett has sued for damages.

HUDSON TO RAISE MONEY.

Freeholders of County Authorize Sale of $773,000 Bonds.

The Hudson County Board of Freeholders, at is meeting in Jersey City yesterday, ordered the sale of $773,000 worth of bonds, for which County Collector Egan said he believed a ready sale would be found, owing to the improved business conditions. All the bonds bear interest at the rate of 4½ per cent. Of this amount $350,000 is for the construction of the viaduct from Hoboken to Jersey City Heights and $350,000 for the Hackensack River Bridge at the foot of Newark avenue.

These bonds will run thirty years. Of the remainder $18,000 is for a bridge over the Morris Canal between Jersey City and Bayonne, to run twenty years, and $55,000 for the new wing of the Lunatic Asylum, to run ten years.

ONLY CLUE A NEWSPAPER.

Efforts are being made to find the thieves who entered the house of Carl L. Spaethman, of 20 Lawn ridge, Orange, during the absence of the family, and ransacked the place. Detective-Sergeant Drabell and Roundsman Brown made an investigation yesterday and concluded that the robbery occurred last Friday, through the finding of a late edition of a New York newspaper, which the family did not leave there.

Among the articles stolen were four Columbian half dollars, two pairs of men's shoes, two pairs of trousers, one dress, a woman's raincoat and a valuable collection of French and German coins. All the silverware had been previously stored in a safe deposit vault.

Held For Breaking Man's Ribs.

Robert Mulligan, saloon-keeper and politician, was arraigned before Recorder Lazarus at Bayonne, yesterday morning, charged with having assaulted a van driver, Joseph Kelly, as a picnic at Melville Park. Kelly is laid up at his home with several broken ribs. The hearing was adjourned until Kelly is able to appear in court.

CHAPTER XIV.

MR. LAMM COUGHS BEHIND HIS HAND.

"Slipped through your fingers again, didn't she?"

If the mocking face of Miss Dallison could be depended upon, that business-like woman seemed to enjoy the discomfiture and anger of her victim very keenly. She took up her hat, shook the dust from the deceiving cherries poised it a moment in her hand, and then said:

"Well?"

Mr. Stackhouse acknowledged his defeat with a very grim sort of smile.

"You're a clever pair, you two," he said, shortly. "Where's paper and ink? Have you got such things in this pantomime-trap of a house?" looking with a scowl around the room he had found empty.

"Ah! I thought you'd turn sensible after awhile," rejoined Miss Dallison, briskly producing writing materials from the caverns of what a casual visitor would have pronounced a wardrobe, but which was much more—a very arsenal of belongings, some curious for their oddity, some commonplace enough, but all designed for instant use when wanted by this extremely wide-awake woman.

Mr. Stackhouse did not find the flow of ideas quite to his liking. He began and tore up two letters, carefully bestowing the fragments in his watch pocket. Finally he seemed to find an inspiration, and his pen went rapidly over the paper, while Miss Dallison perused the pages of the morning's Globe with every appearance of lively interest.

"There!" the visitor said at last, tossing his pen aside and sealing up the letter. "Give that to Marie Moissot, and mind you tell her before she opens it that she will do well to keep it entirely to herself."

"The lady knows what she is about," was Miss Dallison's response.

"I hope she does," was Mr. Stackhouse's rejoinder, as he took his hat, and, without any ceremonious words of adieu, proceeded downtown.

Wherever he went, or whatever "surcease from care" he may have sought in any quarter, one thing is certain—he did not make immediate claim upon the attention of Detective Lamm.

But shortly after his departure, that busy gentleman had the satisfaction of rejoining the triumphant Miss Dallison and of reading the following enigmatical epistle:

"Marie: Your part in the conspiracy to bring about my ruin, which was carried out on the 17th of this present June, is perfectly well known to me. I make no foolish complaints. You have accomplished your revenge. My name is clouded with suspicion. My hopes of fortune are destroyed. Let me have frank, fair treatment now, such as a victor can well afford to give a vanquished man; and whatever I can save from the wreck of North & Stackhouse shall be yours. I have not forgotten the old days at Lake Pontchartrain. I am aware that I am not entitled to ask for mercy. But by the same means that you have done the mischief you can undo it. Will you not? The reward will be enough to satisfy your conscience. I cannot speak more definitely upon paper. I must see you in person, and have a talk with you about this. Even if you refuse meet me face to face. You do not know how much I may say to you. "T. S."

Detective Lamm was still puzzling in a highly-excited frame of mind over this letter, when Tuesday afternoon came.

"I wish I had Thomas here to talk it over," was his unspoken thought as he gave his office chair a twirl. "Where is the man all this while?" he said aloud.

Hardly were the words out of his mouth when a well-known knock was heard. Lamm's face brightened, and brightened still more when he admitted to his little room of counsel a moment later Mr. Kingman F. Thomas.

"Why, Kingman, where have you kept yourself all this while? Sit down, sit down, and give an account of yourself."

Mr. Thomas parried this impetuous salutation and query with a question of his own.

"An account of myself?" he said, laughing. "Perhaps you think my time's my own. Did you never hear of such a thing as a journalist being sent out of town to do a given bit of work for his paper, John Lamm?"

The detective nodded his head and looked at Thomas in a quizzical sort of a way.

"Oh, yes, Kingman. But they don't generally take a man off a murder mystery case like this and send him out of town on some chance affair; at least they didn't do that when I knew the office routine. Got a new editor down at your place?"

"Nonsense, Lamm," answered Thomas. "Emergencies may arise at any moment in a newspaper office. You know that well enough. I was pulled off the North case for a little while; but they put me back again with lightning-like celerity, as you see, for here I am. Now, what have you got to tell me?"

"First of all, Kingman," the detective said, tipped comfortably back in his chair, "I want to tell you that I'm a little surprised, to put it mildly, that you should have let that young North girl give you the slip that night. How did it happen?"

"The fortune of war," rejoined Thomas, for the moment quite interested in the row of law books on the shelf above Mr. Lamm's desk. "The best of us get beaten sometimes—even you. Of course, you have forgotten—"

"I've forgotten nothing, Kingman," said Mr. Lamm. "Let it pass. The matter can't be helped. Of course I knew it wasn't your fault. And now to another subject."

The detective consulted his little memorandum book and took from its leaves Stackhouse's letter.

"Never mind to whom it is written," he said. "What do you think of it, taken in connection with what we know of this man Stackhouse?"

Thomas read the letter twice before answering.

"Looks as though there might be some conspiracy. I should like to know who this Marie really is."

Mr. Lamm silently acquiesced in this wish, but he said nothing on that point.

"We have talked over our friend Stackhouse considerably, Kingman, first and last," he observed, "and I fancied we agreed pretty well for awhile."

"For awhile?" queried Kingman. "What do you mean?"

"People change their minds sometimes, and I have modified my first opinions regarding the man," continued Mr. Lamm, following the pattern of the wall paper opposite his desk with his eye. "A decidedly abler man is this Stackhouse than a good many people give him the credit of being—abler than I thought at first. He is a smart man—a 'slick' man,' as they say up in New Hampshire. The way in which he has managed to keep North & Stackhouse out of bankruptcy all this while shows that he has plenty of nerve and a good deal of skill."

"Not much use without money," was Mr. Thomas' sententious comment. "You know what people say about it. Firm would have gone to smash long ago if it hadn't been bolstered up. And all the financial fellows that I have talked with give the credit for keeping the firm out of deep water for three months past to one man—Richard Fetridge!"

"He's a curious sort of character, that Fetridge," said the detective, contemplatively. "My opinion is that without his money he would amount to but precious little."

"You wouldn't put him down as the Napoleon of State street, then?" hinted Thomas.

"No," replied Mr. Lamm. "Why, the man hasn't half the ability of Thornton Stackhouse. There is a queer streak in the fellow, and it shows itself at every turn. Pig-headed enough, but lacks balance. Really weak-minded, for all his obstinacy in small things. That's my judgment of the man. What do you say about him?"

Mr. Thomas thought a moment.

"Don't know him as you do, Lamm, but it seems to me he must have some good qualities, some little ability, to have got on such a friendly footing with the Norths."

"Do you mean the old man, or the woman?"

"Well, the family generally."

"Oh, pshaw! Paul North only wanted to 'work' him for his money, and I rather think you know that the girls may have been in with the old gentleman in his laudable endeavor."

"Perhaps you've seen and heard more about the Norths than I," he said, a little uncomfortably. "But it didn't seem to me—"

"Oh, the girls? Well, they may not have had much to do but to smile sweetly on Fetridge and keep him in the firm's traces," continued the detective, with a covert glance at his ally's face; "and, of course, this Fetridge was no fool to be caught by the bare hook. He isn't possessed of any great amount of brains, but his experience in the business world makes up for some of his natural shortcomings. However, perhaps this failure will bring out the facts about Stackhouse. I hope so. It's a bad break, and a great many people have gone down with North & Stackhouse. But I think Thornton Stackhouse himself has saved nothing out of the crash."

"The Norths have gone under, of course?"

"Yes. Not a dollar, so far as I can see, will be left to them. There's no telling, though, what those girls may have managed to pick up and hide all this while. That young creature, now, who went off—"

"You mean—Miss Stella?" There was a dangerous look in Thomas' eyes.

"Certainly. She's a hardened little baggage, I'll be bound. Why, man, she was shrewd enough to throw you off the scent, and a girl of 18 who can trick Kingman F. Thomas when he's on the watch is an abnormally clever sort of creature."

Mr. Thomas abruptly arose and looked out of the little window.

"How do you imagine she got away from you, Kingman?" pursued Mr. Lamm.

"A piece of bad luck," the reporter returned, curtly. "We all have that sort of happenings sometimes. I suppose the girl watched her chance and stole away. Nothing very calculating about that, it seems to me. It was her good fortune."

"Just so, just so," assented Mr. Lamm. "It's a sore spot with you, old fellow, eh? Well, never mind. We know, of course, who the guilty party is in this affair. Never mind Fetridge now. Flight is confession, and you can take ample revenge by helping to bring that large-eyed maiden who gave you the slip to justice. You see the point, Kingman?"

"No, I don't," said Mr. Thomas, turning upon the ingenious Mr. Lamm in great heat. "What morbid state of mind has come over you? What's the matter with you that you go on maundering like this?"

"Maundering?" Mr. Lamm's face wore a look of cleverly assumed astonishment.

"Yes. Maundering is what I said, and I meant it, too. Come! You don't mean to look me in the face and tell me that you think that a timid, shrinking girl like Stella North would ever have the courage to murder her father, even if she had the heart to do it?"

"But she ran away—"

There was a tell-tale twitching at the corners of the detective's mouth despite his efforts to the contrary, observing which Mr. Thomas gave a little start, pulled up his shirt collar, relaxed his features, laughed, though rather constrainedly, and clapped Mr. Lamm on the shoulder.

"Have done with your 'kidding,' old man,' he said. "I'm not one of the Central Office crowd."

Mr. Lamm coughed behind his hand.

"You can't make me believe any of your foolishness," continued the reporter. "Now talk straight for a moment. Stackhouse or Fetridge—whom shall I watch, now?"

"No use to try to cheat you, Kingman," retorted Mr. Lamm, with an expansive smile. "Well, in the present uncertain state of affairs, both must be watched. We ought to be here, both of us, to look after matters; but I am suddenly called away and this is why I am so glad you came in."

"Called away?"

"Yes; old Jobson, the clerk at North & Stackhouse, has just told me in his innocent way all about a certain suspicious character that occasionally came to see North, and lives in New York. I am going to look the man up there, and for a day or two you must watch the Boston end for both of us."

Mr. Lamm, after advising Thomas to still watch Swampscott, and promising to bring in a man or two to help cover the city points, bade the reporter a friendly "good by" and went from his office directly toward the Albany station.

But the protuberance on his valise, which marked the sojourning place of the very rigid hair brush which was Mr. Lamm's constant traveling companion, soon pointed north instead of south. It was Mr. Thomas whom the detective followed. Seeing him enter the office of his newspaper, Mr. Lamm turned back, deposited his valise in his office, and betook himself to Court square.

"Nowak, how are you?"

Thus hailed the detective a tall, well-built, well-dressed young man who was crossing the pavement at a brisk pace.

"Hello, Lamm, how goes everything?" the reporter said.

"Quietly, quietly. How are the boys in the Globe office? I hardly ever see them nowadays, not even Kingman, whom I used to run across so often."

FOOTBALL.

Carroll Owen and Kenneth Fenton, two stars on last year's Stanford University eleven, will enter Yale this month.

Football practise at Yale will begin on September 17, ten days before the opening of college. Captain Bobby Burch is now at his home in Cincinnati, laying his plans for the campaign. He will visit Tad Jones, who will assist in coaching the team, for a consultation on the style of plays to be used. Lucien Bigelow, of Glen Ridge, last year's captain, will also assist in coaching the Elis.

The outlook for a formidable eleven at the University of Chicago is not very bright. According to Athletic Director Stagg both quantity and quality are lacking.

The forward pass is in strong favor with Yale gridiron authorities. The play will be used in preference to the drop kick next season. It is considered the most scientific play in football and the Yale team will be drilled in the play even more strenuous than last fall.

A "Referee's Union" will control the game in California next season. The union will be organized for the specific purposes of training its members to act as referees, to discuss the rules of the game, to issue rulings on debatable points and in every way possible to work for the advancement of the sport.

Prospects for a strong eleven at the University of Wisconsin next season are exceedingly slim, as a result of a recent ruling by the faculty, which body conditioned seven of the best men who played on the eleven last year.

Harry McIlveen, the former Newark ball player, now holding down right field for the New York Yankees, will return to Penn State College after the close of the baseball season, for the purpose of assisting in coaching the football eleven.

BASEBALL.

The Chatham A. C. defeated the Harmony Street Stars on the Watchung avenue grounds this morning by a score of 11 to 1. Roy Moore and Edson Day formed the battery for the Chatham A. C., and John McDonald and Gene Wood were in points for the Stars.

Off For Bound Brook.

The Y. M. C. A. baseball team will leave for Bound Brook this afternoon on the 2:15 trolley, for the game with the Bound Brook nine. Peacock will be in the box for the Plainfielders.

MORE ENTRIES FOR LABOR DAY BIKE RACES

A delegation of seven members of the National Turn Verein Wheelmen, of Newark, have sent in their entries for the Labor Day races to be held under the auspices of the Plainfield Cycle Club Monday afternoon. The riders entered are Edward A. Herr, winner of the Irvington-Milburn road race last year; Fred Arnold, Walter Smith, Archibald Andres, Courney Peer, William Morton, John Oberle and Joseph C. Miller. All the Turners have first-class records in road racing and will make things lively for the local aspirants for places in the ten mile.

Another entry deserving especial mention is that of Henry Surman, of Elizabeth. Surman is a middle-aged rider—the father of six children—who has finished ahead of all riders in many a race. He made a good showing at Westfield in the recent races, where he won time prize from scratch. Charles Vanderveer, of Cranford, who finished second in the ten mile road race at Westfield, is again to ride in the same event at the Labor Day races here. Other late entries, received by Jack Horner yesterday and today, are James Crawell, James O'Neill, R. L. Tucker, Percy Haberle and "Dippy" Jones, of this city; Louis and Henry Surman, of Elizabeth, and Edward C. Petty, of Trenton.

Twenty-one entries have already been received for the boys' race, and among the fastest riders so far entered are Lawrence Dosse, Alfred Clark, Edward and William Simon, Richard Scott and Raymond Mantz.

The racing will begin at 1:30 o'clock Monday afternoon, and the starting point will be at Avon Park, at the junction of Park avenue and the South Plainfield road.

BOROUGH APPROPRIATES $300 FOR TRUNK SEWER

The Borough Council is the first of the several interested municipalities to take official action regarding the proposed trunk line sewer investigation which has been under consideration in an informal way. Last night Mr. Nichols offered a resolution, which was adopted, authorizing the appropriation of $300 for this work. Mr. Nichols explained later that several conferences have been held on the part of the officials of Plainfield, North Plainfield, Dunellen and Bound Brook, and following the last one at Bound Brook it was decided that the borough's share of the expense for engaging competent engineers would be about $300.

It was further stated by Mr. Nichols that this action would not interfere in any way with the proposition now before the Plainfield Common Council in which the borough seeks to have the city take care of the sewage from North Plainfield. It is expected that at the next meeting of the Plainfield Council an amount will also be appropriated to carry on the investigation concerning the trunk line sewer.

ROBERTS IMPROVING.

Police, However, Keep Up an Unceasing Watch on Him.

Atlantic City, Sept. 5.—While the condition of Charles B. Roberts was reported to be nearly normal yesterday morning, save for continued weakness, it was learned that the police are far from having ceased to worry over his condition. Day and night ever since the shooting either Captain Whalen or a man in his confidence has been by the telephone, on the watch for a possible unfavorable message from the hospital, and ready at its receipt to take some important steps by wire.

This unceasing watch, strange in view of reassuring bulletins, instead of being relaxed Thursday night, was kept up with more vigilance than ever. This hints at an idea that Roberts will not be out of immediate danger until the end of the week at the earliest.

The official bulletin on Roberts' condition yesterday morning was as full of hopefulness as usual. It gave his temperature as 99, or about normal and his pulse at 90, but at the same time it is known that he is very weak and that grave fears are felt lest he never recover.

Middlekauff Case In Court.

E. D. Middlekauff, who together with two colored men riding with him, was thrown out of his automobile and hurt on East Front street, early last Thursday morning, pleaded guilty to the charge of speeding brought against him at his hearing before City Judge Runyon yesterday at city police court. The Judge reserved decision in the matter for one week. A representative of State Automobile Commissioner Smith, who has been working on the case in this city since the accident, was present and will make a report to Mr. Smith. The inspector said yesterday that Middlekauff's license will probably be revoked by the State Motor Vehicle Commission. Middlekauff has retained W. A. Coddington as his counsel.

EXECUTORS PETITION FOR A QUIT CLAIM DEED

The estate of William White, through Mrs. Nellie White and George White, executors, petitioned the Borough Council, last night, for a quit claim deed so that a clear title could be given a purchaser of the White homestead at 40 Willow avenue. According to the petition the property was acquired from Mrs. Catherine Rogers, widow of John Rogers, and taxes to the amount of $350.17 were charged against the property. This was twenty years ago, and in the opinion of the petitioners the amount has been paid. At any rate it was now outlawed. The matter was referred to the proper committee and later the request was granted on motion of Councilman Nichols.

Clerk Sutphen, of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders, informed the Council that its request to have Greenbrook road improved, had been received and would probably be taken up by the board next year.

Petitions received from Louis Beck, of Somerset street; Morris C. Van Arsdale, of Grove street, and Dr. A. H. Dundon, of Somerset street, for permission to build extension porches on their properties, were granted in accordance with resolutions offered by Councilman Smith. A petition for a light on Fritz place was also granted. It was reported by Recorder Dolliver that during the past month twenty-two arrests were made and $46 collected in fines. The treasurer's balance for the month was stated to be $1,663.94, and a resolution offered by Mr. Nichols and adopted authorized the borrowing of $1,000 to meet notes.

Councilman Smith stated that the new fire box for the Watchung School had been ordered and would be installed at once. A bill of Howard F. Woolston amounting to $114.36 for painting and redecorating the building occupied by the Council and fire department was received, approved and paid.

Mayor Samuel Townsend appointed George Giddes as special marshal and the appointment was confirmed. The Mayor explained that Mr. Giddes is the green-keeper at the Park Golf Club and the fact that he is a special marshal would have a good effect on disorderly persons who at times congregate there.

A resolution offered by Mr. Nichols and adopted, instructed the clerk to notify the property-owners on the northwest side of Willow and Magnolia avenues to lay sidewalks.

ELIZABETH MERCHANT FOUND MORTALLY HURT.

William Miller, of 839 Elizabeth avenue, Elizabeth, a well-known merchant, was found mortally wounded early yesterday on the Central railroad tracks 200 yards from the Roselle passenger station near Elizabeth. One of Miller's legs was cut off and he died from loss of blood before Dr. Strickland, of Roselle, who was summoned by a railroad trackwalker could reach him. The Elizabeth and Roselle police are investigating.

It was known that Miller went to New York on business and was supposed to come home directly. Instead it has been learned he was at the Roselle station at 9 o'clock Thursday night. The police are seeking to learn how he spent the time from then till 2 a. m.

His injuries were not such as a man might get by falling from a moving train, and the inquiry is also directed along lines to see if there was any reason why he should have committed suicide.

His finances have been found all right and his domestic relations were satisfactory. He had built up a big business, starting life as a packpeddler.

INVITED HIS JAILER TO HOTEL.

"I have got money to pay for the best rooms in the best hotel in the town and will pay for the officers' entertainment, too," said a richly dressed young man who was the prisoner of Marshal Fouratt, of Metuchen, at the New Brunswick jail last night. He was sporting diamonds and had a big roll of bills.

"I don't notice anything about hotel accommodations on this paper," replied Warden Rogers of the county jail, examining the commitment. "I guess you will have to be my guest for the present. And I advise you to lock your room door after you if you want to see the glitters of those diamonds in the morning. I have suspicions that some of our guests here are crooked and the glare might attract them."

The youth said that he is Clarence F. Adams, of 213 North Fifth street Camden, the son of Capt. Adams. Young Adams is charged with bringing into this State a $4,000 automobile said to have been stolen from Jacob Kramer of Philadelphia.

Adams declared that he had bought the machine in Baltimore last week for $1,500 from a man whom he had never seen before and whose name he does not know.

NEW JERSEY AGAIN HONORED BY G. A. R.

Toledo, O., Sept. 5.—The forty-second annual national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic was brought to a close yesterday with the selection of the next meeting place, the installation of officers and the adoption of reports. Salt Lake City was awarded the honor of the next encampment. after a lengthy discussion.

The veterans all desired to go to Washington, D. C., next year on account of the dedication of the Stephenson monument, but Washington refused to extend them an invitation; in fact, requested that the encampment be given to Salt Lake City.

Commander Nevius last night announced the appointment of Inspector-General C. D. R. Sterris, of Buffalo, as quartermaster and of Frank O. Cole, of Jersey CiCty, as adjutant-general, and said that Henry Holcomb, of Philadelphia, will be retained as custodian of the records.

The encampment voted a testimonial to Past Commander-in-Chief R. E. Beath, of Philadelphia, for his twenty-five years continuous service as chairman of the committee on rules and regulations. The encampment also voted for an appropriation to provide a testimonial for Commander-in-Chief Charles G. Burton, of Kansas City, to be tendered him at the next national encampment.

The new adjutant-general of the G. A. R., whose appointment was telegraphed yesterday by Commander-in-Chief Nevius, is well known. He is one of the oldest druggists in Jersey City. He was for thirty years prominent in Reupblican politics and was a member of the State Assembly. In the McGill campaign he renounced his party and became allied with the Democrats.

His war record was a brilliant one. He is a prominent member of Van Houten Post, G. A. R., and has been known as a political orator at all G. A. R. events in the State. He has held a number of offices in the State G. A. R. He resides at Summit avenue and Grand street, Jersey City.

Served on U. S. S. Oregon.

Patrick Casey and family, of West Third street, went to New York, this morning to attend the funeral of Mr. Casey's nephew, John Costello, aged forty-eight years, who died at Wilmington, New York, on Monday. He was chief boatswain in the U. S. Navy and was attached to the Oregon under the late Captain Clark, making that famous long journey around Cape Horn during the Spanish-American War. Afterward he broke his leg at Key West and he was retired with the title of captain being obliged to lose his leg by amputation. He had a long and honorable record while in the service. The funeral was held this morning from the late residence, 114 East Seventeenth street, New York.

PASTOR'S FIRST SERMON

Rev. Franklin Mathews Tells His Flock of the Duties of a Minister.

HE GIVES KINDLY ADVICE.

New Minister of Scotch Plains Baptist Church Makes a Wholesome Address.

Rev. Franklin Matthews, who was recently called to the pastorate of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, preached his first sermon on Sunday morning. Considering the weather there was a good attendance of the members of the church and congregation out to welcome the new pastor, who in a short address said that he had given the thought of his first sermon to his new people careful consideration and had concluded that at this time he could take no better subject for his discourse than "The Duty of the Ministry." Not his own particular case, but the duties of the ministry in general and his relation to the church and people who have chosen him as their pastor.

"One of the first duties of a pastor," said Mr. Mathews, "is to get acquainted with his people, intrust them in the work of the church and watch over them and guard them as a shepherd guards his sheep. The sick must be visited and comforted, the members who do not attend services regularly have to be rounded up. These are the duties which befall the pastor. The church has called him for this particular work; he is their leader but not their ruler. How this work is to be accomplished should be left to the pastor. His ways of doing it should not be criticized as we are not all alike and the members should have confidence enough in their leader to know that his way of doing the work, while not their particular way, is intended to accomplish the same ends.

"Don't wonder why the minister does not call every time he passes your gate," said Mr. Mathews. "Remember he has his work to do and he might have been in your neighborhood on an errand of mercy visiting the sick or aged, instead of getting offended because he did not call, get busy and find out where he had been and if you find he had been visiting the sick, call to and help brighten some one in troubles. Be patient with a new pastor, as he has a hard trial before him. Every field has its own unique work and the pastor has to accustom himself to the new field, its ways and learn to know the members of his church. For this reason do not expect too many radical changes at the start as pastor and people learn to know each other better. They may see when changes can be made that would be of the betterment of the work of the church.

"I feel that my duty as pastor of this church is to preach the doctrines, administer to my people spiritually comfort them in sorrow, rebuke open sin, but to do it with words of kindness."

West End Boys Walking Feat.

A quintette of boys composed of Clinton Firstbrook, Bert Smith, Joseph Muir, James and Harry Kenney, of the West End, spent the intervening time between Saturday and last night in a walking trip to Lake Hopatcong. They started at 5:30 Saturday morning and reached their destination that night at 8 o'clock, Morristown being the stopping point for dinner. They remained at the lake over Sunday and started back early yesterday morning, arriving in Plainfield at 9 o'clock last night. The total distance covered was over ninety miles as they went out of their way by losing the read near Stirling on the return trip.

Funeral of P. J. O'Sullivan.

The funeral service of Patrick J. O'Sullivan was held from St. Mary's church Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, and was in charge of Father Bogan. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends, including the members of Plainfield Lodge, No. 4, Ancient Order Hibernians and the Holy Name Society. The burial was in St. Mary's cemetery and the pall-bearers were Patrick Connolly, Patrick Connolly, Patrick Harrington, Edward Kelly, A. E. Matthews, Patrick Kely and Brian Hanhahan.

DISORDERLY HUSBAND MUST NOT VISIT FAMILY

Arrested Saturday night on complaint of his wife, who declared that he was drunk and disorderly and had threatened to shoot her, Harry Hussey, of West Front street, was arraigned in the city court yesterday morning. Mrs. Hussey attended the hearing but through her counsel, W. S. Angleman, informed Judge Runyon that she did not care to press the charge if her husband was made to understand that she did not want him around the house. His Honor accordingly imposed a sixty days' sentence, but suspended it on his promise that he would remain away.

Hussey became greatly humiliated by the punishment, however, and afterward begged permission to go to the house at intervals and leave money for the support of the family. When the magistrate told him it would not be allowed he declared that he wanted to do it in order to show that he meant to do the right thing.

"All right," said the magistrate, "you bring whatever money you have to headquarters here and I'll see that it gets to your wife."

Hussey agreed but if he counted on the move to soften the complainant's attitude toward him he made a miscalculation.

CIVIL WAR CANNON UNVEILED AT DUNELLEN

A delegation of nearly seventy members of Winfield Scott Post, No 73, in charge of Commander J. F. Berg, was in charge of the exercises of unveiling the Civil War cannon at the Whittier School, Dunellen, yesterday afternoon. The exercises were held at 3 o'clock, and were witnessed by a large gathering of Dunellenites The Plainfield band furnished music for the affair and the parade previous to it.

The local Grand Army men left town on the 1:30 trolley and were met at Dunellen by delegations from William C. Holton Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., the Daughters of Liberty, and the Patriotic Order of Sons of America. Accompanied by the band, they all marched to the Whittier School building, where a large delegation of children of the school were assembled.

Mayor Harry Swackhamer formally gave Commander Berg charge of the ceremonies and the unveiling was according to the regular army ritual. Former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph was to have made the principal address of the day, but was unable to be present at the exercises. Addresses were made by Rev. E. C. Dutcher, pastor of the Methodist church, and Rev. W. W. Casselberry, pastor of the Presbyterian church. Patriotic songs were sung by a delegation of school children.

The cannon was secured through the influence of Congressman Benjamin F. Howell, of New Brunswick, and was brought from the Rock Island arsenal, at Rock Island, Ill. It is the last of the Civil War cannon eligible for decorative puruoses. The idea of securing it to decorate the school grounds was suggested by William E. Terry, of the school board. The cannon is set in cement and flanked by two piles of cannon balls.

MUCH REJOICING IN VICTORSON HOUSEHOLD.

Earl Victorson, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. O. Victorson, of Summit avenue, the borough was confirmed Saturday morning at 9 o'clock at the Jewish Synagogue, Rev. Mr. Newmark, the rabbi, officiating. Following the confirmation, the young man made a speech. The services were concluded with the serving of retrshments.

Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Victorson celebrated their silver wedding anniversary at their home on Summit avenue, when they entertained a large number of guests from this city and out-of-town. Mr. and Mrs. Victorson have been residents of the borough two years. They came to this city from Youngstown, Ohio. During the afternoon and evening a musical program was enjoyed, followed by a supper, and in the evening the guests had a dance. Among the out of town guests were Mr. and and Mrs. J. RANDOLPH'S GREAT FEAT

SHUTS OUT SCOTCH PLAINS.

Score Four to Nothing—Contest on Crescent Oval a Spectacular One.

Clifford Randolph, the star twirler for the Clinton Avenue team, was the candy boy in yesterday's contest on Crescent Oval with the old rivals, Scotch Plains, and when he shut out Manager Frentz's aggregation without a run or a hit, nobody relished it more than he. This feat alone was not all the satisfaction. He was opposed by "Warry" McLoughlin, of the Springfield, Connecticut State League club, and to defeat him was joy in abundance.

Throughout the contest Randolph was as steady as a clock and never once did he falter. The team fielded its best behind him, inspiring confidence. The victory was a sad blow to Scotch Plains who counted in putting it all over the locals with McLoughlin in the box, but it made up tfor the 10 to 0 score a the 'Plains a few weeks ago.

From the start the Plainfield boys hit McLoughlin and there was hardly an inning in which he was not touched, although it was difficult to hit safely. Remarkable fielding saved him on numerous occasions, but in the eighth Plainfield got things going in lively fashion and did not stop until three runs were brought over the pan. The 'Plains boys indulged in the sport of throwing the ball about the diamond in a way that was not expected and they made a bad mess of it. Clinton Avenue's tally in the first inning was also made on timely hitting and a few misplays.

While the locals kept up the constant tapping of McLaughlin's delivery, the 'Plains boys were unable to place the ball safe. In the ninth it looked as though they might score but clever work prevented. Reick sent a high one into Dick Scott' territory and he would have caught it had not Brit. Martin been too anxious. Dick got his hand on the ball, but Martin collided with him and he dropped it. This happened after Flannery had walked, putting two men on bases. The next three men went out in quick succession and the suspense was over. The score:

MRS. LUCY HOOLEY HAS PASSED AWAY

Mrs. Lucy Hooley, aged 71 years, widow of Abraham Hooley and mother of Edwin S. Hooley and Abraham G. Hooley, of North Plainfield, died Sunday morning at her home on Sycamore avenue, the borough, after a long illness. Mrs. Hooley was a woman of strong character and exceptional sweet disposition and she had a host of friends and acquaintances who admired her for her many excellent Christian qualities. A woman of benevolent spirit she gave much to charity. She had been a resident of Plainfield over thirty years.

The funeral service will be private and will be held this afternoon from the late residence and Rev. J. Foulks, pastor of the Methodist church, Madison, Mrs. Hooley's old pastor, will be in charge. The burial will be at Hillside cemetery.

DEAF MUTES GATHER AT SCOTCH PLAINS

The New Idea, an organization of Deay Mutes, held an outing and dance Labor Day afternoon and night at Deegan's hotel at Scotch Plains. The affair was well attendd, fully 150 mutes being present from Newark, New Brunswick, New Market, New York and other places.

During the afternoon games were played, prizes being offered to the winners of the several events. Those who did not care for this part of the program could enjoy dancing in the large pavilion, where Naylor's orchestra were discoursing the inviting two step and waltz.

At 6 o'clock a collation was served after which dancing was indulged in until 9 o'clock, when the program for the day was over.

TOOK THE FIRST PRIZE AT CRANFORD CARNIVAL

Miss Ethel Moore, of Cranford, formerly a member of the quartet choir at Trinity Reformed church, and Chester H. Briggs, of this city, took first prize, an old-fashioned canoe, in the carnival at Cranford, last night. Their canoe was elaborately decorated with paper butterflies of varied colors, trimmed with bunches of asparagus and leaves. Miss Marie Robinson, of Cranford, occupied a position in the rear of the boat and held a pair of ribbons, which gave the appearance that she was driving the butterflies. The arrangement was considered one of the most attractive of any on the river.

There were about seventy canoes in the procession and the banks of the Rahway river were handsomely decorated for the occasion. Music for the affair was furnished by the Seventh Regiment Band of New York. Hundreds of Plainfielders attended the affair.

KAFFEE KLATSCH GUESTS OF MR. AND MRS. RICHTER

As a mark of esteem to their guests, Mr. and Mrs. George Miller of New York, Mr. and Mrs. George Richter, of Pearl street, entertained the Kaffee Klatsch at an outdoor gathering at their home, yesterday. The affair was held on the spacious lawn in the rear of the premises and the entire afternoon and evening was taken up with a variety of diversions. Something like forty guests in all enjoyed the hospitality.

A feature of the sports arranged for the occasion was a target shooting match, the familiar German game, in which many of the attendants took part. First prize awarded Mrs. B. A. Paroubek, second Miss Flora Krausse and third Mrs. Bertha Nelson. Mrs. George Feller carried off the booby honors. An orchestra composel of B. A. Paroubek, of the borough; Joseph Klimpl and Walter Brown, of New York, furnished an informal program and vocal solos were rendered by Miss Elizabeth Eartlau and Miss Marie Miller, of New York. In conclusion, a supper replete with German delicacies dear to every Kaffee Klatscher was served al fresco.

Beside those mentioned, the New York guests present were Miss Cecelia Dorr, George Brunjes and Master George Miller.

Mrs. Louise and her daughter Miss Grace Miller, of Clinton, Iowa, who have spent the summer at the home of Miss Grace Johnson on Duer street, have gone to Brooklyn to visit friends.

LOST AT BOUND BROOK.

Shutout Tactics Reversed and Y. M. C. A. Lost 5-0—Record Crowds at Both Games.

The Y. M. C. A. nine won their biggest bunch of laurels this season at Somerville yesterday afternoon, when they down the West Ends, shutting out "Smiling Jimmie" Montross' aggregation by a score of 2-0. Saturday's game at Bound Brook was a defeat by a score of 5-0, but the sting of it was quickly healed and the association fans think nothing of losing at Bound Brook as compared to the glorious win "up the road." Record-breaking crowds witnessed both contests.

If the local nine played bad baseball at Bound Brook—and nearly every member of the nine will 'fess up that he did—each and every man redeemed himself at Somerville yesterday. Scott was on the slab for the second contest and had a shade on "Smiling Jimmie" at that. He held those Somerville sluggers to three scattered singles, and Grimes, Giles and Miller were responsible for those. He fanned four men and gave no man a pass. "Jimmie" was touched for eleven hits, one of which was a two-bagger by Loizeaux Conway got the laurels by his stick work, hitting safe three times out of four at the plate; Gilmore got two hits, and, in fact, everybody hit the ball at least once, except Scott—and he had laurels enough by his pitching.

The runs came one at a time, in the fourth and in the ninth. Conway and Gilmore singled in the fourth and Conway got caught at second. In the course of time, Loizeaux came to the bat and connected. When the smoke cleared, Loizeaux was on second and Gilmore was home. And in the last session, Will Schoonmaker laid down a single, his brother bunted and was safe. Then Peacock hit and Will Schoonmaker scored.

Here's how it happened:

Two base hits—Loizeaux. Struck out—By Scott, 4; by Montrose, 7. Bases on balls—Montross, 1. Hit by batted ball, Scott, 2. Umpire, Mr. Rutherford.

At Bound Brook, "Phil" Smith worked the slow ball to perfection and although he only fanned three, and the Y. M. C. A. hit the ball frequently, the fielders' gloves met all the balls except four. Four times the local association boys made misplays, while but a single error was scored against the Bound Brook boys. They solved Peacock's delivery for eight hits, though the local twirler fanned six. A feature of the game was Nelson's home run. The hit wouldn't have been good for the circuit had it not been for the suburban appearance of the ball field, where the management provided a healthy bush in centre field, so that "Dave" Pond couldn't find the ball on the long hit.

MRS. ANNIE BUSSI DIES IN SOMERVILLE HOSPITAL

Mrs. Annie Bussi, widow of John Bussi, of Mount Bethel, who, with her aged husband was terribly beated and tortured by an unknown negro at their home last spring, died Saturday in the hospital at Somerville. She had been confined there almost from the time of the assault, having been felled by a club and then cut with a knife to make her reveal the whereabouts of money. The husband was treated even worse and died within a few days afterward, having remained unconscious from the time he was struck down.

Mrs. Bussi was seventy-six years old and had lived in Mount Bethel a short time, having come from New York. The family was at one time worth a great deal of money but lost it through speculations. There is a stepson living Boston, John Bussi, Jr., and other relatives in Hoboken. The funeral was held in the Mount Bethel church, yesterday afternoon and was in charge of Rev. George Bowers. Burial was at Mount Bethel.

Rewards aggregating $1,000 are still in effect for the capture of the old couple's assailant but the authorities have practically given up all hope of getting him.

YEAR'S WORK ENDED AT NETHERWOOD CAMP

Concluding the fifth year of the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp at the Mary Morgan Home, Sunday's "closing day" service with its reports on the work of the summer was of especial interest. The three hundred mothers and children at the camp left today for their homes in New York city, and Miss Sara Curry's work for the summer of 1908 is done. A purse of $88 was presented her by local friends in connection with the meeting.

Dr. S. A. Sauerbrey, of New York, who is personally interested in the work of the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp as well as in Miss Curry's Day Nursery on the lower East side, was the principal speaker of the afternoon. He took for his subject, "The Summer of 1908; A Lession in Faith," briefly reviewing the season. He told how the camp had opened for the season on July 6, without a cent in the treasury, but showed that the summer's work has been the most successful the camp has ever known. Oother remarks upon the season's work at Netherwood were made by J. D. Loizeux, Mr. Sutro, of New York, and Miss Florence G. Hawkins, of the camp devotional committee.

Mr. Sutro, who is frequently a speaker at the mother's meetings held in the Little Missionary's Day Nursery in New York, gave a most helpful talk on the Beatitude, "Blessed are the Meek, for They Shall Inherit the Earth." Miss Curry also spoke briefly upon the work at the camp and in New York city, thanking the local people for their support. The work of special soloists made the musical part of the service worthy of particular mention. Mrs William H. Sebring, of Merchatville, sang "Not Half Has Ever Been Told," and "Peace, Sweet Peace." Martin A. Korff and several members of the Y. M. C. A. orchestra assisted in the musical program and Miss May Randolph presided at the melodeon. The offertory was a cornet solo by Whitney Frazee

Cross-Country Run.

A company of young men from the borough, including Roy Hart, Fred McClintock, George Neff, Chas. Lee, Harold Beerbower, Lisle Beeching, Louis Van Zandt and Russell Conroy, enjoyed a cross-country run to Chatham, Morris county, yesterday, where they were served with a good dinner at The Fairview Hotel, conducted by John E. Beerbower, formerly of Plainfield. The boys had a jolly time. One of the party, Louis Van Zandt, got "cold feet," so the boys say, after reaching the baby camp on Johnston's drive and returned home.

The Borough Court.

At this morning's session of the borough court, Martin Holmes and Philip Embleton were fined $2 each for fighting on Somerset street, Saturday night. Fred Meeker was fined $5 for disorderly conduct and Fred Connors had sentence suspended for the same offense. The arrests in each case were made by Marshal Kelley.

Russell Pyatt, of South Plainfield, who several weeks ago, was kicked in the face by a horse, receiving a bad cut as well as the loss of several teeth, recovered sufficiently to leave the hospital yesterday and return home. He has been fixed up with false teeth to take the places of those kicked out.

$10,000,000 FOR ROADS

A BENEFIT TO PLAINFIELD.

Through Routes Between the Important Centres Is Idea of the Promoters—Five Routes.

Back of the dinner given by W. E. D. Stokes at Long Branch last Thursday evening, where the proposition for an ocean parkway from Atlantic Highlands to Cape May was broached, is now said to be a plan for bonding the State for $10,000,000 of bonds for a more scientific system of road building in order that New Jersey may stay abreast with other States in good road construction.

For many years New Jersey has had no debt. There is, of course, the $160,000 of bonds for the old Jersey Railroad in Somerset county, which asset is now the property of the State school fund and cannot be paid off, but practically the State has not had a debt since the Democrats went out of power.

It is said that the project to bond the State for $10,000,000 for more rapid and better public roads will be sprung formally at a meeting of wealthy real estate owners, Governor Fort, ex-Governor E. C. Stokes, State Road Commissioner Frederick Gilkyson and many invited leaders and newspaper men at the Hotel Astor, New York, immediately after the coming election.

Of course, the people would have to vote on the $10,000,000 bond issue, for the constitution forbids the Legislature to create a liability of more than $100,000 without first submitting the matter to the vote of the people. The proposed bond issue is to run thirty-five years at 3½ per cent annual interest, and some of the suggested uses of the money are as follows:

An instance cited is that at present the distance between New Brunswick and this city by good roads is now thirty-three miles, while with more direct road it would be but twenty-two miles, and only by macadmizing the old Brunswick pike. From Benardsville to Plainfield the distance is now twenty-seven miles over good roads, whereas by a direct route it would be twelve miles.

Of proposed through routes the first is, of course, the Ocean parkway plan of Governor Fort and the real estate owners of Monmouth and Atlantic counties. Another route would be along the Delaware river, to the northern part of the State, at the Delaware Water Gap, and beyond to Port Jervis.

A third through route would be from Jersey City, through Newark, Rahway, New Brunswick, Trenton to Camden, cutting off several detours and filling many bad gaps.

A fourth through route would be from Camden across the state to Lakewood, and thence to the coast at Point Pleasant.

A fifth would run from Phillipsburg across the Stote to the pallsades of the Hudson rover, through the counties of Somerset, Morris, Warren, Sussex, Passaic and Bergen

MISS MARY VAN CLEEF A MILLSTONE BRIDE.

Announcements were received today by friends of the marriage of Miss Mary Colver Van Cleef, daughter of John V. A. Van Cleef, of Millstone, and Leonard VanDerVeer Davis, of Somerville. The ceremony was performed Sunday noon at 12 o'clock at the Millstone Reformed church by the pastor, Rev. Floris Ferwerda, immediately following the morninf service, and in the presence of the congregation.

The bride was for a great many years organist of the Millstone Reformed church and has been especially active in the work there. Following a wedding tour the couple will spend the winter at Somerville and later will go to housekeeping. Both the bride and groom have many friends throughout Somerset county.

Sentence Suspended.

Judge Runyon announced a suspension of sentence, this morning, in the Richard Harvey-David Weinman disorderly case, decision having been reserved after the trial last Monday. The trouble grew out of Harvey's accidentally walking on a new concrete sidewalk that Weinman had placed in front of his property on West Third street.

Injured While Tramping.

Ralph Noe, aged thirteen years, of Netherwood, while tramping over the mountains yesterday, fell on a large ragged-edged stone, inflicting a bad cut over the knee. His companions brought him to Plainfield and he was taken to the hospital, where he is still under treatment. The injuries are not considered serious.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS

BOUND BROOK AND VICINITY.

Mrs. J. Doty Van Duyn, Mrs. Chas. Brooks and daughter, Miss Anna Brooks, Mrs. Ralph Ward and daughter, Miss Cora Ward, and Mrs. John Wilson, of Middlebush vicinity, were lately entertained at the manse of the Methodist Episcopal church in West Second street, Bound Brook, the home of Rev. and Mrs. P. C. Bascom.

The annual harvest home of the Middlebush Reformed church was held on the church lawn yesterday. State Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen delivered an address in the evening.

After spending a month in camp at Camp Bide-a-we, at Lake Solitude, near High Bridge, Rev. and Mrs. Garret M. Conover have returned to their home at Rocky Hill.

Mrs. Wilbur G. Voorhees, of Cedar street, South Bound Brook, is visiting at the home of her sister, Mrs. James Courter, at Fairfield.

Miss Margaret McGill, of Somerset street, Bound Brook, has returned from a stay of several days at South Harpswell, Me.

Mrs. Ernest DeCamp and son, of Athenia, are guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter DeCamp, in East Millstone.

Miss Florence Opdyke, of Bound Brook, has been spending some time at Asbury Park.

The Middlebrook Country Club of Bound Brook, held a golf tournament yesterday.

F. W. Rensen and family, of East Millstone, are spending a month at Ocean Grove.

NORTH BRANCH.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore F. Goldman and daughter, Miss Emma Goldman, of Morris Park, Long Island, have been staying at the farm of Peter L. Tunison, near North Branch.

Mrs. Henry V. Davis and daughters, Misses Annie and Isabel Davis, were guests yesterday of Mrs. Davis' parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Rinehart, at Potterstown.

Miss Ida F. Kaetz and William A. Mettler, of Somerville, have been visiting at the home of former Freeholder and Mrs. Richard W. Hoagland at Neshanic.

Dr. and Mrs. Henry V. Davis, of this place, have been entertaining Mrs. Harry Alvord and daughter, of Succasunna, during the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hipple, of South Branch, are entertaining Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rhudeback, of Three Bridges.

Rev. Dr. Parnell, of Connecticut Farms, has been a recent guest of Rev. Thomas D. Wesley, at Pluckemin.

Miss Abbott, of Newark, is a guest of the Misses Morrison, at Neshanic.

WESTFIELD.

George T. Carter, who has lived all summer in a tent at the junction of South avenue and Broad street, Westfield, left Saturday for Colorado. Carter is a consumptive and has been living in the open air. At the same time he has made a living selling gasoline and oils to the automobile owners who passed his corner.

Arrangements are being made by the Men's Club of the Baptist church and the Men's Club of the Presbyterian church to unite and give a series of entertainments this winter.

The Cox house at Broad street and North avenue is being fitted up to be used as a temporary school until the new Fourth ward school house is completed.

Rev. Henry Neill, pastor of Westfield Congregational church from 1881 to 1886, died on Tuesday of last week at his home, Buffalo, N. Y.

Westfield pastors are all at home and conducted services at their respective churches Sunday.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Superintendent David Davis, of Roselle, who succeeds Lester Messeroll, now living at Bernardsville, assumed his duties with the opening of school. He will teach in the eighth grade, as well as act as principal. Miss Ada Thompson, of South Amboy; Miss Winters of South Amboy, and Miss May Lindsley, of Plainfield, are the new teachers. Miss Thompson will have charge of the second grade, Miss Winters, the fourth, and Miss Lindsley the reception class.

Local schools opened today and there was a big influx of pupils in all the classes. It may be that the large number entering the primary grade will make it necessary for classes to be held in the Larkin house, at Walnut street and New Market Road, but the Board of Education will decide upon this point at a special meeting to be held tonight. Several of the graduates will enter the Plainfield High School when the year's work begins there a week from today.

John Giles was found helplessly drunk by Special Officer Sliney on North avenue late Saturday night. At his hearing before Borough Recorder David S. Campbell, Giles was fined $3.50. He paid.

Rev. George H. Gardner was in charge of the meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the New Market Baptist church Sunday night. His topic was "A Life With God."

Miss Gertrude Banks, who was a guest last week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Pierce, is visiting her grandparents in Virginia.

Charles H. Ward, of Ocean Park, California, formerly a resident of New Market, is visiting friends in the village.

The local ball team was outplayed at Crescent Oval yesterday afternoon, the score being 4-0. It was a pretty game up to the eighth inning, the score being 1-0. The home team got a wild streak and the Clinton Avenues scored three runs. The series now stand 2-2. In the morning the team, with Hand and Albert as battery, played the Berkeley Heights a tie game 5-5.

Flannery in the ninth inning at the game at Crescent Oval yesterday spoiled Randolph's chances of pitching a no hit game. Up to that time not a safe hit had been made off his delivery.

Mr. and Mrs. William Dean, of Summit, were the guests over Labor Day of Mrs. Dean's mother, Mrs. Charles Mooney, of Valley Road.

Labor Day was passed quietly in town. The stores closed part of the day and the residents in general observed the day as a holiday.

Thomas Dobbins, who has been visiting his mother, Mrs. Robert Walpole, has returned to his home in Newark.

A number from here attended the Italian celebration at Crescent Oval last night and enjoyed the firework display.

Mrs. Augusta Miller entertained friends from out of town over Labor Day.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

One of the scenes in "Strongheart," to be played at the New Plainfield theatre next Thursday by Robert Gaillard, which never fails to capture the applause of the public, shows the training quarters of the Columbia College football eleven during the intermission between the first and second halves of the season's big game. The scene forms an important item in the development of the story, and the author has been extensively complimented for the clever manner in which it has been handled. The management has furnished a splendid company and an unusually complete scenic production.

There have been many impersonators of Shakespeare's heroine Rosalind in "As You Like It," but it seems to be conceded that the American stage has never produced an actress more capable of giving this part a truer or higher characterization than Miss Henrietta Crosman, who, by the way, will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre next Friday night. She has impressed the country in her portrayal of the part as a Rosalind of real flesh and blood, not a mere dramatic trickstress, as many who have essayed the part. It must first be remembered that Miss Crosman is a woman of high intellectual attainments, consequently she brings the required intelligence to properly portray the part. Her reading of the lines is a delight to the ear, and the spontenaiety of her fun is not traditional, but original. Few actresses have been given higher encomium than has been accorded Miss Crosman. That she stands at the front of her profession is a recognized fact throughout the entire country.

No attraction of our day illustrates the possibilities of moving pictures as does Lyman H. Howe's Lifeorama, to be seen in the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon and night. It is far more diverting and educational than the usual dramatic offering, and much more resplendent of the world's wonders and beauties. It combines the artistic, historic and pictorial in a way which few if any, dramatic productions do. The new program more than ever reveals great scenes, great events, great architecture. It is flawless throughout. It portrays the ineffable beauties of Southern France. It literally wafts the audience from "Niagara's Icy Mountains to India's Coral Strand." It rubs elbows with British Royalty. It whisks the audience over the Zermatt Railway through the heart of the grandest Swiss scenery. Then back to witness in England the most thrilling steeplechase ever seen, and the new annual drill of the Reedham Orphans. Back again it plunges into picturesque old Naples and Sicily, and finally to remote-mysterious India. Then to modern Australia showing "The Strenuous Life" of the antipodes. The sculptured art of Rome; the sagacity of birds and animals; the wonders of physical phenomena and many other phases of life everywhere are focused in one program of supreme interest.

William I. Chittenden, of Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R., will leave for Atlanta, Ga., tomorrow to spend the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. MacClymont, of Woodbine avenue, have returned from a delightful vacation at Kidders, N. Y.

Dr. Charles G. Davis and his sister, Miss Helen Davis, of Park avenue, have returned from a six weeks' sojourn at Long Lake in the Adirondacks.

VOTING MACHINES ARE OUT AT HARRISON.

The voting machines were knocked out in Harrison, at a special election Saturday, by a vote of 469 to 18. The vote was very light all through the town, the First ward polling the heaviest vote.

The vote, though light, expresses the sentiment of the entire town as the "automatic wonder" had very few friends.

Harrison in abolishing the machines, followed in the footsteps of her sister towns, East Newark and Kearny, which both put the quietus on the machines.

BIRKHOLZ APPOINTED A RIPARIAN COMMISSIONER.

Governor Fort yesterday appointed Joseph A. Birkholz, of Orange, riparian commissioner to succeed William Cloke, of Trenton, recently named State commissioner of reports.

Mr. Birkholz is a member of the Board of Aldermen in Orange, where he is one of the representatives from the Third ward. He formerly was editor of the Orange Journal, and later held a similar position on the East Orange Gazette. He is secretary of the Union League Club of Orange, and is a brother of former Assemblyman Edward D. Birkholz.

Plainfield, N. J., September 8, 1908.

POLITICAL NOTES.

This is registration day. If your name is not on the registry list, you cannot vote. See that you are registered.

Frank Mobus and George Hummer, both of the Third district, have filed their petitions with Borough Clerk Fred Martin for the Democratic Councilmanic nominations in North Plainfield. William N. Pangborn, First district; David Bodine, Second district, and James Daly and Garret Kiely, Third district, have also filed their petitions for delegates to the Congressional convention in the Fourth district. This convention will be held late this month.

James E. Martine, the defeated foe in many political campaigns and the Democratic candidate for sheriff in the present fight in Union, has been elected a member of the advisory committee of the Bryan Democratic League, whose headquarters are at the Hoffman House in New York. He was officially notified this morning of his election by Secretary Frank McGuire. Among the other members of the League are Senators Charles A. Culberson, Benjamin F. Tillman, Josephus Daniel and Henry M. Teller, and Governor John A. Johnson, Henry Watterson and J. Hamilton Lewis.

In order that his friends may understand the reason for his unexpected action in deciding at the eleventh hour not to enter the Assembly nomination race, Clarence B. LaRue has sent a communication to The Daily Press fully explaining his position. Mr. LaRue, who is one of the leaders of the local option movement in Union county, had consented to run for the Republican nomination and was about to file his petition on Saturday when he suddenly changed his mind.

This is his letter received today:

Editor, The Daily Press:

"Will you kindly allow me space in your valued paper to explain to the 126 friends who signed my petition and to the other friends of local option my reason for withdrawing from the Assembly contest on the local option issue. As was stated in your paper of August 22, I consented to enter the race upon the condition that I would withdraw my name if any other candidates should come forward for whom the friends of local option could consistently cast their votes. Upon the assurance of Rev. Stanly F. Davis, pastor of the Epworth Methodist church, of Elizabeth, that two candidates for the Assembly had made written statements that they would be loyal to the local option cause, I withdraw.

"Yours truly,

CLARENCE B. LARUE.

"Plainfield, September 8."

The two men to whom Mr. LaRue refers are Dr. Adolph Degenring, of Elizabeth, and Lloyd Thompson, of Westfield. Charles A. Trimble, of Elizabeth, who is also a candidate for the Assembly nomination on the Republican ticket, has likewise pledged himself to support the local option movement.

Petitions for the re-nomination of Charles N. Fowler on the Republican Congressional ticket in the Fifth district have been filed for every election district in Union county.

OBITUARY.

Lewis C. Putnam.

Lewis C. Putnam, a life-long resident of Plainfield, died Saturday night at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Charles Lister in Asbury Park, folliwing a long illness. Several years ago he fell and broke his leg and he had never been well since. He had been living with his daughter since a year ago last May. During the past ten years he had been more or less of an invalid. He was born at Washington Valley seventy-three years ago and moved to Plainfield when a boy. For a great many years he was employed at his trade, that of a tinner and was considered one of the best men in the business here. He is survived by two sons, Frank Putnam and Frazee Putnam, of East Second street; one daughter, Mrs. Charles Lister, of Asbury Park, and one sister, Mrs. Harriet Totten, of Newark. The funeral service will be held from the home of his sons on East Second street, tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock and the burial will be in the Plainfield Avenue cemetery.

Patrick Melvin, Sr.

Patrick Melvin, Sr., for thirty-two years employed in the gas department of the Public Service Corporation here, and one of the best known residents, died Saturday afternoon at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Peter Russ, on West Fifth street. About three months ago he fell down stairs and fractured his thigh. This combined with advanced age, caused death. He is survived by one son, Patrick Melvin, three daughters, two unmarried and one the wife of Peter Russ. The funeral service will be held tomorrow morning at 8:30 o'clock from the home of Mrs. Peter Russ and at 9 o'clock from St. Mary's church. The burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

Helen E. Renger.

Helen E. Renger, the five-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Renger, died Sunday afternoon, and the funeral service was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence of the parents. Rev. J. Deuchner, pastor of the German Reformed church, officiated.

Miss Harriet Richardson.

Miss Harriet Richardson, aged ninety years, one of the best known colored residents of North Plainfield, died Saturday afternoon at her home on Warren street. The funeral service was held yesterday afternoon from the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church, Rev. J. T. Diggs, the pastor, assisted by Rev. E. B. Maynard, being in charge. She had been a resident of the borough for fifty years. The burial was in the North Plainfield cemetery.

Mrs. William Van Horn.

Mrs. William Van Horn, a former resident of this city, died at 5:30 o'clock this morning at her home, 75 Warren street, Newark, where she has lived for the past ten years. Death was due to a complication of disease. She is survived by a husband, two sons, Fred and Gilbert Van Horn; also five sisters and three brothers. Notice of funeral will be given later.

Mrs. Hannah C. Graydon.

Mrs. Hannah C. Graydon, widow of William Graydon, died suddenly at 10:30 o'clock last night at her home on West Eighth street, from heart trouble. She is survived by two sons, both of whom live at Salem, Mass. The notice of funeral will be given later.

Christian Sprich.

Christian Sprich, aged sixty years, for a great many years employed as a machinist at the Potter Printing Press Works, and for fty years a resident of this city, died Sunday, following a long illness. He was born in Germany, coming to this country as a boy. He is survived by two brothers and a sister. The funeral service will be held from the home of his niece, Mrs. Edward Lotz, on Essex street, tonight at 8 o'clock and the burial will be in the Lutheran cemetery, on Long Island, tomorrow noon.

Gave a Birthday Party.

Mrs. Daniel Vershaw, of South avenue, gave a delightful lawn party Saturday afternoon at her home in honor of her daughter, Charlotte Vershaw, who was seven years old that day. The lawn was attractively decorated for the occasion and the children to the number of nearly twenty spent the afternoon playing games, etc. A donkey party was a feature and the first prizes were won by Pauline Stewart and James Guttridge. There was also a birthday cake, bearing seven lighted candles. During the afternoon refreshments were served. Among those present were James Guttridge Ruth Stanley, Pauline and Winfred Stewart, Ruth Foster, of Greenville; Margaret Bowe, Doris Guinn, Jack Wernig, Elizabeth Wernig, James Wernig, Charlotte Stewart, Emma Vershaw, Elsie Vershaw and Charlotte Vershaw.

Injured Training for Races.

Alva Dunham, of Duer street, met with an accident Saturday afternoon while training over the Park avenue course for the Labor Day cycle races and was unable to take part in the races. He was speeding along Park avenue at a lively clip when his wheel struck an obstacle in the road and threw him off, head first. His nose was badly bruised and he received contused wounds of the scalp. He was taken to the hospital and had his injuries attended to. Yesterday he was able to return home.

He Surprised the Court.

Howard Craig, of this city, caused a surprise in the Union county court this morning, after being accepted as a juror and called to serve in the trial of Dominick Manananzo charged with the murder of Dominick Cerzasi. After the customary oath was recited to Mr. Craig, he explained that he had prejudices against capital punishment. He was excused.

Dr. Grosse's Sermons.

Rev. Dr. Howard B. Grosse, of New York, who preached sermons of rare merit on Sunday morning and evening at the First Baptist church, was entertained at the home of William A. Conner, of Hillside avenue.

—The canning season is on the wane. Make sure you get some of these fine peaches, Bartlett pears or plums Neuman Brothers are offering for the purpose.

William Steininger Injured.

William Steininger, aged twenty-two years, of West Front street, fell off a horse he was riding yesterday, and bruised his side. He suffered considerably and decided to go to the hospital. An examination showed that the injury was not a serious one and he returned home last night.

BICYCLE RACES EXCITING

Many Spills Mark the Four Events in Local Club's Road Meet.

THOUSANDS AT FINISH LINE.

Bicycle road racing of the variety that furnished amusement for many thousands in the middle '90s attracted a big crowd to lower Park avenue at Avon Park, yesterday afternoon, where the Plainfield Cycle Club conducted one of the old-time programs. Four events were on the card, a one-third mile open, one-mile city championship, boys' race and ten-mile handicap. Something like sixty riders in all took part and from the enthusiasm manifested the sport of other days will shortly enjoy a new lease of life.

The big event of the day was the ten-mile handicap which brought out a field of twenty starters. The entries included speedy wheelmen from Newark, Elizabeth, Paterson, Trenton and New Brunswick, in addition to those from Plainfield, and the race was hard fought all through. Harry Bush, of this city, proved to be the best goer of the bunch and went over the tape the winner in 28 minutes and 25 seconds. He was crowded all the way by James Neal, also of this city, who finished in 28:30 while Eddie Killoran, another Plainfielder, was third with time of 28:45. All three men had a handicap of four minutes.

The finish of the race was spoiled because of the crowd surging out into the roadway and directly in the path of the riders despite the efforts of the officials to keep them out. There were numerous "spills" throughout, the worst of all falling to the lot of George Adams and Joe Todd. They went down just before the finish. These same riders had a mixup earlier in the day in the one-mile city championship. W. Southers, George Simon and Raymond Mantz also had falls in the ten-mile.

The result of the other races was as follows:

One-third mile—First heat (two to qualify), first, Joe Todd, Plainfield; second, John Oberle, Newark; unplaced, Charles Nerent, New York. Second heat: First Courtney Peer, Newark; second, Robert Guttridge, Plainfield; unplaced, Gus Corrine, Paterson. Third heat: First, Edward Herr, Newark; second, Henry Surman, Elizabeth; final, Courtney Peer, first; Henry Surman, second; Joe Todd, third. Time—40 3-5 seconds.

Second race—One mile city championship: First heat, first George Adams; second Raymond Mantz; third, Ike Huffman. Second heat, first, Joe Todd; second, Harry Hook; third, Robert Guttridge. Final heat, first, Harry Hook; second, Raymond Mantz; third, Robert Guttridge. Time—2:07.

Third race, boys' event, one mile: First heat, four to qualify: First, Ricard Scott; second, E. Hammill; third, Alfred Clark; fourth, W. McNee, all of Plainfield. Second heat: First, Elmer Barrett; second, William Simon; third, J. H. Lewis; fourth, Augustus Peterson. Final—First, Richard Scott; second, J. H. Lewis; third, William Simon. Time—2:53.

Valuable prizes were awarded the winners in each event, most of them being merchandise.

The officials for the races were the following: Referee, D. M. Adee, president N. C. A., of New York; judges, J. V. E. Vanderhoef, J. A. Herbermann, R. H. Barnard, Charles Raymond, Roy DeCamp, A. H. Schmeyer, F. J. McGann, H. W. Farley, N. I. Wiley, W. R. Way, A. E. Skellenger and Henry Viebrock; timers, R. P. Gay, Mr. Osland and Roy Adams; starter and handicapper, Jack Horner; chairman entertainment committee, I. B. Huffman.

Sale of Lands for Unpaid Taxes

COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, CITY OF PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Notice is hereby given that the subscriber, the Collector of the City of Plainfield, New Jersey, pursuant to the authority of the statute in such case made and provided, will on at two o'clock in the afternoon of that day, at the said Collector's office, No. 151 North Avenue, in said city, expose for sale and sell the several tracts or parcels of land hereinafter specified, or any part or parts thereof severally sufficient for the purpose, on which taxes for the year nineteen hundred and seven remain in arrears, to such person or persons as will purchase the same for the shortest term and pay the tax lien thereon, including interest and costs of sale, or in fee where no one will bid for a shorter term.

This sale is made under the provisions of the act of the Legislature of this State, entitled: "An Act for the assessment and collection of taxes," approved April 8, 1903, and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto.

Further particulars of the land to be sold, as shown on the City records, may be obtained at the office of the subscriber any week day prior to the day of sale, between the hours of 9 a. m. and 4 p. m., except holidays and Saturdays, and on Saturdays between 9 a. m. and 12 noon.

The following is a list of the several tracts and parcels of lands to be sold, which shows the names of the delinquents, the supposed owners thereof as the names of the delinquent owners appear on the books of the taxing district, together with a statement of the wards of the city wherein said lands are respectively situated, and the street in which each lot is situated, the block and lot number of each lot as they appear on the Official Assessment Maps of the City of Plainfield, on file in the office of the City Collector, and the amount due from each of the said lots respectively. To the amount due on each lot and parcel as hereinafter designated, there will be added interest at the rate of ten per centum per annum from the twentieth day of December, 1907, to the day of sale, and the fees provided by said act of the Legislature, viz.: for preparing and publishing notices of sale twenty-five cents for each parcel of land advertised; and for selling twenty-five cents for each parcel sold; and for each certificate of sale, fifty cents, besides necessary disbursements for printing, postage, affidavits and acknowledgements, which are hereby estimated at three dollars for each item of arrearage, and the City Clerk's fee for recording report, ten cents for each parcel of land sold, and all said fees and expenses shall form part of the tax lien and be paid by the purchaser at the tax sale.

Sale Number.	Supposed owner or person to whom assessed.	Ward.	Block No. City Assessment Maps.	Lot No. City Assessment Maps.	Street or Aevnue.	Year.	Amount of Tax.	Date from which interest will be added at 10 per cent. per annum to date of sale.

CHAS. HOWARD MONTAGUE AND C. W. DYAR

(Copyright, by The Cassell Publishing Co.)

"Kingman?" said Mr. Nowak. "Oh, he's busy on the North mystery. Doesn't do anything else. Has his own time, and flits in and out of the office at all sorts of odd hours. Sometimes he's in a dozen times a day. And then, again, the editor may not see him for 24 hours or more. But Kingman is a privileged character, you know. He never wastes his time when he is on a job.'

Mr. Lamm nodded his head emphatically. "You're right, Nowak. The word shirk is not in Kingman F. Thomas' vocabulary. You are quite positive that he has not had any other work but the North case?"

"Oh, sure. They wouldn't take him off of it under any circumstances, now, when the facts are liable to come out any hour."

"I hope he isn't wasting his time and energy. It's a queer case, isn't it?"

"Deuced queer."

With a friendly hand-grasp the two parted. Mr. Lamm proceeding to a drug store close at hand, consulted the chained directory, and found in a minute a certain address desired. Boarding a car, he journeyed southward.

Where the streets began to show bits of garden in front of the houses, and every brick wall was not a party wall, Mr. Lamm alighted, and walked up a pleasant-looking avenue.

A new apartment house, not far from the corner, appeared to have particular interest for John Lamm. In its neighborhood, indeed, he passed the better part of an hour. Without apparent effort, Mr. Lamm entered into an easy conversation with several people there and thereabouts, and, as a result thereof, there was a sudden transfer of especial interest from the family hotel to the building next door.

Mr. Molon's modest dwelling was by no means equal in height to its neighbor. But its graveled roof, nevertheless, offered certain facilities that the detective greatly desired. A brief colloquy was all that proved necessary to gain the desired permission.

Once upon the roof, Mr. Lamm placed himself behind a sheltering chimney, and cautiously peered into the windows of the neighboring building that overlooked the place.

All the curtains were up, and the light, streaming cheerfully into what was evidently a sitting-room, brought into relief the face of a motherly-looking old lady, busied with her knitting.

Presently she looked up; and soon the sight of another face rewarded John Lamm's watch. It was the face of a short, rather thick-set young man, whose dark-brown, kindly eyes had looked into his own not many hours before.

The detective noted them carefully as they stood talking together earnestly. He saw them turn quickly, and as the rays of the setting sun shone through the glass, another form came into full view.

It was a woman's figure.

John Lamm looked with all his eyes. There was no mistake; no room for error. It was as he thought and hoped, and a smile of absolute satisfaction played about his lips unconsciously.

Suddenly he drew back. The thick-set young man in the room opposite was just turning around. Before he could peer out of the window, in his turn, the form was out of view. When the sidelong glance was next directed outwards the blinds were drawn over the tell-tale window. But the precaution came too late. The next moment Lamm found his way down the stairs, thanked Mr. Molon behind the counter kindly for his courtesy, walked up the street and took a car citywards.

"Ah, my black-haired friend," he thought, exultingly, "a very clever scheme of yours. But walls have eyes for John Lamm once in awhile, Kingman, and though you've kept your secret well from the crowd, you couldn't conceal it from your partner. What would Applebee say, what would Stackhouse say, for that matter, if they knew that Kingman F. Thomas had a pretty guest, none other than the strangely missing Stella North?"

CHAPTER XV.

THE THING HAS A DARK LOOK.

"Come in, Kingman. You are prompt. I'm obliged to you."

Wednesday morning, and Detective Lamm at the threshold of his office was welcoming his friend, the reporter.

"Yes," said Thomas, unaware of the peculiar expression with which his associate regarded him. "Your note, left at the office, seemed to be urgent."

"You are right. It was urgent. Sit down."

John Lamm locked the door and put the key in his pocket. And standing with his back against it, said, seriously:

"Thomas, I have always considered you as an excellent detective. I have changed my mind."

"Well, what now?" asked Thomas, uneasily, glancing keenly at his friend, and thereafter avoiding his gaze.

"This," said Lamm, measuring his words; "the man who allows himself to be side-tracked in an important case by a pretty face and a pair of blue eyes has a cardinal weakness that sooner or later is sure to tell against him in business."

Thomas started, flushed, but controlled himself.

"Did you go clear to New York to find that out?"

"I have not been to New York," said Lamm, quietly. "I have been here in Boston, hard at work upon the latest and most curious feature of the North case."

"Come," said Thomas, desperately, "say what you mean. Don't talk in riddles."

QUALITY and PRICE

The two vital questions in your piano purchase are, first, quality; second, price. An unsatisfactory piano, in tone and action, is the most annoying article you can have in your home. You dislike to be expending money on it continually to keep it in playing condition.

September Sale Beds & Bedding

We began Tuesday in our State famous department, a sale of high-class Beds and Bed Accessories which, in point of actual magnitude and volume of money saving, has never been attempted in Newark before. We have spared no pains to make this the master effort of a great department---we have been quick to grasp every offering which afforded us an opportunity to secure the right kind of merchandise at the right price, and, in offering the following sensational values, we do so with the full and certain knowledge of the absolute dependability of every item. Our assortments, hitherto the largest in Newark, are this season positively without equal anywhere. Plenty of salespeople to serve you.

RAHWAY NINE SMITES THE CLINTON AVENUES

Inability to gather the necessary hits off of Clark's deceptive inshoots, combined with the timely hitting of Squier's delivery, lost yesterday morning's game for Clinton Avenue and gave Rahway a victory. The game opened in lively fashion, the visitors making two runs, while the locals tallied three. In the third stanza Rahway added another run tieing the score. In the seventh they increased their lead by two and things looked dubious for Plainfield.

Clinton Avenue had a fine chance to even things up in the ninth, but one run was the best they could do. Emery made a clean hit, Jack Martin reached first on an error of Lee Potter and Boelzley brought Emery home with a two-bagger. That ended the fun for the next three men fanned. There were a few brilliant spots in the contest, but otherwise it was tame. The score:

CLINTON AVENUES DEFEAT THE M'NULTY BROS.' TEAM.

The Clinton Avenues defeated McNulty Bros.' team, of New York, on Crescent Oval, Saturday afternoon, by a score of 3 to 2 in a well-played and at times exciting contest. Inability on the part of the visitors to connect with Randolph's curves prevented them from scoring until the sixth inning, when through a chain of circumstances they succeeded in getting a forced run. In the eighth inning through a combination of errors and a couple of hits they tallied again.

The local team scored two runs in the second inning and one in the ninth, which gave them the game. Hanigan pitched a good game, but the Clinton Avenues did not have much trouble in getting to him. The visitors put up a good game throughout, but was not as strong in all departments as the home club. The score by innings:

Batteries—Randolph and Boelzley, Hanigan and Seamon.

PLAINFIELD A. C. DEFEAT CLIMAX A. C., 4 TO 2.

In a close and exciting contest played on the Clinton Avenue grounds Saturday afternoon, the Plainfield A. C. defeated the Climax A. C. by a score of 4 to 2. Terry was in the box for the Climax A. C. and pitched a good game, only eight hits being made off his delivery and ten strikeouts were credited to him. Slocum pitched winning ball holding the heavy batters of the opposing team to five hits and fanning eight.

Both teams played fast ball, the feature being the fielding of Luthman, Emmons, Hann and Wunderlish and the snappy work of the catchers, Lambert and Mullen. Another contest will be played by these teams Saturday, September 26. The score by innings:

SCOTCH PLAINS' TEAM DEFEATS RAHWAY NINE.

Although batting hard enough to win two or three games, the Rahway A. A. was unable to overcome a lead of five runs in a contest with Scotch Plains, at Riverside Park Saturday afternoon, and lost by a score of 7 to 4.

Twelve of the Rahway players were left on bases, seven of them on third, and chances to score in every inning were thus allowed to escape. Warren McLaughlin, of the Connecticut League and formerly of the National, twirled for the visitors and was hit freely, especially in the final four sessions. His support saved him, however, Baldwin making several fast plays. The score:

Scotch P.	0 4 1 0 0 0 1 0 1	7	11 2

Batteries—Clark and Freeman; McLaughlin and H. Alberts.

Iolas Defeat Highlanders.

The Iola Club defeated the Highlanders in an eleven inning contest on Hope Commons, yesterday afternoon, by a score of 4 to 3. It was a pitcher's battle from start to finish. The score by innings:

Iola Club.... 0 0 1 0 0 1 0 0 1 0 1—4

Batteries—Hallard and Linke; Ewart and Winter.

FAIR ACRES RACES ATTRACT A BIG CROWD

Among the numerous successful holiday events in the city was the race meet held yesterday afternoon at the driving park under the auspices of the Fair Acres Riding and Driving Club. The card, one of the best offered this season, attracted an unusually large crowd of lovers of good racing and they witnessed three fine races, 2:30 trot and pace, 2:30 trot and pace and a half-mile running event. The first two races were for pursases of $100 each and the last one for a purse of $50.

The first race was won by Lady Onward in three straight heats, with Joe McGregor second. Tom Sharkey took the second race in straight heats, while there was a tie between Sidney Leland and Ben. Butler for fourth money. In the run-off, Sidney Leland finished first. Cornelius McCarthy's Bowery Lass won the running race in straight heats in .54¾ and .55 seconds. The summaries:

City Fathers Meet Tonight.

The September meeting of the Common Council will be held tonight, when it is expected that considerable business will be presented. One of the important things likely to be heard is the case of Arthur Wolverton, the superintendent of the Industrial Home, who was found guilty in the city court of charges preferred by S. S. Vermeule, an inmate, of rough treatment. City Judge Runyon decided to refer the matter to the Common Council. It is not likely that public action will be taken tonight.

Miss Helen Woodruff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Woodruff, of Duer street, is enjoying a week's visit with Mr. and Mrs. Peter H. Bennett, at their cottage in Ocean Grove.

MANY ATTRACTIONS AT PARK GOLF CLUB

A full schedule of holiday events attracted a big field of golfers to the Park Golf Club, yesterday, and many good scores were made in the various competitions. In addition there was plenty of tennis on the club's new courts, while the social features were greatly enjoyed at the clubhouse.

The chief attraction for the day was the play for the Holiday cup, selected best eighteen holes. E. E. Gano and W. V. Gano were tied for first place with a net score of 77. The leading scores:

E. E. Gano, 77, 0-77; W. V. Gano, 77, 0-77; Louis K. Hyde, 89, 9-80; A. W. Kenworthy, 103, 22-81; Dr. H. K. Carroll, 89, 7-82; Charles B. Morse, 94, 12-82; W. R. Faber, 87, 4-83; Dr. A. W. Anderson, 91, 7-84; Charles A. Reed, 88, 2-86; W. V. Byard, 96, 9-87; Alexander Gilbert, 106, 14-92.

There was also the opening play for the Oakmont cup, offered by Louis K. Hyde, weekly competition until Election Day, the five lowest net scores to count each day of play. These scores were posted:

W. V. Byard, 96, 9-87; Dr. A. W. Anderson, 96, 7-89; E. E Gano, 90, 0-90; W. V. Gano, 90, 0-90; J. B. Betts, 114, 22-92; Dr. H. K Carroll, 101, 7-94; W. R. Faber, 99, 4-95; Charles A. Reed, 100, 2-98; Charles B. Morse, 110, 12-98; Rev. C. L. Goodrich, 109, 11-98; Rev. L. R. Howard, 121, 20-101.

Another attraction was an approaching and putting contest in which three teams tied with a score of 7, W. V. Byard and Miss Lydie E. Loizeaux, W. R. Faber and Miss May Shreve, E. E. Gano and Miss Anna L. Runyon. In the playoff the first two named couples tied again with a score of 8, and in the playoff of that tie, Miss Loizeaux and Mr. Byard won by a score of 8. There was also one match for challenge trophy number one, scheduled for Saturday, play for which was arranged for Saturday. W. R. Faber, challenger, defeated C. B. Morse, holder, by 6 up and 4 to play. The matches for Saturday are as follows: For trophy number three, E. E. Gano challenged by Dr. A. W. Anderson; for trophy number five, W. V Byard challenged by Leon R. Thurlow.

In the weekly competition for the President's and Golf Club cups at the Park Golf Club, Saturday, W. B. Gano, Jr., Louis K. Hyde and W. R. Faber won points for the President's cup, and Mr. Gano, W. R. Faber and C. A. Reed took the points for the scratch cup. The leading scores were as follows:

W. B. Gano, Jr., 84, 0-84; Louis K. Hyde, 98, 12-86; W. R. Faber, 93, 6-87; Dr. H. K. Carroll, 96, 8-88; Dr. A. W. Anderson, 96, 8-88; W. V. Byard, 100, 9-91; Rev. C. L. Goodrich, 102, 11-91; A. W. Kenworthy, 102, 9-93; Leon R. Thurlow, 101, 8-93; Charles A. Reed, 95, 1-94.

In the competition for the Hydewood challenge cup, Walter C. McNaughton, challenger, defeated C. B. Morse, by 1 up in 19 holes; for trophy number two, W. R. Faber, defeated E. E. Gano, challenger, by 3 up and 2to play; for trophy number four, Dr. A. Anderson, holder, defeated W. V. Byard, challenger, by 2 up and 1 to play.

HOLIDAY EVENTS AT THE COUNTRY CLUB

Ideal weather brought out a big field at the Plainfield Country Club, yesterday, including many members who have just returned from their summer vacations. The course was in good condition despite the heavy rain of Sunday night. Besides the various holiday attractions on the links, the social features at the clubhouse, including the dinner-dance in the evening, were enjoyed by an unusually large number of members and guests.

The chief event on the course was a thirty-six hole handicap, Classes A and B, with prizes for the best gross and net scores in each. In Class A Percy H. Stewart won the net score prize and Frank C. Talmadge the best gross score prize, while in Class B, C. M. Church won both prizes, but according to the rules was allowed to take but one. He selected the best gross score trophy, while George S. Clay took the best net score prize, with a 165. The leading scores were as follows:

Class A—Percy H. Stewart, 176, 30-146; Stuart H. Patterson, 184, 30-154; R. G. Morse, 186, 28-158; Frank C. Talmadge, 172, 12-160.

Class B—C. M. Church, 204, 54-150; George S. Clay, 219, 54-165; C. C. Burke, Jr., 211, 42-169; H. F. Fox, 218, 44-174; Edward C. Patterson, 230, 50-180.

Another attraction was a clock golf competition for women. There was a tie for first place between Mrs. H. Reeve Stockton and Mrs. Arthur Opp, each making a score of 27. The scores:

Mrs. H. Reeve Stockton, 27; Mrs. Arthur Opp, 27; Miss Elsie Harman, 28; Miss Josephine Lapsley, 29; Miss Helen Harman, 29; Mrs. T. W. T. Maxwell, 32.

The initial play for the Fall handicap cups, Classes A and B, was the attraction at the Plainfield Country Club on Saturday, and there was a large field out to engage in the competition. Frank C. Talmadge, R. G. Morse and C. H. Patterson won points for the Class A cup, while W. F. Merrill, George S. Clay and T. W. T. Maxwell were the point-winners for the Class B cup. The best scores were as follows:

Class A—Frank C. Talmadge, 74, 6-68; R. G. Morse, 87, 14-73; Stuart H. Patterson, 101, 17-84. Class B—W. F. Merrill, 102, 25-77; George S. Clay, 106, 27-79; T. W. T. Maxwell, 120, 26-94.

WADSWORTH AND RIGHTER GET THE SILVER CUPS

The men's doubles tennis tournament held on the courts of the Watchung Hunt Club, beginning Saturday and concluding yesterday, was a success. The results follow:

Preliminary round—H. E. Butler and W. deLa R. Anderson defeated H. M. Eaton and Daniel Runkle, 10-8, 5-7, 6-2; Willard Wadsworth and W. L. Ringhter, defeated Owen Fleming and Monroe B. Long, 6-4, 3-6, 6-4; W. B. Tyler and J. M. Charles, defeated Messrs. W. deLa R. and R. W. K. Anderson, by default.

First round—H. E. Butler and Mr. Anderson defeated Messrs. Lovell, 7-5, 8-6; Willard Wadsworth and W. L. Righter, defeated Mr. Brown and Mr. Foster, 6-3, 6-4; Bruce Lachlan and Wm. Ransome defeated Charles Langdon and Mr. Kyte, 6-3, 6-2; William Barlow and Edward Daniel defeated W. B. Tyler and J. M. Charyes, 6-0, 6-1.

Semi-final round—Willard Wadsworth and W. L. Righter defeated H. E. Butler and W. deLa R. Anderson, 6-0, 6-0; William Barlow and Edward Daniel defeated Bruce Lachlan and Wm. Ransome, 6-4, 6-3. Finals—Willard Wadsworth and W. L. Righter defeated Mr. Barlow and Mr. Daniel, 7-5, 6-0, 6-3.

The prizes in the competition were silver cups, offered by Edwin S. Hooley, one of the officers of the club.

Entertains Big Crowd.

The local Italian Sick Benefit Society gave a band concert and display of fireworks on Crescent Oval, last night, that drew a crowd of nearly 2,000 people. The music was furnished by the Vittoria III band, of New York, in charge of Professor Cricciola and the program was greatly enjoyed. Most of the pyrotechnics were set pieces and the finale was a creditable representation of Columbus landing on Cat Island and blazing the trail for the first Italian sick benefit society.

Arrangements for the affair were made by Salve Velarde, representing the National Sick Benefit organization; Leonardi Demilio and Andrew Cutillio. The proceeds were derived from the grand stand admissions of which there were a large number.

Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Conover and son, Ralph, of Park place, the borough, returned home Saturday after an absence of nearly three weeks spent with relatives in Hunterdon county.

JOINT CONFERENCE TONIGHT.

North Plainfield, Dunellen, Bound Brook, Raritan and Probably Somerville to Be Represented.

The trunk line sewer proposition which is being considered by the several adjacent municipalities with Plainfield was discussed at the September meeting of the Common Council last night. In accordance with Councilman Mygatt's resolution adopted by the city fathers the local committee was authorized to join with one or more municipalities for the purpose of obtaining data and all necessary information from competent engineers and a sum not to exceed $500 was appropriated for that purpose.

In explaining the progress already made, Mr. Mygatt said that several conferences had been held and the commission had reached that point where it could not take another step without the expenditure of money for the employment of engineers. The municipalities who have thus far joined in the movement have expressed a willingness to pay their proportionate share of the expense for this work.

Mr. Mygatt announced that another conference will be held tonight at the Council Chamber in which representatives of Dunellen, North Plainfield, Bound Brook and possibly Somerville and Raritan will join. Mr Mygatt said that he could not give any assurance that the object sought would be attained and it might possibly be that the $500 would go for naught, but the commission was much impressed with the favor with which the proposition is being received and it is hoped that something definite will be accomplished.

Y. M. C. A. PLANS FOR A VIGOROUS CAMPAIGN

A vigorous campaign in all departments is being planned by the Young Men's Christian Association, under the direction of Secretary Parker. Although the in-door activities will not be generally resumed until October 1, classes are now being formed. The association will again offer a course in mechanical drawing with Henry Eggerding, Jr., as instructor. A larger enrollment than last year is expected. The first meeting will be held Tuesday night, October 16.

In the religious department, five Bible classes for men will be conducted. They will include classes in "The Life of Christ," "The Social Teachings of Jesus," "Life Problems," "The Teaching of Bible Classes," and "Personal Work.' It is planned to begin the Bible classes October 8 with a supper to all members of this group. Men sixteen years of age and over, whether members of the association or not, may join one of these classes.

Alexander Irvine will be the speaker at the first Sunday meeting of the fall series to be held on October 4. This will be the association's annual Bible study rally service. Mr. Irvine will speak on "The Influence of Books Upon Character." Other noted speakers who have been engaged for these meetings include Dr. Harvey G. Furbay, Bishop Rudolph Dubs, Dr. Josiah Strong, two addresses; Hon. Walter M. Chandler, Prof. George W. Guthrie, of Columbia, and Rev. John McDowell, of Newark.

Freeholders Inspecting Roads.

A delegation of seven members of the Mercer County Board of Freeholders visited Plainfield this morning for the purpose of inspecting the streets which have been treated with "Asphaltoilene," it being the plan to use that or a similar preparation on some of the thoroughfares in Mercer county. The freeholders met City Engineer A. J. Gavett, and in company with Robert Meeker, son of State Supervisor R. A. Meeker, made a tour of the streets in automobiles. They did not express an opinion concerning the patented preparation. This afternoon the freeholders are inspecting the roads in East Orange, where "Asphaltoilene" has been used.

Druggists Delegates.

Thomas A. Armstrong, of this city, and Joseph G. Smith, of Rahway, were yesterday appointed by the Union County Retail Druggists Association as delegates to the National Association's convention at Atlantic City this week.

Miss Pearl Martin, of New York, is visiting her cousin, Mrs. Abram Hart, of West Seventh street.

LOCAL OPTION LEAGUE ENDORSES CANDIDATES

After a prolonged session behind closed doors, the Union County Local Option League at Elizabeth, last night, gave out a statement concerning the local optionists decisions regarding county candidates. They endorsed Ernest R. Ackerman, of this city, for renomination on the Republican ticket for State Senator, and Carlton B. Pierce, of Cranford, for renomination on the Republican ticket for Assembly. They also endorsed the candidacy of Lloyd Thompson, of Westfield, for a Republican nomination for Assembly.

Assemblyman A. F. Kirstein, of Rahway, who seeks a renomination on the Republican ticket, was denounced in no uncertain language. All voters "irrespective of party" were called upon to prevent his nomination. The denunciation of the Rahway man is due to his attitude regarding excise legislation.

CITY DEMOCRATS FILE COUNCILMANIC PETITIONS

The Democrats have placed a complete Councilmanic ticket in the field by filing for nomination the petitions of W. T. Banks, J. F. Connoly, Joseph Harkins and W. G. Tunison in the four respective wards of the city. None of the candidates hope to win if nominated but act for what they deem the best interests of the party.

It is alleged by Republicans in a position to know that William G. Tunison has no legal right to become a candidate. The claim is made that it can be proven that he is a resident of Somerville, but the friends of the candidate say that there is nothing in the claim.

So far as the mayoralty is concerned, no definite action has been taken. Some of the Democratic leaders take the position that it is a mistake to place any local ticket in the field but inasmuch as candidates for Common Council have been decided upon, a mayoralty choice must be made. It is quite certain that the Democrats will not endorse Mayor Charles J. Fisk, the Republican nominee, as they did two years ago.

COUNCIL DISPOSES OF ARC LIGHT AGITATION

The question of installing any number of arc lights throughout the business or residential section of the city is temporarily disposed of, at least. At the September meeting of the Common Council, last night, Mr. Montgomery, chairman of the light committee, asked for a recess to consider the matter. Afterwards he returned a great many petitions and other papers bearing on the subject, and recommended on behalf of the committee and Council that no action be taken until a readjustment of light rates can be effected between the city and the Public Service Corporation.

It has been the earnest hope of Mr. Montgomery that these lights be installed in the near future, but after a conference with the other members he realized that it would be impossible to do anything at present, or until such time as a readjustment of rates can be made. At the present rates, the expense would be greater than the committee is willing to ask the Council to approve.

October Grand Jurymen.

These Plainfielders were drawn today by Sheriff Lawrence as members of the October Grand Jury: Charles L. Lewis, Cornelius VanHerwerden J. A. Beaton, John Morton, George Finger, R. H. McCready, F. S. Reinhart, Ralph Young, Charles Drake, J. D. Dunn, Isaac Schrager, U. G. Pierson, Edward Caldwell, Floyd D. Fuller, John F. Lewis, Walter Wyckoff, Fred B. Jones, S. H. Whitney W. B. Marchant, Arthur McVoy and W. J. Johnson.

Noticeable Absence of Dust.

The exceptionally heavy travel over Park avenue on Sunday and Labor Day was a severe test for the recent improvement on the thoroughfare through the spreading of tarvia, but there was an absolute absence of dust and this was a welcome change from other days. The same was true of North avenue and other streets where the patent preparations have been used.

Sentence Suspended.

Joseph Kmosko, of North avenue, was picked up by the police, last night, on a d. and d. charge. He got a pair of s's in the city court this morning.

SELL 80 THOROUGHBREDS

E. R. Thomas' Stable Goes Under the Hammer to Satisfy a $200,000. Claim.

SOME GREAT TWO-YEAR OLDS.

Judge Coddington on Hand at Holmdel to Look Out After Attaching Creditor's Claim.

On an attachment issued in the Supreme Court on March 25, the sale of E. R. Thomas' stable of thoroughbreds at Holmdel, near Freehold, takes place this afternoon to satisfy a claim of the Metropolitan Trust Company, of New York for $200,000. Judge William A. Coddington, of Reed & Coddington, who are associated with Thomas Mills Day, also of Plainfield, represents the creditor at the sale which has long been deferred pending promises of an amicable settlement.

Eighty or more registered thoroughbreds besides costly racing paraphernalia and stable equipment will be disposed of but according to the creditor's lawyers they do not expect to realize near the value of the goods. Among the fine steeds to go under the hammer are the celebrated stallions Hermis and Golden Garter and the bunch of two years olds including Desirous, Jack Parker, Nestor, Fanatic, Glucose, Turkish Maid, Gatien Lass, Princess of Wales, Yama, Endymion, Pelleas, Varuna, Theiades.

E. R. Thomas is confined to a hospital in New York as a result of serious injuries received some time ago in an automobile accident at Long Branch. The claim of $200,000 represents loans made to and guaranteed by Mr. Thomas.

At the closing session of the Grand Castle of New Jersey, Knights of the Golden Eagle, at Trenton yesterday, Frederick Gierman, who was defeated for the office of grand sir herald, was appointed one of the district chiefs. Grand Master of Records A. L. Clark, of Trenton, was appointed to the public press committee. Past Chief George F. Scheele was appointed grand instructor. Horace J. Martin, of this city, was elected grand vice-chief.

The Grand Castle also adopted a resolution recommending that the Supreme Castle of the United States, which convenes in Washington next month, confer the honor of past grand chief, for meritorious services, upon Past Chiefs Robert Dinges, George F. Scheele and Thomas Farrell, all of Trenton.

The election of officers resulted as follows: Sitting past grand chief, Oscar M. Condit, Asbury Park; grand chief, Sidney J. Hall, Millville; grand vice-chief, Horace J. Martin, Plainfield; grand high priest, Adam Q. Bloom, Trenton; grand keeper of exchequer, Halstead Wainwright, Farmingdale; grand master of records, A. L. Clark, Trenton; grand sir herald, Martin L. Ferris, Asbury Park; grand bard, Dr. H. G. Keeler, Tuckerton; grand first guardsman, John D. F. Morgan, Blackwood; grand second guardsman, George F. Jenkins, Trenton; grand trustee, F. A. Buren, Camden, supreme castle representative, Oscar M. Condit, Asbury Park.

Supreme Chief Eli Manchester, of New Haven, installed the officers. He was assisted by his staff. Other notable visitors yesterday afternoon were Supreme Master of Records A. C. Lyttle, Philadelphia; Supreme Second Guardsman John M. Shappell, of Philadelphia; Lieutenant-General Harry P. Reinecke, of Philadelphia, who is in command of the entire military branch of the order; Deputy Chief John J. Blackford, of Yonkers, N. Y., and Grand Keeper of Exchequer Porter, of Connecticut.

Funeral of Patrick Melvin, Sr.

The funeral of Patrick Melvin, Sr., was held in St. Mary's church, this morning, when requiem mass was said by Rev. Father Keough. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends and numerous floral tributes extended included several set pieces. Burial was made in St. Mary's cemetery, the pall bearers being Frederick Wian, Arthur McGinley, John Conway, Edward Connors, Michael O'Keefe and Richard Birmingham.

Funeral of Mrs. H. C. Graydon.

The funeral service of Mrs. Hannah C. Graydon, widow of William Graydon, who died suddenly Monday night, will be held from the late residence on West Eighth street, Friday morning at 10:45 o'clock. The burial will be in Greenwood Cemetery, Brooklyn.

"Does Prohibition Pay" will be the subject for a general discussion at the annual meeting of the Plainfield W. C. T. U. tomorrow. Mrs. Emma Bourne, the State president of the organization, will make an address during the proceedings.

This is the program: Devotions, Mrs. M. Winter; election of officers and of church vice presidents; delegates to State convention to be named; noontime prayer; lunch box social; executive committee appointments; devotions, Mrs. E. A. Parse; report of superintendent; memorial service; piano solo, Miss Beulah Rogers; symposium, "Does Prohibition Pay;" address, Mrs. Bourne; vocal solo, Miss Nancy Randolph, and reception in honor of Mrs. Sims, the oldest member, aged ninety years.

UNIFORMITY DESIRED IN LIGHTS' LOCATIONS

At the suggestion of Mayor C. J. Fisk, the question of establishing a proper height and location for all incandescent electric lights to be erected in the future, was brought before the Common Council, last night, by Chairman Montgomery, of the light committee. A resolution to that effect was offered providing that the city engineer shall direct the location and height of such lights ordered in the future.

It was explained by Mr. Montgomery that as Mr. Gavett is not only city engineer, but one of the tree commissioners, he would be the proper person to take charge of the work. Mr. Mygatt, although not objecting to the change but questioning the power of the body to take such action suggested that the committee confer with the corporation counsel and learn exactly what authority the city has in the matter.

Mayor Fisk explained to the city fathers that heretofore lights had been located according to the ideas of the Public Service Corporation without regard to any particular height, and he believed it would be a good plan to have them placed at such points as the committee or city engineer directs and at a uniform height. Mr. Gavett he said would be able to judge as to the proper height having regard to the location of trees.

The privileges of the floor were given to Commissioner Gavett who stated that in the work of trimming trees the height decided upon was about ten feet and that that would serve as a proper distance to place a light above the ground. He said that he was willing to attend to the work if the Council should so direct, the question previously having arisen that he had plenty to do already without adding other duties.

The resolution as offered by Mr. Montgomery was amneded so that it directed the light committee and the tree commission to confer for the purpose of deciding the proper height to place the street lamps. The resolution as amneded was adopted.

In this connection, Mayor Fisk asked Mr. Montgomery, through President Tolles, whether his committee had ever considered the fact that in granting petitions for lights on streets where there are no wires or poles that it was extending the franchise of the Public Service Corporation.

In response Mr. Montgomery explained that he had written Corporation Counsel Marsh on the subject and had received a reply in the negative.

HENRY WIERENGA PLAYS THE ROLE OF THE GROOM.

Henry Wierenga, the well-known local expressman, stole a march on his friends in town, last week, by slipping away to Belleville and claiming a bride. The young woman was Miss Harriett Brown, of that place, and the ceremony was performed Thursday afternoon at the home of her parents by Rev. Father Bannon, also of Belleville. Only relatives and a few immediate friends were in attendance.

On Saturday afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. Wierenga enjoyed a trip to Niagara Falls and they returned home last night. They will make their home in the Jackson building, where the groom has furnished an apartment.

Mr. Wierenga has been in the express business in Plainfield for the past ten years. He is a member of the Timbo Social Club and several other organizations and has a wide acquaintance in the city and borough.

DEMAND BETTER SERVICE

City Fathers Unanimously Decide to Investigate Deplorable Trolley Schedule.

THEY ARE STIRRED UP AT LAST.

The Public Affairs Committee Will Also Find Out About Those Promised New Cars.

Their patience exhausted and responding to the clamor of the public generally, the city fathers have determined to compel the Public Service Corporation to provide proper service on its local trolley lines and to fulfill promises made nearly a year ago. On motion of Councilman Mygatt, a resolution presented by the public affairs committee authorizing that committee to investigate fully the present deplorable conditions and to report as speedily as possible, was unanimously adopted.

Not only are the schedules alleged to be poorer than ever in the history of local trolleys but the rolling stock is claimed by residents to be a disgrace to the community. Some cars on the Netherwood line purchased second hand years ago from another trolley road are still in use, and about the same condition is found on the other local lines. Last fall when the P. S. C. wanted to double track its main line in the business section the consent was given on payment of $5,000 towards brick pave work and many needed improvements along its lines. Excepting the cash, none of the promises have been kept and although brand new cars on all lines were promised by Jan. 1, 1908, the same old fashioned and shabby cars are in use.

MISS MAE BATCHELOR BECOMES MRS. KENNELLY

One of the first of the September weddings took place last night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Batchelor, of West Seventh street, when their daughter, Miss Mae Batchelor, was married to Albert Lewis Kennelly, of Jersey City. Only immediate relatives and a few of the most intimate friends of the bride and groom were in attendance. The Episcopal ceremony was used and Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, was the officiating clergyman. The bride's pastor, Rev. Dr. Chambliss, was to have performed the ceremony but owing to a storm at sea he was delayed in returning from abroad.

The decorations were white asters and green, banked upon the mantelpieces and arranged to give the effect of a bower in the bay windows of the library, where the young people plighted their troth. The bridal party was quite informal. It was ledled by Miss Marjorie Kirkner, of this city, the little ribbon girl. She came down the stairs all in white and wearing a tiny gold bracelet, the gift of the bride. She was followed by the maid of honor, Miss Edith Wise, of Newton, Mass., a classmate of Miss Batchelor at Wellesley College. Her gown was of white batiste over green taffeta, while she carried a great bouquet of white asters.

After Miss Wise came the bride and groom, hand in hand. Miss Batchelor was in white chiffon cloth over taffeta, trimmed with real lace and necooline. She wore the bridegroom's gift, a beautiful sunburst of diamonds and pearls, and carried bride roses. The remaining attendant was the best man, F. Millard Gaiger, of Katonah, N. Y., who joined the party at the altar. As the bride came down the stairs, her train was arranged by Miss Margaret Mills, of Winchester, Mass., who was to have been one of the bridesmaids had the first plans for a large wedding been carried out. While the party was assembling, the wedding march from Lohengrin was charmingly rendered by Miss Anna Lucretia Case, soprano solist at the First Presbyterian church.

Following the ceremony, an informal wedding supper was served and later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Kennelly left for a two weeks' honeymoon. At its conclusion they will make their home at Washington Heights, New York city. She is a graduate of the Plainfield High School and also of Wellesley College.

Funeral of Christian Sprich.

The funeral of Christian Sprich was held last night at the home of his sister, Mrs. Edward Lotz, of Essex street. The service was private and was conducted by Rev. J. Dueschner, of the borough. The body was sent to Long Island this morning for burial in the Lutheran cemetery.

"UNCLE DAN" HERE IN FOWLER'S INTEREST

State Treasurer Daniel Voorhees made a flying trip to Plainfield last night to have a talk with City Clerk James T. MacMurray. The candidacy of Charles N. Fowler for renomination to Congress, was said to have been the subject of discussion. After their talk, Mr. MacMurray stated that "Uncle Dan was not at all worried over Mr. Fowler's prospects, but that he appeared to be more interested in a local fight in Morris county.

Whether any further opposition will be made by Union county Republicans to Mr. Fowler's candidacy is not known for all those on the ground profess ignorance of the situation, although there is some muttering among the minor leaders. Mr MacMurray, who is looking after the Fowler end of the fight in Union, says that in his opinion his nomination and election are certain.

MR. FISK WILL WITHDRAW IN FAVOR OF F. H. SMITH

By the gracious action of Mayor Charles J. Fisk, the attempt to defeat Frank H. Smith, the present county chairman, for membership on the Republican County Committee in Union has petered out and he will be returned this fall. Duncan W. Taylor, who is a candidate for a full term in the Common Council, and Charles J. Fisk, the mayor, as present represents thre Third ward on the county committee and indirect notice had been served by several New Idea leaders there that they would not stand for Smith.

To prevent a fight and to add to the endorsement that Senator Ackerman recently gave Smith, Mr. Fisk announced today that he "would withdraw as a candidate for re-election to the committee as he was anxious for the best interests of the Republican party in Union county that Frank Smith should be continued in office as county chairman."

Mr. Smith is considered the model county chairman on the slate and should he not be returned to the committee his loss would be a serious blow to the party.

POLICE ENFORCING THE SHADE TREE ORDINANCES

Following up a peremptory order from the Shade Tree Commission that violations of the city ordinances relating to shade trees in the streets should be enforced, the police became active yesterday and brought three prisoners to headquarters. They arrested William Vail, a grocer, for tieing a horse to a tree in front of his place of business on East Front street; Fred Hoffmeister for cutting down two trees in lowering a sidewalk grade on Jackson avenue, and C. W. M. Harrison, a landscape gardener, who grubbed out a couple of maples in making some improvements in front of the Tracy property on West Eighth street.

The three men were arraigned before Judge Runyon this morning, but he suspended sentence in each case, announcing his belief that the people of the city are not familiar with the ordinances that the Commission has decreed shall be lived up to. Hoffmeister and Harrison both claimed to have had permission to remove the trees they were at work on but there seemed to be a misunderstanding as to who gave it to them. Street Commissioner Gavett said he had granted a permit for Hoffmeister but not to Harrison; the one in the former case being verbal. Vail admitted tieing his horse to the tree but explained he was unconscious of a violation at the time.

Chief Kiely stated after the court session that the police have been instructed to enforce the ordinances and there is nothing for him to do but have his men keep a watchout. He explained that tieing horses to trees is to be strictly prohibited while no one can cut down or remove a tree without some member of the commission or Sareet Commissioner Gavett issuing a permit. He wishes to make this plain, for as Judge Runyon says, there are very few property owners who understand fully what rights they have over trees in front of their premises.

For a Worthy Object.

Some children interested in local charities will give a lawn fete for the benefit of the Day Nursery at the residence of Mrs. D. S. Alpaugh, 135 East Sixth street, tomorrow afternoon, from 4 to 6. Ice cream, home-made candy and cake will be for sale. No charge will be made for admission.

WOLVERTON TO ANSWER

Councilmanic Committee Will Investigate an Industrial Home Inmate's Charges.

JUDGE RUNYON REPORTS CASE.

Superintendent Found Guilty in Police Court—"One of the Greatest Outrages," Says a Witness.

After receiving the report of City Judge William N. Runyon regarding the case of the City Treasurer against Arthur Wolverton, the superintendent of the Industrial Home, in which S. S. Vermeule, a ninety-year- old inmate is the complaining witness, the Common Council, last night decided to make a full investigation. Chairman Charles C. Randolph, of the alms committee, to whom report was referred, suggested that inasmuch as there are only three members of that committee, that Mayor Fisk and President Tolles be added for the purpose of investigation.

In his report Judge Runyon simply recited the facts as brought out at the hearing before him on Tuesday and Wednesday of last week. According to the complaint of Mr. Vermeule he was sitting on the walk in front of the Industrial Home on August 1 last, when Superintendent Wolverton approached him and ordered him to move. Not doing so it is alleged that Mr. Wolverton pushed Mr. Vermeule violently and injured him. This statement, Judge Runyon says was corroborated by H. W. Adams, a reputable citizen, who was passing at the time, and who described the scene as "one of the greatest outrages I have ever seen."

In further explanation, Judge Runyon says that Mr. Wolverton admitted he "assisted" Mr. Vermeule, but denied any violence, but he stated that he reserved the front lawn and porch of the Home for his own use and did not propose to allow the paupers to walk about there. In conclusion Judge Runyon adds that he found Mr. Wolverton guilty, but before passing sentence desired that the Common Council have a chance to investigate the matter. He also said that it had been reported to him that an old woman inmate of the Home had been slapped in the face by Mr. Wolverton, but was unable to state the truthfulness of this story. He suggested that a report be made to him following the regular October meeting as he is now holding the sentence of Mr. Wolverton in abeyance pending the action of the Common Council.

REGISTRY BOARDS PUT IN A BUSY DAY

Some of the city polling districts showed an increased registry yesterday, when the local boards of election met for the first regular registry of voters, while in others the figures remain about the same as last year. The most notable increase was in the second district of the Second ward, where forty-seven additional names were placed on the list. In the first district of that ward six names were added. There was also a substantial increase in the First district, where 642 names were checked up on the list.

The Second district of the Third ward which shows a registry of 355 names, is about fifty short of last year at the same time, when there was a total of 400. The other districts show about the same number of voters as a year ago for the first registry day. The complete registry for yesterday is as follows:

First ward—First district, 500; second district 347. Second ward—first district, 614; second district, 382. Third ward—first district, 642; second district, 355. Fourth ward—first district, 455; second district, 543; third district, 643.

In North Plainfield there was a large registry, although not a single name was added in either the first or second district. The total registry at the end of the first day was 1,493, which includes the new third district with a list of 563 names. The registry follows:

First district, 469; Second district, 461; Third district, 563. The fact that the third district shows a larger number of registered voters than either one of the other districts proves the wisdom of establishing this district in the borough.

SAYS THE DEMOCRATS WILL WIN IN NEW JERSEY

Homer S. Cummings, of Connecticut, manager of the Democratic speakers' bureau in the East, declared yesterday that New Jersey and New York are no longer regarded by the Democratic leaders as doubtful States—that they will both be safely for William Jennings Bryan for president. This declaration was made at Democratic headquarters, in New York, where, nowadays, there is all kinds of enthusiasm. Mr. Cummings is to be the Democratic nominee for Governor in Connecticut. Said he of conditions in the East:

"We are now organizing the speakers' bureau, and it is extremely gratifying to the national committee that all the best orators of the party in all sections of the country are volunteering their services for the campaign. We are going to make an active campaign in Connecticut, Rhode Island, New York and New Jersey, in fact, we shall not neglect any State in the East. In Connecticut the Republicans are going to nominate Congressman Lilly for governor, and that practically insures the State to Bryan and the Democratic ticket. Because of the charges Mr. Lily made against certain of his fellow Republican members of the house of representatives, which were disproved, the Republican national committee cannot make any campaign for him. Congressman Sherman, the Republican candidate for vice president, cannot go into the State and make speeches for a ticket headed by Lilly.

"In Rhode Island our chances are so good that Mr. Bryan is going into the State and make one or more speeches. I am confident that we will carry both States. As for New York and New Jersey, we no longer regard them as even doubtful States. We expect to carry both."

SHORE MAYORS TO MEET.

Fort to Be Invited to Discuss Sunday Liquor Selling.

Atlantic City, Sept. 9.—The League of Seashore Mayors will meet here today and will take up the question of Sunday liquor selling. Governor Fort has been invited to attend and give his ideas on the subject.

Mayor Stoy, president of the league, declares that he will attempt to halt drastic demands for open Sunday legislation, but other seashore rulers are demanding that some action be taken to enforce laws that will place every city on the coast on the same plane and take away the advantage enjoyed by Atlantic City in daring to ignore the State liquor laws.

Reunion of Kearney's Brigade.

The twenty-seventh annual reunion of the Society of Kearney's First New Jersey Brigade will be held at the beautiful villa of Gen. E. Burd Grubb at Edgewater, on Monday, September 14. A brass band will meet the brigade at the railroad station. The address of welcome will be delivered by Gen. E. Burd Grubb. All comrades belonging to the First, Second, Third, Fourth, Tenth, Fifteenth, Twenty-third and Fortieth Regiments and Battery A, New Jersey Volunteers, are invited to attend. Those who are already enrolled are requested to bring any members of Old Brigade who have not attended. The business meeting will be held at 11 o'clock in the morning and the banquet will immediately follow.

The Clinton Avenues are so much pleased with their work this season and their success in winning games, that Manager Dorflinger is trying to arrange a contest here with the Newark Eastern League club as soon as it completes the championship series. The locals are sure that they can put up a good game against the leaguers.

The many friends of "Warry" McLaughlin who witnessed the Labor Day, afternoon game at the Oval were sorry to see him lose his game. Local pride would have given him the game if possible. "Warry" says that he has not pitched but two or three games since last May, owing to his physical condition.

It was a great achievement for Randolph to pitch a no hit no run game against Scotch Plains and he naturally feels proud. Some people would have robbed him of this honor, believing that the ball driven to centre field in the ninth was a hit. Dick Scott declares that he had his hands on it and would have held it had not Brit. Martin interfered.

While Billy O'Loughlin is a good player and works hard for victory, he don't want to overlook good advice. Labor Day morning in the ninth inning of the game with Rahway, when the locals had a chance to win, he was instructed by Manager Dorflinger to lay the ball down when at the bat. Instead he gave three vicious swings and fanned out

The Plainfield Y. M. C. A. have scheduled a game for Saturday on Crescent Oval with the Newark Y. M. C. A. team and the contest should be a good one. The champions of the association league are playing fine ball now, their latest victory over Somerville being well-earned.

The improvement in Fred Parent's play of late has much to do with the brace of the White Sox.

Two triple plays and a seventeen inning game all in one week was giving the Philadelphia rooters variety with a vengeance.

Walter Johnson has pitched eighteen consecutive innings against the New York Americans without the latter scoring a run.

Arellanes of the Boston Americans has been dubbed Aeroplane, but he hasn't gone up in the air much. On the other hand he looks as if he would do.

While the Pittsburgs and Cubs were taking a fall out of each other the Poloists were winning two from the Quakers, and that was a helpful series of happenings right there.

Mike Dolin apparently doesn't like sun fields, for McGraw shifted him over to left field in Philadelphia and put McCormick in the sun garden. Dolin has done excellent fielding in the left pasture in Philadelphia.

The playing of the New York Nationals on the road must be seen to be appreciated. The coming stretch of home games is expected to count in the New York's favor in chasing the pennant, but they can't play any better at home than they have in most of their games since they last went away.

Joe Cantillion is a humorist. Last Saturday he was on the coaching lines at American League Park as the score of the game in Philadelphia was going up. "Come on you New Yorks," he exclaimed, referring to the New York Nationals. Then turning around to the stand, "That's the team we're going to play for the world's championship."

GOLF.

Programs are out for the third open championship tournament of the Metropolitan Golf Association, to be held over the Baltusrol links on September 23 and 24. The championship proper will consist of seventy-two holes medal play, thirty-six holes each day, but there will be a side attraction on September 25, under the auspices of the Baltusrol Golf Club.

The fact that this year's championship will be open to professionals of the world is bound to lend added interest, and it is reasonable to suppose that some of the prominent "pros" of other localities will be on hand. The money consideration is none too alluring, however, and for that reason long distance entries are likely to be scarce. Immediately after the recent open tournament at Van Cortlandt Park, Will Anderson was asked if he would come on for the metropolitan, and he at once replied in the negative. He said that the money inducement was entirely too small for an affair of such proportions, and furthermore, that there was nothing in it for a man to leave his club for a week, pay hotel bills, railroad fare, etc., and travel a couple of thousand miles besides. As a parting shot Anderson declared that the lot of the professionals in this country was anything but a bed of roses.

The prizes in the coming championship are eight in number, as follows: First, $150; second, $100; third, $75; fourth, $50; fifth, $40; sixth, $30; seventh, $20; and eighth, $10.

This competition is open to amateurs as well as professionals, and it is not necessary for entries to be certified by club secretaries. Competitors may send in their own entries, but must give the name of the club from which they enter, and must inclose $5 entrance. All entries should be made direct to Leighton Calkins, the secretary, No. 25 Broad street, New York city, on or before Saturday, September 19.

Conditions governing the special competition call for a thirty-six-hole medal play four-ball match. Teams will consist of an amateur and a professional, both from the same club, and clubs regularly employing more than one professional may enter more than one team. There will be three prizes—$100, $70 and $30. No entrance fee will be charged for this event.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Youth predominates in "Strongheart," the new American comedy drama of college life, which will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow night. Although "Strongheart" is serious in theme, Mr. De Mille has provided comedy in plenty; good, youthful, healthful, clean comedy, for it breathes the college spirit particularly when football is in the air and pictures vividly the excitement attendant upon the big game of the season. It reflects the days that are a delight to recall—the days of youth, of spontaneous fun, of frolic, of fraternities, of campus heroes and boy and girl love affairs. There is not an old person on the stage. The scenes of "Strongheart" are peopled only with fresh-faced youths and pretty girls. The charm it exerts over the theatregoer is unmistakable; yet it in no wise interferes with the strong dramatic interest of the story, for amidst the fun and gaiety stands the figure of the Indian who speaks their tongue, who thinks their thoughts, and yet, because of his color, is not one of them. He, too, is young. But before the play ends he finds himself confronted with his life's problem—one that will shadow his maturer years.

There are a great many stage artists who can adapt themselves to both tragedy and comedy, but Miss Henrietta Crosman, who will be seen here at the New Plainfield theatre Friday night, is convinced that her lines lie in comedy exclusively. She knows this because she has tried both. This is further proven by the great success she has made as one of the leading comediennes of the country, and who has been elevated to this high position in consequence of her art, her strong personality and her unquestioned talent. She will be seen here as Rosalind in "As You Like It."

Lyman H. Howe's Lifeorama, to be seen at the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon and night, is an inexhaustible mine of enjoyment. The new program is so varied that it teaches, amuses, diverts and impresses the young, the grave, the searching, the idle. It inspires thought in the tyro, affords a world of reminiscence to the well traveled and unmixed delight to the stay-at-home. One of its features portrays that land of terrible extremes—India. The pictures were secured by special authority of the Indian Government and the Secretary of State. It reveals the most modern city—Calcutta—"the city of hovels and palaces," as well as the ancient city—Benares. Beautiful architecture is represented in the program by a personally conducted drive through Rome. Stirring sports; tumultous city life is pictured in Naples; a thrilling 10 mile steeplechase in England affords sensation and excitement beyond most sanguine expectations; intensely humorous episodes of animal and bird life; the annual drill by the Reedham Orphans, etc., all are contained in one program that is admirable at once for its variety and photographic perfection and realism.

The hilarious musical comedy "Buster Brown" will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre next Tuesday afternoon and night. The cast is headed by the lovable little funmaker Master Reed. Miss Alice Mortlock, a most natural child impersonator, will be seen in the character of "Mary Jane," Buster's girl playmate, while this season "Tige" is said to be the best of all animal impersonators who have essayed to play this most trying and out of the ordinary part. The large cast is said to have been well selected, while the scenery and costumes are spic and span with newness.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Under the direction of J. Edmund Skiff, organist and choirmaster of the First M. E. church, the chorus choir will return on Sunday for the fall and winter months. The choir will be the same as before the vacation period.

The chorus choir of the First Baptist church will resume its place on Sunday in the regular services. Miss Gertrude Hinz, the contralto soloist, who has been abroad this summer, will not return to the choir until a week later. There will probably be no changes in the choir this year.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION NO. 6.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY.

Be It Resolved (the House of Assembly concurring). That the following amendments to the constitution of this State be and the same are hereby proposed, and when the same shall be agreed to by a majority of the members elected to the Senate and House of Assembly, the said amendments shall be entered on their journals, with the yeas and nays thereon, and referred to the Legislature next to be chosen, and published for three months prior to the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November next, in at least one newspaper of each county, to be designated by the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Assembly and the Secretary of State:

1. Strike out paragraph 3 of section I, Article IV, and insert in place thereof the following:

Elections for members of the Senate and General Assembly shall be held every two years on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November; beginning anno domini one thousand nine hundred and ten, and every second year thereafter; and the two Houses shall meet separately on the second Tuesday in January in each year, at which time of meeting the legislative year shall commence.

2. Strike out paragraph 1 of section II, Article IV, and insert in place thereof the following:

1. The Senate shall be composed of one Senator from each county in the State, elected by the legal voters of the counties respectively, for four years.

3. Strike out paragraph 2 of section II, Article IV, and insert in place thereof the following:

2. As soon as the Senate shall meet after the first election to be held in pursuance of this constitution they shall be divided by the Senate as equally as may be into two classes. The seats of the Senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year; of the second class, at the expiration of the fourth year, so that one class may be elected every second year and if vacancies happen, by resignation or otherwise, the persons elected to supply such vacancies shall be elected for the unexpired terms only; provided, that the Senators having the longest period of time still to serve at the time of making said division shall be entitled to the longer terms.

4. Strike out paragraph 1 of section III, Article IV, and insert in place thereof the following:

1. The General Assembly shall be composed of members elected by the legal voters of the counties, respectively, every second year, beginning on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November anno domini one thousand nine hundred and ten, who shall be apportioned among the said counties as nearly as may be according to the number of their inhabitants. The Legislature shall, in the year one thousand nine hundred and ten, and at its first session after each United States decennial census hereafter, and not oftener, divide and arrange each county of this State into a district or districts for the election therein of a member or members of the General Assembly. Each Assembly district so constituted shall contain, as nearly as practicable, an equal number of inhabitants, and shall consist of convenient and contiguous territory in a compact form, but no county, or part thereof, shall be joined with any other county, or part thereof, in any such district; provided, that each county shall, at all times, be entitled to at least one member, and the whole number of members to be chosen shall never exceed sixty.

The Court of Last Resort, by whatever name known, is hereby invested with exclusive original jurisdiction and with full power, under such procedure as it may by rules prescribe, to review any division and arrangement made by the Legislature into Assembly districts of the counties of this State for the purpose of determining whether such arrangement and division, or any part thereof, is in accordance or in conflict with this section, and, if in conflict herewith, to adjudge the same, or such part thereof as may be in conflict herewith, null and void. In case said court shall determine such arrangement and division, or any part thereof, to be null and void the Legislature shall proceed to make a new arrangement and division, entire or partial, as the action of the court may require.

5. Strike out paragraph 3 of Article V and insert in place thereof the following:

3. The Governor shall hold his office for four years, to commence at twelve o'clock noon on the third Tuesday of January next ensuing the election for Governor by the people, and to end at twelve o'clock noon on the third Tuesday of January four years thereafter; and he shall be incapable of holding that office for four years next after his term of service shall have expired; and no appointment or nomination to office shall be made by the Governor during the last week of his said term.

6. Strike out paragraph 6 of section II, Article VII, and insert in place thereof the following:

7. Strike out paragraph 7 of section II, Article VII, and insert in place thereof the following:

7. Sheriffs and coroners shall be elected by the people of their respective counties at the elections for members of the General Assembly, and shall hold their offices for four years, after which four years must elapse before they can be again capable of serving. Sheriffs shall annually renew their bonds.

8. Add to section 2 of Article VII, three paragraphs to be known as paragraphs 12, 13 and 14.

12. All elections for Governor, members of the Senate and General Assembly, sheriffs, coroners, county clerks and surrogates of counties and all other officers now or hereafter necessary to be chosen by the electors of the whole State, or of any county thereof, shall be held every second year, on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, beginning anno domini one thousand nine hundred and ten.

13. All elections for justices of the peace and all and any municipal officers, as distinguished from State and county officers as hereinbefore provided, now or hereafter necessary to be chosen by the electors of any city, borough, town, township, village or subdivision thereof, or any municipality of this State, except counties, shall be held every second year on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, beginning anno domini one thousand nine hundred and eleven.

14. Except as herein provided with relation to the office of Senators, all officers filling any elective office at the time these amendments take effect shall continue in the exercise of the duties thereof according to their respective commissions or terms of office, and until their successors may be elected and qualified under the provisions of these amendments, and all officers whose terms of office would expire after these amendments take effect and prior to the election and qualification of their successors in office, at the election for the respective offices first held under the provisions of these amendments, shall continue in office until their successors can be elected and qualified, at the election for such office or offices to be held next after these amendments take effect, according to the provisions hereof.

The Legislature shall pass all necessary laws to arrange the terms of office of all statutory elective officers so that said terms may be in harmony with these amendments and to carry into effect the provisions hereof.

These amendments, if adopted, shall take effect and go into operation on the first day of February, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and ten.

ASSEMBLY CONCURRENT RESOLUTION, NO. 4.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY.

Be It Resolved, (the Senate concurring), That the following amendment to the Constitution of this State be and the same is hereby proposed, and when the same shall be agreed to by a majority of the members elected to the Senate and to the House of Assembly, the said amendment shall be entered on their journals, with the yeas and nays taken thereon, and referred to the Legislature next to be chosen, and published for three months previous to the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November next, in at least one newspaper of each county to be designated by the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Assembly and the Secretary of State, payment for such publication to be made by the Treasurer on the warrant of the Comptroller.

First—Strike out Paragraph 10 of Section VII of Article IV, and change the numbers of the following paragraphs to correspond:

Second—Change Paragraph 10 of Section V so to to read as follows:

10. The Governor or person administering the government, and four citizens of the State appointed by the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall constitute the Board of Pardons. The members of said Board, or any three of them, of whom the Governor or person administering the government shall be one, may remit fines and forfeitures, and grant reprieves, commutations, pardons and paroles, after conviction in all cases except impeachment. The four members specially appointed shall hold office for five years, and receive for their services a compensation which shall not be diminished during the term of their appointment.

Third—Change Section 1 of Article VI so as to read as follows:

SECTION I.

The judicial power shall be vested in a Court for the trial of impeachments, a Supreme Court, County Courts, and such other Courts, inferior to the Supreme Court, as may be established by law, which inferior Courts the Legislature may alter or abolish as the public good shall require.

Fourth—Strike out all of Section II, IV, V, VI and VII of Article VI, change the number of Section III of Article VI to Section II, and insert the following sections in Article VI:

SECTION III.

Any judge of any of the Courts of the State may be removed for disability continuing for one year, or for refusal to perform the duties of his office, by a vote of two-thirds of all the members of the Senate and of two-thirds of all the members of the House of Assembly voting separately, after a hearing before both Houses in joint session.

SECTION IV.

1. The Supreme Court shall be organized in three divisions, namely: the Appeals Division, the Law Division, and the Chancery Division. It shall consist of a Presiding Justice of the Appeals Division who shall be styled the Chief Justice, a Presiding Justice of the Law Division who shall be styled the President Justice, and a Presiding Justice of the Chancery Division, who shall be styled the Chancellor, and eighteen Associate Justices, which number may be increased by law.

2. The Appeals Division shall consist of the Chief Justice, and six other Justices of the Supreme Court to be assigned by the Governor. A Justice of the Supreme Court assigned by the Governor to the Appeals Division shall serve in said Division until the end of his term.

The remaining Justices shall be assigned by the Supreme Court to the Law or Chancery Division, as the business of the Court may require.

3. Whenever the number of causes before the Appeals Division shall be so great that the Division cannot promptly hear and determine them, the Governor shall, when authorized by statute, temporarily assign five of the Justices of the other Divisions to sit in the Appeals Division, which shall thereupon sit in two Divisions for the hearing and decision of causes pending at the time of such assignment.

4. Four Justices shall be necessary to constitute a quorum on the final hearing of any cause in the Appeals Division, but the Supreme Court may provide by rule for the making of interlocutory orders by a lesser number of justices or by one justice; such orders to be subject to revision by the Appeals Division.

On the hearing of a cause in the Appeals Division, no Justice who has given a judicial opinion in the cause in favor of or against the judgment, order or decree under review shall sit at the hearing to review such judgment, order or decree, but the reasons for such opinion shall be assigned to the Court in writing.

5. A majority of all the members of the Supreme Court, to be presided over by the Chief Justice, shall constitute a quorum for the assignment of justices, and for the appointment of officers, and the enactment of rules.

6. The Supreme Court shall appoint one or more reporters, not exceeding three, to report the decisions of the Court, and shall by rule define his or their duties and powers. The reporters shall hold office for five years, subject, however, to removal at the discretion of the Court.

SECTION V.

1. The Appeals Division shall have and exercise the appellate jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Court of Errors and Appeals, the jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Supreme Court on writ of error, and the jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Prerogative Court on appeal, and by the Ordinary on appeal, and such further appellate jurisdiction as may be conferred upon it by law, together with such original jurisdiction as may be incident to the complete determination of any cause on review, saving, however, the right of trial by jury.

2. The jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Supreme Court and the Justices thereof not hereby conferred on the Appeals Division, and the jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Circuit Courts and the Judges thereof, and such further original jurisdiction not of an equitable nature, and such further appellate jurisdiction from inferior courts, as may be conferred by statute, shall be exercised by the Law Division of the Supreme Court and by the several justices thereof, in accordance with rules of practice and procedure prescribed by statute, or in the absence of statute, by the Supreme Court.

3. The jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Prerogative Court and the Ordinary, not hereby conferred on the Appeals Division, and the jurisdiction heretofore possessed by the Court of Chancery and the Chancellor, and such further original equity jurisdiction as may be conferred by statute, and such further original jurisdiction as is now conferrable on the Prerogative Court shall be exercised by the Chancery Division and by the Chancellor and the several justices of said Division in accordance with rules of practice and procedure prescribed by statute, or, in the absence of statute, by the Supreme Court, but the Justices of that Division shall be under such control and supervision by the Chancellor as shall be provided by the Supreme Court.

4. Terms of the Supreme Court presided over by a single Justice of the Law Division for the trial of issues joined in or brought to the Law Division of the Supreme Court shall be held in the several counties at times fixed by the Supreme Court. Until so fixed, such trial terms shall be held at the places and times now fixed by law for the holding of the Courts of Common Pleas in the several counties.

5. The Supreme Court may provide by rule for the transfer of any cause or issue from the Law Division to the Chancery Division, or from the Chancery Division to the Law Division of the Supreme Court, and from the County Court to the Law Division or the Chancery Division of the Supreme Court, and for the giving of complete legal and equitable relief in any cause in the Court or Division where it may be pending.

6. Nothing herein contained shall prevent the alteration, by law of any statutory power or jurisdiction conferred upon any Court or Judge since the adoption of the Constitution in the year one thousand eight hundred and forty-four, and nothing herein contained shall prevent the Legislature from conferring upon any inferior Court which may hereafter be established such power or jurisdiction as was exercised by or which may now be conferred upon the inferior Courts mentioned in Section 1 of Article VI, of the Constitution of 1844.

SECTION VI.

The County Courts shall have and exercise, in all causes within the county such original common law jurisdiction concurrent with the Supreme Court, and such other jurisdiction heretofore exercised by courts inferior to the Supreme Court and the Prerogative Court as may be provided by law. The final judgments of the County Courts may be brought for review before the Supreme Court in the Appeals Division. Until otherwise provided, the jurisdiction heretofore exercised by the Courts of Common Pleas, Orphans' Courts, Courts of Oyer and Terminer, Courts of Quarter Sessions, or by the Judges thereof, shall be exercised by the County Courts pursuant to rules prescribed by the Supreme Court. The justices of the Law Division of the Supreme Court shall be ex officio Judges of the County Courts. All other jurisdiction or authority now vested in any Court, Judge, or magistrate with jurisdiction inferior to the Courts in this section mentioned, and not superseded by this article, shall continue to be exercised by such Court, Judge or magistrate until the Legislature shall otherwise provide.

SECTION VII.

This amendment to the Contitution shall not cause the abatement of any suit or proceeding pending when it takes effect. The Supreme Court shall make such general and special rules and orders as may be necessary for the transfer of all suits and proceedings to the appropriate Division or Court created by this amendment. Matters pending when this amendment takes effect shall be decided by the judge or judges to whom they were submitted and the order, judgment or decree made or advised by said judge shall be entered as that of the Division or Court to which the suit or proceeding shall have been transferred.

Fifth—Strike out Paragraphs 1, 2, 5 and 8 of Section II of Article VII, and substitute the following paragraphs in place of Paragraphs 1 and 2, and change the figures of the paragraphs following to correspond:

1. The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, the President Justice of the Law Division, the Chancellor and the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court shall be nominated by the Governor and appointed by him, with the advice and consent of the Senate. They shall not be less than thirty-five years of age and shall have been practicing attorneys in the State for at least ten years. They shall hold office for the term of seven years; shall, at stated times, receive for their services a compensation which shall not be diminished during their term of office, and they shall hold no other office under the Government of the State, or of the United States, and shall not engage in the practice of law during their term of office. The Chancellor and the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, and the Vice Chancellors and Associate Justices of the Supreme Court, in office when this amendment takes effect, shall be Justices of the Supreme Court until the expiration of their respective terms.

The Circuit Court Judges in office when this amendment takes effect shall be continued in office with the powers of the Justices of the Supreme Court at the Circuit until the expiration of their respective terms. They may hold the County Courts, subject to assignment by the Law Division of the Supreme Court.

2. The Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall appoint one Judge of the County Court in each county, and such additional County Judge or Judges in any county as may be authorized by law. The County Judges may hold court in any county subject to the control of the Supreme Court. The County Judges shall not be less than thirty years of age, and shall have been practicing attorneys in this State for at least five years. They shall hold office for the term of five years; shall at stated times receive for their services such compensation, which shall not be diminished during their term of office, as the Legislature in its discretion shall fix for each county, and they shall hold no other office under the Government of the State or of the United States, and shall not engage in practice of the law in the courts of the county where they hold court during their term of office. The judges of the Common Pleas, in office when this amendment takes effect shall be the judges of the County Courts until the expiration of their present terms.

3. This amendment snall take effect on the first Monday in February, in the year next following its adoption by the people.

4. The Legislature shall pass all laws necessary to carry into effect the provisions of the constitution and this amendment thereof.

ASSEMBLY CONCURRENT RESOLUTION, NO. 9.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY.

Be It Resolved (the Senate concurring), That the following amendment to the constitution of this State be and the same is hereby proposed, and when the same shall be agreed to by a majority of the members elected to the Senate and House of Assembly the said amendment shall be entered on their journals, with the ayes and nayes taken thereon, and referred to the Legislature next to be chosen, and published for three months prior to the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November next, in at least one newspaper of each county, to be designated by the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Assembly and the Secretary of State:

Amend by striking out paragraph seven, section four, article four, and insert in place thereof the following:

7. Members of the Senate shall receive, annually, the sum of one thousand dollars, and members of the General Assembly shall receive, annually, the sum of ten hundred dollars during the time for which they shall have been elected and while they shall hold their office, and no other allowance or emolument, directly or indirectly, for any purpose whatever. The President of the Senate, and the Speaker of the General Assembly shall, in virtue of their offices, receive an additional compensation, equal to one-third of their allowance as members.

Judge Vail, of Elizabeth, has announced that he will be in Somerville on Monday morning, October 5, for the purpose of taking up the trial of Supreme and Circuit causes.

Mrs. Hooley's Funeral.

The funeral of Mrs. Lucy Hooley, mother of Abraham and Edward S. Hooley, was held yesterday afternoon at her late home on Sycamore avenue. The service was private and was conducted by Rev. J. Faulks, of Madison, Mrs. Hooley's pastor at one time, assisted by Rev. T. H. Landon, principal of the Bordentown Military Institute. Burial was at Hillside.

ROUTINE IN THE COUNCIL

$500 FOR A CITY MAP.

Borough Mayor Sends in a Communication—Monthly Reports are Received.

Mayor Samuel Townsend, of North Plainfield, in a communication, called the attention of the Common Council at its September meeting last night, to the questions of sewage disposal as proposed, and suggested that a conference be held soon. He also suggested that when the city officials find it convenient to confer they communicate with W. J. Buttfield, a member of the borough commission. The matter was referred to Mr. Mygatt, chairman of the special commission appointed by Mayor C. J. Fisk.

In accordance with a resolution by Mr. Buxton, fourteen $1,000 street improvement bonds were authorized to pay for the work of macadamizing certain streets named in a recently-adopted ordinance, and the bid of the City National Bank of par and interest was accepted. The bonds are about the same as notes and cover the street improvements which have been completed.

Resolutions offered by Mr Buxton and adopted, authorized the borrowing of $2,000 on account of sewer improvements; $5,000 on account of street work and $2,000 on account of the sewer maintenance fund.

The New Jersey Central Railroad, through its real estate and tax agent, H. W. Doty, asked the Common Council to apportion the tax assessment on property at 301-307 Park avenue and 632-650 North avenue, owned by the company and which has been assessed twice. The Park avenue property was assessed at $7,500 and the North avenue at $2,000 and the company asked that these figures be continued. The matter was referred to the finance committee.

The Council received the annual invitation to send delegates to the convention of the League of American Municipalities to be held at Omaha, and it was filed. Upon motion of Mr. Gloak, the petition of the Mutuad Land Improvement Company, through its attorney, asking for certain data from City Engineer A. J. Gavett in the matter of constructing a sewer through Leland Park, was granted.

The question of locating electric lights on Cameron and Lenox avenues and other adjoining new streets was brought to the attention of the members by F. J. Hubbard, who previously petitioned for the lights. Mr. Montgomery's reply was that some of the streets have not been accepted by the city.

City Engineer Gavett informed the members that the city tax maps were in a dilapidated condition and need attention if they are to be preserved The matter was referred to the street committee, and Mr. Gloak, chairman, offered a resolution, which was adopted, authorizing the expenditure of a sum not to exceed $500 to prepare new assessment maps for 1909.

The petition of Daniel F. Dugan for a light on East Sixth street, between Central and Berkman streets, was granted on motion of Mr. Montgomery. A light was also ordered placed on McDowell street, between Third and Fourth streets.

Building Inspector T. O. Doane reported the granting of thirteen building permits last month and City Engineer Gavett reported that forty sewer permits were granted during the same period, making a total of 166 for the year.

The report of Clerk Horace G. Adams, of the district court, showed the receipts for the month to be $89.24 and the disbursements, $24.24.

In returning the petition of the J. D. Loizeaux Lumber Company for six lights in the West End of the city, Mr. Montgomery said that he would like to grant the entire number, but after conferring with the committee it was decided to recommend three lights, one at View and Willever streets, one at View and West Third streets and one at Frace and West Third streets. These three were granted.

A petition from Nathan Myers was referred back by Mr. Buxton, and permission was given him to remove a frame house from 132 East Second street to 346 Third street, provided he agrees t indemnify the city against any damage that might result from the work.

SOME ODDITIES OF THE PRESENT FASHIONS.

Large jet hatpins are very much worn of either round or egg-shape, the latter the size of a pigeon's egg, and the former that of a golf ball.

Venetian bead necklaces are having a great vogue, the delicate colors and combinations serving to enhance any costume to which they are allied. Smaller beads, worked after the old-world style into chains and necklaces, are also in great request.

Hand-painted chicken-skin fans are prime favorites of the moment, designed on Louis Seize lines, while a Pompadour model, almost round in shape, is accounted of the utmost elegance. The hand paintings usually depict some dainty Watteau design.

The cult of color may be termed one of the leading modistic features of the moment. We not only go back to past ages in search of subdued artistic tints, but contrive to combine these in clever ingenious fashion to modern expressions of shades, variously called old blue, vieux rose, empire green and buff brown. These, in reality, although bearing strong resemblance to their ancestors, are quite latter-day products.

One cannot help but wonder whether the fascination that inevitably lingers around antique productions rests on real intrinsic value or whether romantic sentiment has no a large word to say in its favor. Personally, I rather incline to the side of the more genuine worth of old world workmanship; more individual interest was put into it, and where one piece was then turned out thousands are now required.

Modern lace, however beautiful, naturally lacks the soft, subduing influence of age; but whether this will ever come to these latter-day dentelles is a fact only to be proved by future generations. An expert in the cause has grave doubts, her argument being that the flax now employed lacks the superfine quality of yore, while some needles found concealed and forgotten in an old needlepoint lace outfit, revealed in finitesimal proportions quite unprocurable today.

Some old Venetian tape-lace, also, was shown us, worked, we were told, in a damp cellar, the humid atmosphere being necessary to keep the thread in the requisite limp condition. Such a state of things would not be permissible in these days, with hygiene officials stalking in our midst, and, as most will agree, a very good thing, too.

KEEP THE WAISTLINE ABSOLUTELY NEAT.

Though the up-to-date girl has given over the greater part of her day to frills and furbelows, she is more strictly tailored than ever in the hours she devotes to that peculiarly American costume, the shirtwaist suit.

And a trim, becoming costume it is; that is, when it is trim. But sloppiness is fatal. Let there be a badly adjusted collar, cuffs that are broken or not immaculate, the wrong kind of a tie, above all, a gaping waist line, and the style that often gives the shirwaist girl more of an air than the same girl in a ballroom, is lost.

Most unpardonable is the waist line that is not taut. here is no necessity for it. Ordinary care effectually prevents the blouse and skirt slipping connection.

There are numerous patent arrangemeents for keeping skirt and waist together; there is also the unfailing one of hooks and eyes.

After the initial bother of seeing that every skirt in one's wardrobe is supplied with a good-sized hook, an inch on each side of the middle of the back, with eyes to correspond on the blouse, all future trouble is avoided.

If the hips are large and apt to push the belt up, it is welf to add another hook and eye at each of the under-arm seams. This prevents all possibility of slipping.

For the girl who hates to sew there is a rather new invention that gives the hook and eye effect without needle and thread. Sets of safety pins with hook and loop can now be bought for keeping skirts from slipping.

The pins with the loop are fastened through the waists with the loop down. The other two have a pointed hook. These are adjusted on the inside of the skirt band oppsite the looped safety pins, into which they slip.

That is all there is to it! So simple an arrangement that a sloppy waist line is inexcusable.

SUPERSTITIOUS.

With me no signs or omens count,
I have no superstitious fears.
"Thirteen at table" brings no dread,
If only food enough appears,
Would not fear to spill the salt,
Or walk beneath a ladder's scope,
I put no trust in clairvoyants,
Or what the racing men call dope

I do not stoop to pick up pins,
I'm very sure 'twould do no good.
I often make a vapid boast,
And then neglect to knock on wood
Such signs and omens cut no ice
With me, I tell you here and now—
But when Myrtilla stamps her foot,
I'm sure there's going to be a row!

OVERTAXED.

Hundreds of Plainfield Readers Know What It Means.

The kidneys are overtaxed;

Have too much to do.

They tell about it in many aches and pains—

Backache, sideache, headache,

Early symptoms of kidney ills.

Diabetes, Bright's disease follow.

A Plainfield citizen tell here a certain cure.

J. H. Stewart, 313 Arlington avenue, Plainfield N. J., says: "An acute pain in the region of my kidneys was a prominent feature of my kidney trouble. My back also ached and I had cold sweats. I finally became so bad that I had to stop work, but even then I did not improve. I at length commenced taking Doan's Kidney Pills and three boxes stopped my aches and pains and restored my kidneys to a healthy condition. That was in 1905 and up to this time no attack of the trouble has ever reappeared. In return for the benefit I derived from Doan's Kidney Pills, I am glad to endorse them."

BORDERED MATERIALS DESERVEDLY POPULAR.

The bordered materials have been most alluring this season, and it has been by great strength of will that we have passed the counter where they are displayed. The greatest reason for such laudable renunciation is that we were not quite certain how to handle the goods. Of course it was an experiment to manufacture these bordered materials, for how can a mere man anticipate what a woman is going to like; but he made a good guess this time, for the bordered materials have offered much attraction.

These materials have inspired pattern makers and they have exercised their best efforts to suggest ways and means of making up this pretty stuff. The results have been agreeable and a pretty little dress, pictured today, is one of their achievements.

There are but two ways of making a skirt of bordered material, says Anna Lent. The first and most usual method is to use the width of the material for the length of the skirt, while the border forms a crosswise trimming. The flat material is laid in plaits to adjust it to the waistline. These plaits must be stitched flat at least hip-length; from that line the flaring plaits form sufficient fullness at the footline. This has a very clumsy sound, but, after the stitching is neatly done, all superflous material is cut away from the under side and the effect is very much like that of a gored skirt so cut as to ripple at the lower edge.

The other way to handle bordered material in a skirt is to use the material lengthwise, the bordered edge lapping in plaitlike effect over the edge of the preceding gore. This is a little more difficult to handle, but it is adopted by women too stout to wear cross trimming.

Waists may be sometimes cut of the bordered material so as to include the design, but more frequently the border is cut off and used a band trimming.

OF CASUAL CONCERN.

A story, told by the late Ira D. Sankey on himself, has been revived since the evangelist's death. One day he entered a Swiss shop and asked to see some music boxes. The salesman graciously showed him a number, but none was what he wanted. "Have you none that play sacred music?" he asked. "Why," answered the salesman, "we have some that play a kind of a half-way sacred music." "What?" inquired Mr. Sankey. "Oh these Moody and Sankey hymns; I can't imagine what the people see in them, but we sell thousands of the boxes that play them. We have enormous orders for these boxes," continued the salesman, "from every part of Europe," and then he added, apologetically, "It's a metter of business, you know, with us."

Of the swans on the upper Thames the London Times says: "T. Abnett, of East Molesey, the King's swan master, on Saturday completed the marking of the young swans on the Thames between Southwark bridge and Henley. There are between 500 and 600 swans on the Thames and in the course of the swan marking about 200 cygnets were discovered, each of which had a mark placed on its back to denote ownership. Those belonging to the King, who owns about a third of the swans on the Thames, have a diamond-shaped mark scratched on the upper beak with a knife. Those belonging to the Vintners and the Dyers companies, who own the other two-thirds, have been respectively marked. In November a number of these cygnets will be fattened for the King's table at Christmas."

A short line between Clark's Summit and New Milford, Pa., which will eliminate the curves and grades between the two places, costing about $7,000,000, is the latest improvement by the Lackawanna Railroad. This line will be a four-track line, and will be one of the largest improvements planned by the road. Tunnels, one perhaps two miles long will be made under mountains. Bridges or viaducts over the entire breadth of valleys will be constructed. In fact, the work of construction will go on as if mountains and valleys were unheard of things.

How Are Her Teeth?

Young man, before you marry, take particular notice of the teeth of your intended wife. Aunt Peggy tells me just now that the organs of mastication are certain indicators of a wife's inclination to roam or not to roam. "If you want a home body," says the aged high priestess, "marry a girl whose teeth grow close together. If the teeth are distinctly separated, your wife will go gadding about all the time. She may love her home, but she won't stay there. She will want to be traveling. The greater the distance between her teeth the greater her inclination to wander abroad."

She Was There.

"Miss Kitty, I've ehard it said that a kiss without a mustache is like an egg without salt. Is that so?" asked the young man, who was desperately smitten.

"Well, really," answered Kitty, "I don't know—I can't tell—for in all my life I never—"

"Now, now, Miss Kitty."

"Never ate an egg without salt," continued Kitty.—San Francisco Bulletin.

WRITTEN IN RED

By

CHAS. HOWARD MONTAGUE AND C. W. DYAR

(Copyright, by The Cassell Publishing Co.)

"I mean that I know all about it, Thomas. I know that Kingman F. Thomas, who has done in his day as excellent detective work as anybody in the state, has at last fallen into the snare of the siren, and forgotten his duty. In other words, he is in love with one of the principals. Instead of arresting her he guards her. While the police are searching everywhere for her, he has her secretly hidden in his own house, right under their very noses, and comes to his best friend with a coolness that might (if he were a little less wary) have ruined his work on the case."

"John, you presume on your friendship," said Thomas, hotly. He had been nervously fingering his watch charm, and alternating between white and red, throughout Lamm's quiet speech but he now started up and faced the detective squarely. "You have no right to assume that there is any sentiment in the matter. You go too far when you charge me with letting my personal feelings run away with my sense of duty. You don't know what my object was—is."

"Ah, but pardon me, Kingman; I assume that I do. If it had been in the ordinary course of your professional business, you would have come to me with it for advice or assistance, just as you have always done when we have associated ourselves on a case before. There is only one reason why you didn't come; you were more than afraid that I would never approve of so rash a proceeding on your part, and you were resolved upon taking the step at all hazards. In other words, Kingman, you were a little ashamed."

Thomas had regained control of himself. He drew himself up.

"See here, John Lamm, we will leave my motives out of the question, if you please. I have protected the girl. I propose to continue to do so. She was in a hard place—a harder one than you know anything about. I should have been less than a man if I had neglected to do what I did. To have given her up under the circumstances would have been the height of cruelty. You wouldn't have done it yourself. Every bit of circumstantial evidence was overwhelmingly against her. I determined to conceal her till I could discover at least proofs of her innocence sufficient to prevent her from the ignominy of an arrest. Since you have discovered the fact there is no help for it. You must aid me to keep the secret."

"Only upon one condition, Kingman. I must know all the facts."

"And, if I tell you everything, will you give me your word of honor not to use it against her or hers?" asked Thomas, with peculiar emphasis on the second pronoun.

"But isn't that rather broad?" Lamm hesitated.

Thomas compressed his lips tightly. "This girl has confessed everything to me, Lamm; and in return I have given her my word to do everything in my power to protect her family from disgrace. There's no way out of it. You must promise me."

"What do you mean?" demanded Lamm, sternly. "Do you mean if I find that the murderer of Paul North is in her family I am to keep it to myself?"

"Decidedly not," said Thomas. "But you must have proof, not appearances."

"Oh, certainly," said Lamm. "I agree to that. Hang the appearances in a case. They are seldom right. I use appearances only to enable me to get at the facts. But once I get at the facts, Thomas, understand me, it will make no difference whose family it is in."

"Very well," said Thomas, "we understand each other. Give me your hand on it."

The two men shook hands over the compact and sat down close together beside the detective's desk.

"In the first place," began Thomas, "it was Stella North who threw the pistol into the water at Swampscott on Sunday night and then fled from her home."

"I had guessed as much when I learned that North's shooter had been found."

"At that time I hadn't the faintest idea who the fugitive was, and when I recognized her on the Connecticut roadside I was nearly as much astonished as she was frightened. The first thing I thought was that she must be guilty. All her actions—the headlong, precipitate flight; her terror at my appearance—all seemed to wear the look of criminality. She had fainted dead away, but she soon began to come to herself again. Thereupon I tied my horse to a tree, and drew her into the woods, out of sight of passers. She was so weak and emotional I believed her ripe for a confession. Lamm, I fully expected at that moment to be rewarded for my efforts by a tremendous discovery. But I tell you, as I looked at the poor thing—hardly a woman yet—lying there on the leaves, pale, speechless, frightened nearly out of her senses, I never felt so sorry for anybody in my life."

"I know the feeling," said Lamm "I've had it myself. But go on."

"Well, when she came to I began to talk to her. Of course there was a scene. She broke down completely, and at her first words I understood what I ought to have had sense enough to have known from the first—that her terror was not on her own account. 'Oh, don't let them arrest her!' she kept saying. 'Don't, I beg of you! She's crazy! She must be! She never could have done it in her senses!'"

"Oh, ho!" exclaimed the detective. "Sister Marion, eh?"

"'Come,' I said, 'tell me the whole story; it's the quickest way out of it. And I give you my word of honor I'll do what I can to help you.' But it was a long time before I was able to bring her to the point of trusting me. I don't know how it was, exactly, but she gradually—"

"Pshaw!" said Lamm. "Don't embarrass yourself. Skip it. I know what happened as well as you do. She was in deep distress. You were in earnest. She trusted you. Good. What was her story?"

"She didn't tell me the whole story at that time," said Thomas. "I stopped her when I knew the essential facts, for I realized her danger and incidentally my own. I impressed upon her the necessity of obeying me implicitly. I told her there was but one way to save either herself or her sister, or both of them, from the ignominy of immediate arrest and all the attendant scandal. Frightened to death, almost, and shaking like a leaf, she acquiesced. I stowed her as comfortably as I could in the bottom of the carriage, and covered her with a rug. Overcome with exhaustion, she, I believe, actually slept all the way to Vernon. Outside the town I awoke her, made her get out, and told her to follow me at a distance, and to board the train that I took, but by no means to speak to me. She was veiled, and had enough money to purchase her ticket."

"Capital! You are a shrewd one, Kingman. These precautions would never have occurred to another man."

"Ah! I knew, you see, that the whole police force must be on her track by this time. As soon as she was missed from Swampscott, I knew they would be in full chase, and she, in her innocence, had left a trail as plain as the milky way."

"Of course," said Detective Lamm, significantly.

"And so," Thomas continued, "I laid my plans accordingly. We rode to Boston separately, and she followed me on foot on the other side of the street to my house. She was whiter than death when she came in; but if you know my mother you can imagine the reception she got. Five minutes' explanation to my mother was sufficient. She opened her arms to the fugitive, and Stella North has been under her charge ever since."

"Ah! and you, of course, got the whole story from the girl?"

"That night. There is no question about her frankness or her honesty. If you could talk with her ten minutes you would be assured of that."

"Undoubtedly. And now for the facts. What are they?"

"Well, Lamm," said Thomas, "there are two sets of facts—the immediate and the remote. Whether the remote have any relation to the immediate I cannot tell. Nevertheless, you shall hear them first. To go back to Richard Fetridge—"

"Of course," said Lamm. "Everything in the case seems to have a peculiar trick of going back to him."

"Still, I am unable to say that he has any connection with this murder, Lamm. It's a mystery, old man, as you will soon see. Stella merely corroborated the facts that I have told you already about Fetridge's connection with the family. It was just as I said; he was in love with Marion, but how far they went, whether they were actually engaged or not, nobody knows; not even Stella, for the fact comes out that Marion is a very peculiar woman."

"Peculiar? Do you mean eccentric?"

"Well, eccentric, perhaps," said Thomas, doubtfully. "What I mean is that she is exceedingly self-willed and self-reliant; that she is naturally secretive, dislikes to make confidants, repels intercourse on topics near to her, dislikes to be sympathized with, and is extremely sensitive about little things that ordinary people would pass unobserved. Exaggerate all these qualities to an unusual degree, and you have the traits that make Marion Stackhouse peculiar. If you call such a character eccentric, she's eccentric. If you mean, however, the eccentricity that is allied to monomania or insanity, I fail to find that she has ever exhibited any traces of it. I questioned Stella very particularly on this point—as to whether her sister was in the habit of taking queer freaks. She says it might seem so to anybody who was not familiar with her peculiar temperament, but she never knew her to do anything without the possibility of a reason therefor."

"Just my idea of her exactly," said Lamm. "Anybody who has ever looked into the restless eye of a maniac knows what it is. I have talked with Marion Stackhouse face to face. She is no more insane than I am."

"I say this," continued Thomas, "to explain why it was that nobody knew whether Marion was really engaged to Fetridge. On account of the opposition of Mr. North, it would have been a secret, anyway, to some extent, but Stella never knew. She only knows that they were together a great deal, till one night they presumably quarreled, for his visits ceased abruptly. And the next thing Stella knew, the engagement to Stackhouse was announced."

"Wasn't this a marriage from pique, then, such as we occasionally hear of?"

"So I fancy, Lamm. Stella will not express her opinion to that effect, but I can see that she thinks so. Well, now, as to Fetridge coming back into the family again since his return from Australia, it was just as we surmised, ostensibly to pay Stella some attentions; but the girl declares that he never spoke of love to her, though he had plenty of opportunity."

"Which indicates," said Lamm, quietly, "that Fetridge still came to see Marion, despite her marriage to Stackhouse."

"So it would seem; and that she regretted her hasty step in marrying too soon. Well, but this is only speculation. To go on with the facts: Fetridge's attentions to Stella were thoughtlessly received—the girl insists she has no other feeling for him than that of a pleasant acquaintance—but after his departure on his recent business trip, the purpose of which we can't determine, it came to her ears that there was a great deal of gossip about their association. She determined to be more careful in the future. The day before the murder, Fetridge reappeared at the house. It would seem that the instant he got home he came to the North household. He began to lay out plans at once to go hither and yon with the girl. But the poor thing's suspicions were aroused by her long month of reflection. She determined not to be made a catspaw of for any purpose, and at the first opportunity—having summoned up the necessary courage—she broached the tabooed subject to her sister."

"What time of day was this?"

"It seems to have been about the middle of the afternoon. Marion was not feeling very well. She was lying down, and Stella was sitting beside her with a fan. Marion introduced Fetridge's name herself, making some inquiries about his visit of the previous evening. Then Stella made so bold as to ask her advice, and finally told what her suspicions were."

"But you don't mean—"

"Simply that Fetridge pretended to pay attentions to her (Stella) for the sake of appearances, and that his real object was to be near Marion."

"Whew! Knowing the woman, I can imagine the result."

"Easily. But Stella was innocent enough. She merely intended to give her sister a well-meant warning. Marion received it as an insult. 'It is a jealous lie,' she cries into the ears of the astonished Stella. 'Richard Fetridge never meant to marry me; never cared a feather for me. If you had asked me I could have told you so. But since you thought it better to play the spy on me, why, I'll prove it to you.' And with a great emphasis on the word prove, she dashed out of the room."

"This woman is curious. No doubt about it. But her conscience troubles her, and she's jealous of Fetridge. There's no other explanation of this line of conduct."

"Ah, well," said Thomas, doubtfully, "if Marion had married Stackhouse purely from pique, and had been carrying on the hollow mockery for a whole year, because she was too proud to betray what she suffered to any living soul, it seems that there might be enough inflammable material in her emotional nature to get up a good blaze at the first spark. Don't you think so?"

"Quite likely. It's logically put, anyhow. But about these proofs that Fetridge didn't care for her. I am anxious to know the nature of them."

"So am I; but unfortunately they disappear from my story with this reference to them. Stella naturally supposed Marion went upstairs to get something. Imagine her surprise, five minutes later, to see her driving off in a carriage. In a short time the coachman came back. Mrs. Stackhouse, he said, had gone to Boston. Stella began to be exceedingly alarmed. What in the world could have occasioned this sudden freak she could not imagine. That her sister was terribly angry she saw, and the insane idea that perhaps she intended to tell Richard Fetridge what had been said drove the poor girl quite distracted. She followed Marion to the city in the next train, and searched everywhere for her. It was after six when she arrived, and all the places of business were closed. This circumstance only increased the girl's alarm. She began to have what she calls a presentiment of evil. There were three places in town where she thought her sister might be—the houses of three friends. One of them was a way out in Roxbury. She made the rounds, exciting everywhere wonder and concern; but she abruptly refused all offers of escort. It was getting later and later all the time. Already it was dark, and the street lights were burning. Suddenly she remembered that Marion had the keys to the house in Marlboro street. There was a bare possibility that she had gone there in quest of the proofs she had so mysteriously mentioned. Stella set herself in that direction. It must have been about half-past nine o'clock when she approached the place, and saw—what do you think? Marion Stackhouse coming down the steps!"

"GOOD HEAVENS!" HE CRIED, "AND ALL THIS TIME YOU HAVE BEEN CONCEALING THIS FROM ME."

The imperturbable John Lamm for once lost his professional sang froid. He sprang to his feet and brought his hand down with a crash upon the top of his desk.

"Good heavens!" he cried. "And all this time you have been concealing this from me!"

Pretty Chamber Furnishings.

Now that applique is so fashionable, a pretty style for curtains, bureau scarfs, etc., can be made, inexpensively, by sewing on linen, crash or net the medallions cut from an old flowered lawn dress. For the bureau make candlestick shade to match, mounted on buckram and bound with ribbon to harmonize.

TABASCO LIMERICK.

A soubrette who worked for Papasco
One day kicked up quite a fiasco,
As the hair on her head
Turned from yellow to red

The last word of the last line must rhyme with the last words of the first two lines.

All that is necessary is to send us what you think is the best last line to our Tabasco Limerick with your name and address. Contest closes May 1, 1909, and prizes announced May 15, 1909. Get busy now; tell your friends. Here's a great chance to win an income free.

Remember, this contest is open, free to everybody. Someone must win the above prizes. Why not you?

WHAT IS TABASCO?

For forty years it has been used by cooks everywhere. Every first-class hotel, steamship, restaurant and dining car uses it in the kitchen and upon the table. Tabasco is great for soups, roasts, fish, fowl, game, seafood, for eggs of any style, for the outdoor luncheon or the afternoon salad. Use it in your kitchen all the time.

What makes excellent the cooking of the chef will make delicious the food of the home. Get the Tabasco habit in your kitchen, on your table. One drop works wonders. Buy from your grocer today. He has it; every grocer has it. Ask his opinion.

This contest is open to everybody free. Send in your Limericks in your own way and as often as you please. The fund to pay these prizes is now on deposit with Geo. W. Young & Co., Bankers, New York City.

BASEBALL.

A member of the Highland A. C. in writing to The Daily Press regarding the game of ball played between this team and Berkeley Heights at the latter place on Saturday afternoon, says that the Plainfielders were subjected to contemptible treatment. He says that in the eighth inning the score stood 7 to 4 in favor of the Plainfield club and in their half of the inning, a Berkeley Heights' baserunner was called out at the plate and the home team refused to continue the game unless the decision was reversed. The umpire refused, and after giving the club ten minutes to resume play, forfeited the game to the Highland A. C. The Plainfield team declares that the Berkeley management showed a fine spirit of meanness by refusing the Highlands the use of the stage which brought them to Berkeley Heights, trying to force them to walk four miles to Scotch Plains for a trolley car. However, when their umpire, Mr. Rogers, learned of this, he offered the Plainfielders the use of his stage to Union Village, where he acted as host at a luncheon. From there the team walked through the Notch to the Somerset street trolley.

Y. M. C. A. TEAM LEADS STILL IN LOCAL CONTESTS.

The Y. M. C. A. team still holds the lead among the local baseball clubs with fifteen wins, four defeats and a percentage of .789, with St. Mary's team second with a percentage of .768. The Plainfield A. C. is in third place with a percentage of .704, while Clinton Avenue is next with .684. The standing of the teams to date is as follows:

	Won.	Lost.	Pc.
Y. M. C. A.	15	4	.789
St. Mary's	10	3	.768
Plainfield A. C.	19	8	.704

Miss Mabel Vail, of East Fifth street, has returned home after a seven weeks' vacation spent at Niagara Falls, Buffalo, Canada and vicinity.

Miss Blanche Moore, of Norfolk, Va., has returned home after spending several weeks at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Clark, of Stebbins place.

Mrs. Charles W. Foster and family, of East Seventh street, who have been spending the summer at Tolland, Mass., and Chatham, N. Y., will return home tomorrow.

Mr. and Mrs. John Cottrell and children, of Central avenue, who have been spending the summer at Tolland, Mass., where they have built a cottage, have returned home.

Miss Ruth Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Thompson, of West Third street, a graduate of P. H. S., class '06 and Massachusetts State Normal School, class '08, left Saturday to assume charge of a seventh grade class at the North Attleboro, Mass., public school.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Prepartory services will be held at Hope chapel tomorrow night and the Lord's Supper will be observed Sunday night.

Preparatory services will be held at the Congregational church tonight and the communion service will be held Sunday morning.

HUDSON, PA., MAN WEDS MISS SADIE MENSCH.

In the presence of a small gathering of relatives and friends, Miss Sadie Mensch, of this city, and Matthew Gray, of Hudson, Pa., were married last night at the home of the bride's cousin, Mrs. A. E. Willard, of West Front street. The ceremony was performed at 8 o'clock by Rev. C. S. Kemble, pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church. The parlor and dining room were tastefully decorated for the occasion.

Miss Mensch was gowned in white broadcloth and carried bride roses. There were no attendants. The wedding march was rendered with vocal accompaniment by Mrs. Edward McCrea, of Grove street. Following the ceremony, the bride and groom received congratulations and supper was served. Mr. and Mrs. Gray left this afternoon for Hudson where they will make their home.

The guests in attendance included Miss Kate Scully, of New York; Mrs. M. Howell and son, Master Matthew Howell, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa.; Mrs. William Heil, of Phillipsburg; Mr. and Mrs. William Sharp and Miss Grace Huling, of Plainfield.

A West End Runaway.

A horse belonging to the Potter Press company, ran away on South Second street, yesterday afternoon at 5:30. The driver, Martin Reagan, was thrown from the vehicle and received a cut on the face. The horse was captured before any especial damage was occasioned.

"Bob" Davis Outing Today.

The annual outing of the Robert Davis Association, the largest Democratic club in Hudson county and probably the largest political club in New Jersey, is being held today at Witzel's Grove, College Point. James E. Martine is among the party.

CODINGTON AVE. BRIDGE WILL BE EXTENDED

At the September meeting of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders, yesterday, a committee comprising Messrs. Andrew Lutkins, William M. Demler and Peter H. Smith was appointed to investigate the claims of John C. Cooper for the work of extending the bridge on Codington avenue to North Plainfield.

The board decided to meet State Road Commissioner Gilkyson at the Millington church, Monday morning at 11 o'clock, and investigate for acceptance the Millington road. The communication from W. R. Codington in reference to the Watchung road was filed. The Board of Commissioners of Somerville made application for permission to place a storm sewer pipe over the west wingwalls of the Keyes bridge at Somerville, and it was granted.

Charles Howell Cook in a communication urged the building of the road from the Reading Railroad at Belle Mead toward Skillman and also the Belle Mead road. Col. Nelson Y. Dungan and others appeared before the board speaking in the interest of the improvement. The communication was filed.

After a lengthy discussion the board decided to substitute copper for tin as a covering for the dome of the new court house, the difference in price being $256.

POLITICAL NOTES.

For membership on the Democratic County Committee in Somerset, these North Plainfielders have filed the necessary petitions: Robert Trewin, First district; George Kirch, Second district; Walter C. Linbarger, Third district.

State Senator E. R. Ackerman, who has been spending the summer season abroad following his annual custom, is expected home on Sept. 20.

"Uncle Dan" Voorhees was "in our midst' last night. "He walked right in, turned around and walked right out again."

To be perfectly fair, where is there a man on the Board of Education who would be as valuable on its buildings and grounds committee as former Mayor James F. Buckle, a Republican candidate for nomination for that body? Mr. Buckle is a practical man and has a wide knowledge concerning such matters.

"Farmer Jim" Martine, the victim of fifty seven varities of political defeat, is spending the day with the Robert Davis Association on their annual outing.

There appears to be little opposition to the renomination of Councilman Frank deW. Randolph in the Fourth ward.

Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert dined with Congressman Fowler at the latter's Elizabeth home on Thursday night.

The friends of County Chairman Frank H. Smith are glad to hear that his stay in the Adirondack district is improving his health. Mr. Smith, heeding the advice of his physician, is paying not attention to political matters at present but those in a position to know say he will be in his saddle for a vigorous campaign after the party decides upon its candidates.

The New Idea faction in Hudson will have eleven candidates to vote for the nomination for members of Assembly.

Superintendent Rufus Blodgett and Passenger Agent McFadden of the New York and Long Branch Railroad are to be the opposing candidates for Mayor of Long Branch. Ex-Senator Blodgett is ex-Mayor and McFadden is the present Mayor and the Republican candidate. The opponents have offices in the same building and interests in common.

More than one thousand members and friends of the Valatese Italian Society, of Elizabeth, attended the annual celebration held in that city Monday night, and Captain Robert Kirkland, who was a guest of honor, was given a reception that appeared to assure him that he would receive a majority of the votes of the Elizabeth Italians. He was repeatedly heralded as the coming sheriff and was loudly praised by the vast assemblage.

Defense Opens in Murder Trial.

The trial of Dominick Mangano, the Elizabethport Italian, charged with murder, was resumed in the county court, this morning. The session was devoted to the defense, the accused man maintaining that he was at home in bed at the time he is alleged to have killed Dominick Cervasi. Prosecutor C. Addison Swift is conducting the State's case and he is being assisted by Assistant Prosecutor Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., of this city. The trial will be concluded late today or early tomorrow morning.

New Railroad Company Incorporates.

The North Jersey Rapid Transit Company filed articles of incorporation at Trenton yesterday. The company is captalized at $1,000,000, and is proposes to build a line from Paterson, N. J., to Suffern, N. Y.

Montclair Horse Show Plans.

There will be twenty-three separate events at the Montclair horse show, which will be held at Montclair on October 10. Entries for the event, which will be under the auspices of the Montclair Riding, Driving and Automobile Club, are rapidly coming in to the secretary, L. L. Chinn. Among the new classes at the show this year will be polo ponies, hack horses, dealers' horses and hunters and jumpers. Cups have been donated for prizes by Emerson Brooks, W. T. Evans, Dr. Phineas Bridge, Dr. T. Earle Budd, J. M. Greenfield, Walter F. Keenan, Andrew Morrison, Rolin M. Morgan, V. S. Mulford, Dr. James McDonough, E. A. Starks and F. M. Ware. The show will commence at 10 o'clock and last until sundown. It will be held in the park of the Montclair Athletic Club, on Valley Road.

Jr. O. U. A. M. in Session.

The National Council of the Order of United American Mechanics met yesterday at Atlantic City, with delegates in attendance representing about twenty States. They were formally welcomed to the shore by Mayor F. O. Stoy, who tendered them the freedom of the city. Representative L. E. Jacobs, of Connecticut, made the response.

Schools Reopen.

The Scotch Plains public schools were reopened for the fall and winter session yesterday. Rev. Mr. Mathews, pastor of the Baptist church, made a short address. The enrollment is about the same as last year. The Dunellen and New Market schools also reopened yesterday. The city and borough schools open next Tuesday.

S.S. WORKERS' GATHERING

PROGRAM OF THE ADDRESSES.

Three Sessions Being Held—Divines Take a Prominent Part —The Program in Detail.

The annual convention of the Sunday school workers of Middlesex county is being held at New Market today. There are three sessions, the first beginning at 10 o'clock this morning, the second at 2 o'clock this afternoon, and the evening session, at 7:30 o'clock. Women of the New Market churches will provide dinner and supper for all visitors.

For the morning session the program was:

Devotional service, led by Rev. W. W. Casselberry, of Dunellen; address, "The Problems and Opportunities of the Home Department," Rev. Henry Jordan, New Market; address, "Two Ways of Reaching the Child," Miss Angie Wray, New Brunswick; reports of the year's work, county officers; address, "Teaching Material," Miss Rose Scott, Newark; greeting, Rev. George Gardner, of New Market.

At the afternoon session the speakers and subjects are: Devotional service, led by Rev. F. T. Reynolds, of Spotswood; round table, "Helps and Difficulties," led by Rev. W. T. Dorward, Stelton; address, "An Impression of the Louisville Convention," E. W. Barnes, Perth Amboy; annual address, "The Debt of the School to the Older Scholars," Rev. Milton S. Littlefield, of Brooklyn; address, "Fifty Years of Progress," Rev. Morris Ferguson, Newark; address, "The New Graded Lessons," Mrs. J. Woodbridge Barnes, of Newark.

The address at the evening session will be delivered by Rev. W. H. S. Demarest, president of Rutgers College, on the subject "Home and the Sunday School." Miss Lillian Walker will render a solo. The chorister at the convention will be Harry Relyea of New Brunswick. G. A. Rolfe, county president, will preside over all sessions of the convention.

COLORED MAN FINDS HIS ROOM-MATE DEAD IN BED.

Returning to his boarding place at 535 West Third street at an early hour this morning, Henry Wilkes, colored, found his room-mate, William Cheshire, dead in bed. The discovery was not made until after he had disrobed and was ready to retire.

Wilkes notified the police and Dr. Lufburrow was summoned. He declared that Cheshire had died from acute indigestion and that life had been extinct several hours. The body was removed to Cole's undertaking rooms.

Cheshire was about forty years old and had lived in the West End for a long time. He was unmarried. So far as known he had no local relatives but it is said there are several living in the South.

Tommy Ellis is Dead.

Tommy Ellis, the two-and-a-half year old son of Thomas Ellis, of Jersey City, died at Muhlenberg Hospital, last night, following a long illness with a contagious disease. He was admitted to the isolation ward in June last and being a particularly bright boy quickly became a great pet and favorite among the nurses, who had charge of him. Everyone made a great deal of him and he thoroughly appreciated all that was done for him, despite his tender years. The little fellow's father has been notified and he will probably take the remains to Jersey City today for burial. It was through the influence of friends that the boy was admitted to the hospital.

Funeral of Mrs. Van Horn.

The funeral service of Mrs. Margaret Van Horn, wife of William Van Horn, who died at her home in Warren street, Newark, Tuesday, will be held from the late residence tomorrow morning at 11:30 o'clock and the burial will be in Hillside cemetery at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, where a short service will be held. Carriages will meet the 2:03 train at the North Avenue station.

Miss Eva Campbell Resigns.

Miss Eva Campbell, who has been the assistant superintendent at Muhlenberg Hospital since Miss Josephine Hughes, the superintendent, took charge, has severed her connection with the institution and returned to her home in Canada. Her position has not been permanently filled, a temporary arrangement having been made while Miss Hughes takes her annual vacation.

NOMINATION PAPERS FILED IN DUNELLEN

George Huff and Charles Berkheiser, Republican members of the Dunellen Council, have filed their petitions for a re-nomination for three-year terms and the third nominee will be named at the primaries. Dr. P. W. Brakeley, also Republican, has filed his petition for the nomination of Justice of the Peace.

The Democrats are preparing to make a fight for the Councilmanic nominations and those already mentioned as possibilities are Herbert B. Wyckoff, G. Sumner Smith, John Van Middlesworth and Theodore Apgar. Mr. Apgar and Mr. Van Middlesworth are at present members of the Council and they want to have another term. Mr. Smith is a newcomer and his real strength is not known. From present indications, it is said, that the Republicans will succeed in electing their entire ticket.

A. E. SMITH TO BUILD TERRILL ROAD BRIDGE

The committee from the Union County Board of Freeholders which has charge of the plans for the construction of a new bridge on Terrill road over Cedar brook, of which Freeholder J. Hervey Doane is the chairman, met yesterday to receive bids. Five were opened and Arthur E. Smith, of this city, received the contract, his bid of $548 being the lowest. The other bids were as follows: Serrell Construction Company, $618; J. E. Kelly, of New Market, $657.90; Joseph Moore, of Cranford, $735; Warren B. Travell, of Plainfield, $740.

The bridge is to be forty feet long with an eight foot span and is to be an iron beam, brick arch concrete structure. It is to be placed at a point near the source of Cedar brook and owing to the high water there in heavy rains it is necessary that a substantial bridge be built at that point. The work will be started at once and will be completed within a few weeks.

Dr. J. A. Chambliss Returns.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, and Mrs Philip B. Macintyre, of this city, and Stacy Raynolds, of the borough, arrived home late last night from a trip of several weeks abroad. They returned by the way of Montreal by steamer to Boston and were delayed a couple of days on account of a heavy storm and fog. For twelve hours one day the steamer's engines were stopped and the captain waited the lifting of the fog. The party report having had a delightful time abroad and all return home well. Dr. Chambliss will occupy his pulpit on Sunday, preaching both morning and night.

Nearly Lost Eyesight.

Floyd Fuller, of Arlington avenue, while driving between New Market and Bound Brook, Tuesday, narrowly escaped the loss of the sight of one eye. He was startled when something hit his wagon and then struck him in the right eye. He believes that it was a bullet from a Flobert or other rifle, in the hands of a boy tramping about the woods. He made an investigation, but was unable to find anyone about. The injury to the eye was exceedingly painful and Mr. Fuller thinks it is a miracle that the sight was not permanently lost.

A Marriage Announcement.

Miss Lelia M. Sutton, daughter of John P. Sutton, of North avenue, and John A. McIntyre, son of John F. McIntyre, also of North avenue, announced to their friends, yesterday, that they had been married for more than a month. The ceremony was performed at Elizabeth on August 8 and they have since been living at their respective homes. They left today for Whitehouse to spend two weeks with relatives previous to beginning housekeeping.

Civil Service Convention Sept. 17.

The State civil service commissioners have received an invitation to attend the convention of civil service commissioners, to be held at Albany on September 17 and 18. The president of the National Civil Service Reform League will make the principal address. Commissioners from the various States are expected to make addresses.

Attending Convention.

Chief Howard Woolston, Captain Edward Terry and William McCullough, of the borough fire department, are in Atlantic City today as delegates to the State Firemen's Relief Association convention. Chief Woolston and Captain Terry will be made life members of the association as this is their fifth successive year as delegates.

'WORST BOY' JAILED AGAIN

Petman Robinson Once More Nabbed by the Police for Thieving.

STOLE A GIRL'S BICYCLE.

Also Appropriated $2 from a Borough Home and His Mother Aids Detective-Sergeant to Get Him.

Petman Robinson, the thirteen-year-old colored lad who the police have dubbed "the worst boy in Plainfield," is once more in a cell at headquarters on a theft charge. This time, the fifth within a few months, he was arrested for stealing a bicycle belonging to Dr. W. K. Browning's daughter. The machine was taken from the wheelhouse in the rear of the residence early last night and sold within an hour for $3 to Everitt Eastham, a dealer who has a store on the Somerset street bridge.

Some children playing near the Browning home noticed Petman about the yard and when the bicycle was missed the fact was reported to the police. Detective-Sergeant Flynn went over the trail in a short time and soon had the wheel located but the boy kept under cover. His mother, who has heretofore stood back of him, threw up her hands when told of his latest escapade and declared she would help the officer get him in custody. He returned home late last night and while he was still sleeping early this morning she telephoned headquarters that he was to be had. The boy was awakened from Dreamland to find Detective Flynn bending over him.

When Petman was taken to headquarters it developed that he had been active in another direction last night and had pilfered $2 from a North Plainfield home where his mother does washing. Out of the $5 gained by his thefts he had $1.75 left when he was arrested and Mrs. Robinson added a quarter to it to return the $2 to the borough woman. The boy will be arraigned in court tomorrow morning.

Petman and his escapades have kept the police on the jump for the past three years. On one occasion, their patience became exhausted and he was committed to the county jail pending a hearing to have him sent to the Reform school. They claim that it was the only thing to do with him but Mrs. Williamson, the county probationer, became interested in the case and had him paroled. He was returned to Plainfield but immediately started in thieving again. A few weeks ago he was locked up for stealing several bicycles and while in a cell attempted suicide by hanging himself with a noose made from his shirt. He was unconscious when discovered by an officer and Dr. Lufburrow worked over him an hour before he was fully restored. He was released on bail afterward and his case is still pending the Grand Jury's action.

Y. M. H. ASSOCIATION GIVES CONCERT AND DANCE.

Under the auspices of the Young Men's Hebrew Association a concert and dance were given in the Plainfield Dancing Academy on West Front street, last night, and it being the first social function of the season given by the association it was a great success. Besides a large number of Plainfield members and friends there were two automobile parties from Perth Amboy, consisting of the Misses Bertha Kaufman, Blanche Sameth, Flossie Kreilsheimer, and Christopher Wagner, Arthur Conquist and Herman Freedman.

The first part of the evening was devoted to a concert, a vocal and instrumental program being given by Aaron and Leon Hirsch, Miss Rose Rothberg, Miss Carrie Fortgang, Henry Rosenbaum, Miss Sadie Rothberg, Benjamin Kramer and Benjamin Berse.

Following the concert dancing was enjoyed until a late hour, music being furnished by Nalor's orchestra. During the intermission refreshments were served. The affair was in charge of a committee comprising Samuel Rothberg, chairman; David J. Woolfe, Harry Rosenbaum and Harry Seigel.

Servant Girl's Charge Dismissed.

Rose Pierce, a colored servant girl, appeared before Judge Runyon in the city court, this morning, as complainant against Frederick Kirberg, of Lee place, a former employer. She charged that a few nights ago the defendant violently ejected her from his home without cause and also called her profane names. The testimony developed the fact that the plaintiff had been very insolent to members of the family and had been handled roughly by Mr. Kirberg after she had slammed dishes around and pounded on a door that had been closed against her. The charge was dismissed.

FOOT MANGLED BY CAR; DISPLAYS GREAT NERVE

A remarkable exhibition of nerve was witnessed near the North avenue station, yesterday afternoon, when James McCarthy, twenty-one years old, of Bayonne, slipped beneath a coal train and had his right foot badly crushed. He pulled himself clear of the wheels and hobbled to one side as several men ran to his assistance. One of them asked his name while they were waiting for the ambulance and he replied.

"I haven't got any name."

A question as to where he lived met with about the same response and then he exclaimed:

"Well, what are you all standing around about. Why don't you do something for a fellow instead of letting him bleed to death."

The injured foot was bound up under McCarthy's direction and he was chatting in a nonchalant way when the ambulance drove up. At Muhlenberg Hospital he continued to refuse his name but last night told who he was. The physicians have slight hopes of saving the crushed member although it is mangled from the toes to above the ankle. Amputation had not been decided upon this morning and he may possibly get through without being permanently crippled.

GOOD GOVERNMENT FOR BERKELEY HEIGHTS

The Berkeley Heights Good Government Club was organized at that place last night with Bernard F. Cummings as president and with a membership of seventy men. The purpose is to advance the cause of good government not only in the township but at large. Addresses were made by Frank C. Shaffer, the Republican candidate for township committeeman; B. F. Cummings, Republican candidate for the county committee, and Michael Amedo, the Republican candidate for constable. Other candidates of both parties will make addresses at the next meeting.

The principal talks last night, however, were made by William Jeffery, the "bungalow man," and Arthur M. Plyer, a New York politician, both of whom talked on "Progress." These were the other officers elected: Secretary and treasurer, Frank C. Shaffer; vice-presidents, Robert G. Rogers, Rudolph Shaffer, Joseph Kuntz, Angelo Delducca, William Lutz, Jr., John Laurino, George Herber, Michael Laurino, Michael Amodeo, P. G. Honeyman and William Lutz, Sr.

The Berkeley Heights Lyceum Company held its annual meeting earlier in the evening. Although the lyceum has been open but three months a five per cent. dividend was declared on the stock.

C. W. MOORE'S HORSES MAKE A CLEAN SWEEP

C. W. Watson's horses yesterday practically swept the card at the closing day's judging of the Newport Horse Show at the Casino. The championship for harness horses under 15 hands was won by Kitty Gray and Norena, driven by Mrs. C. W. Watson, while Lord Baltimore and My Maryland, with Mr. Watson, received the reserve ribbon. In the championship class for singles harness horses Mr. Watson's Lord Baltimore won the premier award for the small horses. The clever driving of Mrs. Watson was largely responsible for the second victory of Kitty Gray and Norena in the pairs to phaeton. The fourth blue ribbon of the day was won by Lord Baltimore in the single harness horse class.

William H. Moore's Debator and Senator triumphed over Reginald C. Vanderbilt's Lord Burleigh and Lord Brooke in the championship class for horses over 15 hands, but Reginald Vanderbilt's Dr. Selwonk beat W. H. Moore's international champion Radiant for the second time during the show.

The contest for horses to basket phaetons was a close one, first honors going to Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Columbia. In the tandem class, R. C. Vanderbilt won first and second respectively with Lord Burleigh and Lord Brooke.

—The biggest display of peaches so far this season at Neuman Brothers' tomorrow. 175 baskets of fancy white and yellow fruit will be sold at 75 cents, $1.00 and $1.25.

Mrs. W. W. Warnock, of Craig place, and Mrs. Margaret Wilson, of Grove street, have returned from a visit with relatives at Newburgh, N. Y.

MANGANO FOUND GUILTY

Union County Jury Finds That He Murdered Dominick Cervasi in February.

TRIAL LASTED TWO DAYS.

His Counsel Will Ask For a Reprieve Pending an Appeal —Hetfield Congratulated.

Dominick Mangano, accused of taking the life of Dominick Cervasi on February 16, was found guilty of murder in the first degree by a jury in the Court of Oyer and Terminer late yesterday afternoon at Elizabeth. Sentence was at once imposed by Supreme Court Justice James J. Bergen, who presided at the trial, the week beginning Monday, October 26 being set for his electrocution. Mangano's counsel, William R. Wilson, will at once apply for a reprieve pending the outcome of an appeal.

If sentence is carried out, Mangano will be the first Union county man to die in the electric chair, and the first local man to face death for crime in nine years, the last being Rosel, who was found guilty of killing a farmer.

When the jury returned its verdict this afternoon, after an hour and three-quarters' deliberation, Mangano sat stolidly gazing into space and seemed devoid of emotion. Even when the court imposed sentence he maintained the same demeanor, although scores gazed at his sinister features and studied his low brow, shifty eyes, weak chin and somewhat cruel mouth.

Earlier in the day he had gone on the witness stand in his own defense and had sworn that he did not kill his godfather, statting further that he was absent from the scene of the crime. He also testified that he had not threatened a friend of his if the latter "peached." He showed no nervousness while on the stand. His counsel endeavored to show that the best of feeling prevailed between him and his relative, while the prosecution's efforts were directed toward proving that Mangano's cheating at cards and a subsequent row formed the motive for the fatal stabbing and shooting in Peterstown. Whether an earlier feud in Italy had anything to do with the crime did not develop from the testimony.

An array of negroes and Italians were gathered in the courtroom during the trial, and while the jury was deliberating laughed and chatted while the accused sat friendless and alone. Peterstown, the city's famous "Bowery," and the home of all the interested parties, had a picturesque representation in attendance. The trial was the briefest in the county's history, lasting but two days. Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., the assistant prosecutor, was warmly congratulated on the way he assisted in the conduct of the State's case.

WETUMPKAH INN OPENS ITS DOORS ON OCTOBER 1.

Another creditable hotel is shortly to be added to the number which Plainfield enjoys, E. G. Hulling, of Asbury Park, having announced that the Wetumpkah Inn will be formally opened at West Seventh and Washington streets on Thursday, October 1. He promises to provide an up-to-date resort for people who prefer boarding to housekeeping when all the conveniences of a private home are to be obtained.

The commodious building to be occupied as the Inn is the Major Miller property which was until recently used by the Hartridge School. Extensive alterations are being made. The rooms will be arranged single and ensuite; with or without private baths. The very best cuisine is to be a feature of the hotel.

For twenty years Mr. Hulling has been proprietor of The Hotel Waldron, one of the most popular resort in North Asbury Park and is thoroughly experienced in the business.

Injured at South Plainfield.

While several men employed at the South Plainfield coal storage were shifting a car with a broken coupling over a switch to a side track yesterday morning about 11 o'clock, a piece of timber, which was being used to move the disabled car, flew out of position and struck Michael Boshek, a young Polish man, in the employ of the Lehigh Coal Company, badly bruising his leg and one of his hands. Dr. W. Kempton Browning, the railroad physician, was called and made the young man as comfortable as possible. No bones were broken. Boshek seems to be unfortunate, as he only recently lost the use of several fingers on one hand by having them crushed while engaged in his duties at the coal dumps.

MEET SEPT. 15 TO PLAN CONGRESSIONAL CONVENTION

Plans for the Republican Congressional convention in the Fifth district will be made at a meeting of the district committee on Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 15, at Elizabeth. Chairman Alexander Gilbert, of this city, who has declined to become a candidate for the nomination although strongly urged by prominent Republicans in Union county to do so, will preside at the meeting which will be held at the Republican headquarters in the Dix building.

It is expected that the convention will be held in Warren county but the exact place will be decided upon at the committee meeting. It will take place probably between Sept. 25 and 29. There appears to be but one candidate seeking the nomination and he is the present incumbent, Charles N. Fowler, of Elizabeth. Mr. Fowler has occupied the berth for fourteen years.

CASES QUICKLY DECIDED IN THE DISTRICT COURT

There was a short session of the district court this morning and Judge Newcorn quickly disposed of the cases brought before him. Judgement was given Siegel Cooper & Co. for $26 in the firm's action against J. J. Leahy for the illegal detention of a phonograph. H. C. Runyon represented the complainant. In the contract case of Louis Vogel against Morris Meyerowitz, judgment was given the plaintiff for $458.311.

Possession of the premises was given the plaintiffs in these landlord and tenant cases: Augustus J. Brunson against Peter Emmons, Jacob Sachar against John Mowen, Mary A. Hill against John Millwater, Fanny Kadansky against Thomas Dears. It was reported that the landlord and tenant case of Mary E. Crane against I. D. TenEyck and Mrs. D. F. Miller had been settled out of court. Twelve cases were put over until the next session of the court.

Owns His Own Home.

Thomas J. Lynch, foreman of The Daily Press room, has purchased of Letter-carrier Charles B. Stephens the property at 334 East Fifth street, and will take up his residence there soon. Isaac Vail, the real estate agent, has sold Adrain Martin's residential property at 20 Grandview avenue to Letter-carrier Charles B. Stephens, of East Fifth street, and Mr. Stephens and family will take up their residence in the borough soon.

Success of Fresh Air Work.

The Misses Goddard and Miss Merrill, of this city, who were in charge of the fresh air home work at Riverton, Conn., for a month this summer have returned home. During the month twenty-five young women from New York enjoyed life at the home. The grounds and building used for the purpose have been donated by Miles Roberts, of Putnam avenue and he is interested in the success of the enterprise.

Raises Fine Fruit.

Captain Christian Frederickson, of the local police department, who has a splendid orchard on his property on Leland avenue, yesterday picked four barrels of apples from a tree, many of which weighed a pound apiece. They are of the King William variety and adapted for table or other use. The captain also has a number of peach trees that produce some of the finest fruit ever seen in the city.

Funeral of L. C. Putnam.

The funeral service of Lewis C. Putnam was held at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon from the residence of his son, Frank Putnam on East Second street. Rev. Dr. A. C. McCrea, pastor of the First M. E. church, officiated. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends and many floral tributes. The burial was in Evergreen Cemetery on Plainfield avenue.

A Successful Operation.

Mrs. H. W. Marshall, of Grant avenue, underwent a serious surgical operation at her home yesterday afternoon. It was performed by Dr. G. W. Endicott and was very successful. Mrs. Marshall was resting easily this morning and her rapid recovery is looked for.

W. C. T. U. Annual.

The annual meeting of the local union of the W. C. T. U. is being held this afternoon in the rooms on Madison avenue. Mrs. Emma Bourne, the State president, is announced to make an address and a reception will be given to Mrs. Mehala Sims, the oldest member. Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson was elected president, suceeding Mrs. E. A. Parse.

SEEK AN ENGINEER NOW

TWO NAMES ARE SUGGESTED.

No Time to Be Lost in Engaging One—Bids Submitted for This Work at Conference Last Night.

The first real obstacle was met at the third conference of official representatives of Plainfield, North Plainfield, Dunellen and Bound Brook, held last night in this city to discuss the question of a trunk line sewer, and practically nothing was accomplished. The division of opinion arose over the selection of a competent engineer to make the preliminary survey and ascertain the advisability and feasibility of the plan. Evidently, a majority of the representatives favored Herring & Fuller, of New York, who has done similar work here, being considered probably the highest authority on the subject, but the name of Alexander Potter was presented by a member of the Dunellen Council and there being such a difference in the price for the work, he succeeded in having the matter laid over for a week to further investigate the relative merits of the engineers. Herring & Fuller have offered to do the work, including Plainfield, North Plainfield, Dunellen, Bound Brook, Somerville and Raritan for $1,500, or omitting Somerville and Raritan for $1,200. Mr. Potter's bid for all the work was $600.

Those attending the conference included Mayor Roberts and the Bound Brook Council, Mayor Samuel Townsend, and Councilman C. L. Nichols and W. J. Buttfield, from North Plainfield; Mayor Harry Swackhamer and the Dunellen Council, and Plainfield's special commission consisting of President R. I. Tolles and Councilmen F. E. Mygatt, Duncan W. Taylor and Charles C. Randolph. Others present included Councilmen W. L. Gloak, Herbert Buxton and City Engineer A. J. Gavett.

The previous conferences being more preliminary, it was announced that the question had now progressed to such an extent that nothing more could be accomplished until engineers are engaged and a survey made to determine the feasibility of the plan. Organization was then effected by the selection of Councilman F. E. Mygatt as chairman, and W. J. Buttfield as secretary. When the question of the employment of an engineer was presented, it was thought best to appoint a finance committee to consider this matter; also that of the apportionment of the expense for this work.

The committee appointed for that purpose consisted of R. I. Tolles, Mayor Townsend, Mayor Roberts, Mayor Swackhamer and later Mr. Mygatt was added at the suggestion of Mayor Townsend. Prior to the selection of Mr. Mygatt as the fifth member, the committee of four retired to consider the question of an engineer, the object being to recommend either Herring and Fuller or Alexander Potter so that the work could go right along.

After an hour's deliberation the committee returned and stated that it had been unable to agree on an engineer or the apportionment of the expense. It was then suggested that this matter be laid over for one week, during which time it is hoped that a decision can be reached and a recommendation made to the general body. It was a source of regret to many of those present that any differences should have arisen relative to the employment of an engineer, the majority feeling that the best engineer is needed for the work.

Those who favored Mr. Potter explained that he had built the trunk line sewer extending from Summit to tidewater, which has been in operation for five years and is considered a success. This seemed to be a sufficient guarantee to them that he is thoroughly competent to handle the local proposition in a satisfactory manner. Still others favored Herring & Fuller, because of their wide experience in work of this kind, and it was argued that an opinion from the firm would be well worth the price charged.

It was apparent that some of those present failed to realize the importance of the preliminary survey and the great amount of work to be done and for this reason it was urged that the best possible engineer be engaged.

Practically the whole evening was taken up with a discussion regarding the employment of an engineer and it was impossible to make any further progress until that is settled. The finance committee agreed to meet within a few days with a view to reaching a decision so that a re-

RURAL CARRIERS MEET AND CHOOSE OFFICERS.

Trenton, Sept. 10.—The fifth annual convention of the rural free delivery carriers of New Jersey took place yesterday in the council chamber of the city hall. Most of the counties of the State were represented by delegates.

The convention opened with an address by Kendrick C. Hill, assistant postmaster of this city. Remarks were also made by W. C. Brigham, inspector of the Trenton division of rural carriers, and Winfield S. Fell, of the local postoffice.

At the afternoon session these officers were elected: President, Frank D. Veale, of Bridgeton; vice-president, John F. Burns, of Vineland, Edward Oliver, of Laurel Springs, was continued in the office of secretary-treasurer.

These two members were elected to serve on the executive committee for one year: A. W. Nichols, of Vineland, and C. W. Chenney, of New Brunswick. Mr. Veale was selected as delegate to the national convention, which meets in Omaha in October.

During the afternoon a letter from the Fourth Assistant Postmaster-General was read by W. C. Brigham. The letter discussed the merits of postal savings depositaries and of revising the present system of the parcel post. It is asserted that citizens of the United States have to pay more for sending the same amount of parcel matter to other parts of the country than for sending it abroad.

DEATH FROM BLAZING OIL.

Mrs. David Muir, of Morristown, Dies in Hospital as Result of Accident.

Morristown, Sept. 10.—Mrs. David Muir, of Abbett avenue, who was burned by blazing oil from a lamp Sunday night, died in Memorial Hospital yesterday.

With the exception of her feet no portion of her body escaped being enveloped in flames. Her agony was intense until death ended her sufferings. Mrs. Muir had bidden good night to her husband and son and returning into an adjacent room slipped and fell, breaking the kerosene oil lamp. Before aid could be given her she was terribly burned. Dr. James Douglas was called to attend her, and after making her as comfortable as possible had her removed to the hospital. While the burns were not deep they covered her body so thoroughly that the physician's remedies were of little benefit. The house caught fire, but neighbors extinguished the flames. Mrs. Muir was about thirty-five years old. She leaves besides her husband two children.

Italian Held for Killing Friend.

Mike Mikado, of Shadyside, was killed near his home early yesterday morning. Steve Martzingo is in the Hackensack jail charged with the crime. Policemen O'Brien and Dinan arrested Martzingo, who denied having shot his friend. Steve Mazlet, Steve Kolinko and John Spisak, who were mixed up in the drunken brawl, said Martzingo shot Mikado.

The missionary societies of the First Baptist church are planning an active campaign for the fall and winter and the regular meetings have been resumed.

The twenty-fourth annual convention of the Union county W. C. T. U. will be held at St. Paul's M. E. church, Cranford, Thursday, September 17, morning, afternoon and evening. Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, of this city, county president, will preside and several Plainfielders will take part in the program.

Priest Resigns Chair for Parish.

The Rev. Dr. Charles Mackel, who has filled the chair of dogmatic theology in the Seminary of the Immaculate Conception at South Orange for twelve years, resigned yesterday. It is the object of the priest to take up parish work, and it is understood that he will be appointed rector of the Church of St. Paul of the Cross, in Jersey City. This charge has been made vacant by the appointment of Monsignor John A. Stafford to St. Patrick's church, Jersey City, to succeed the late Rev. Lawrence M. C. Carroll. No one has yet been named to succeed Father Mackel.

The Netherwood Juniors who were scheduled to play the Shamrocks on Hope Common, yesterday afternoon, were awarded the game by the score of 9 to 0, the Shamrocks failing to appear.

Jack Martin is entitled to a hit in the Labor Day afternoon game with Scotch Plains, the crack shortstop getting one of his timely bingles just when it was needed the most.

After the Clinton Avenue-Scotch Plains game, Manager Frentz congratulated Manager Dorflinger, adding that the locals won the contest fair and he was glad that Randolph was credited with a no-run no-hit game. Another contest between these teams will be played at Crescent Oval before the season is over.

Clinton Avenue will play Rahway at the latter place on Saturday, when a determined effort will be made to retrieve lost honors. The Plainfield boys are sure that they can bring a victory home.

The fans will travel a long distance before they will see an infield of the same class, or even better, than can outplay that of Clinton Avenue. Every play works in perfect harmony and it is seldom that a ball gets out of the diamond.

The Somerville team will play Clinton Avenue on Crescent Oval, Saturday, September 19, and a great game is expected. The Plainfielders took the first two contests by score of 3 to 1 and lost the third by a score of 2 to 1. The teams are evenly matched and whoever takes the next contest will have to put up a gilt-edged article of ball.

Manager Frentz of Scotch Plains wanted Manager Dorflinger to cancel the next game with Somerville and play his team on the Oval, explaining that he had a contest scheduled at home with Westfield for that day and he felt sure that the Plainfield attraction would keep the attendance down. Manager Dorflinger very properly declined the offer, seeing no reason why he should turn down Somerville.

Westfield has already taken two games from Scotch Plains and the two teams will meet at the 'Plains on Saturday, September 19, for the third struggle. Westfield appears to have the sign on Manager Frentz's aggregation.

Al. Farmer caught for Brooklyn against the Giants on Tuesday and got a hit off the mighty "Matty" in the eleven-inning struggle that was won by New York by a score of 1 to 0. Farmer caught a perfect game.

GOLF.

Will T. Glenney and Robert Abbott, of the Plainfield Country Club, are among the large list of entrants for the amateur golf championship tournament. A stronger entry from the far South is the brightest aspect for the tournament, for St. Louis, Mobile and New Orleans have representation.

The entry of Nelson W. Whitney, who recently won the championship of the Southern Golf Association and defeated H. Chandler Egan in the final, is the most important from New Orleans. The Chicago entry is small, but it includes Mason E. Phelps, the new champion of the Western Golf Association, and Warren K. Wood, T. R. Fuller, the boy champion of the Massachusetts Golf Association, and C. H. Seely, holder of the title for the second time in the Metropolitan Golf Association, are also nominated.

Jerome D. Travers, the present champion, who has been going in great form lately at Montclair, is on the list, and also of the championship clan Walter J. Travis, Eben M. Byers and Findlay S. Douglas. W. C. Fownes, Jr., who has twice trimmed Travis in the national contests, is to play, and also such stars of the links as Fred Herreshoff, Tom and Sherill Sherman, sons of Taft's vice-presidential candidate; A. L. White, H. B. McFarland, Philadelphia champion; A. W. Tillinghast, George T. Brokaw, S. A. Dunning, J. G. Anderson, Kenneth Edwards.

H. W. Beveridge, who was here in 1903 with the Oxford and Cambridge team, is the only English entry. Of the absentees noted are H. Chandler Egan, the twice former champion; Archie Graham, runnerup last year; Emerson Knowles, inter-collegiate champion; W. C. Chick, of Boston; John, Jr., and Archie Reid, W. T. West, of Philadelphia, and C. B. MacDonald.

The total of 128 is ten more than last year, but belated entries may swell the list today before the pairings are made. LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

"Strongheart," the comedy drama by William C. De Mille, which will be offered at the New Plainfield Theatre tonight, has been regarded as the best play of its class on the native stage. Fun and football are the principal ingredients of the play which has been a popular favorite for the past three seasons.

The forthcoming appearance in this city of Miss Henrietta Crosman is pleasantly anticipated by her many admirers. Miss Crosman has long been a favorite with theatregoers, and the success she has achieved has won for her distinguished recognition throughout the entire country. The charming vivacity, which adds so much to Miss Crosman's piquancy, when before the footlights, is characteristic of her home life. From her intimate friends details of her many lovable characteristics are given, and in the entire theatrical profession, no one has won the approbation of associates more than has this earnest woman whose achievements prove her right to a first place in the line of the leading actresses of today. Miss Crosman through her managers, Henry B. Harris and Maurice Campbell, is booked to fill an engagement at the New Plainfield Theatre tomorrow night, when she will be seen in that most delightful of old comedies "As You Like It," the greatest pastoral play written by Shakespeare. Miss Crosman has accomplished so much in her life as an actress that it would consume too much space to attempt to tell of them. Suffice it to say that she has met every emergency, played every part to the satisfaction of public opinion, gained friends wherever she has gone, and stands today as one pre-eminent as an interpreter of clean comedy.

In every avenue of art there stands out one name, indelible, bold in its significance and high in relief against the background of others. In grand opera it is Tetrazzini or Melba; in drama, Julia Marlowe or Maud Adams; in painting, Abbey or Sargent. In the newer art of moving pictures it is Lyman H. Howe whose new program will be seen at the New Plainfield Theatre Saturday afternoon and night. It is a program resplendent with the beauties and wonders of foreign lands. It reveals the picturesque pageantry of idolatry in India; the tumultuous native life in Naples; Sulphur mining and tuna fishing in Sicily; the glories of nature in Savoy, France; the art, grace and beauty of the world-renowned fountains of Rome; a new drill by the Reedham Orphans; a thrilling ten mile steeplechase in England; the kaleidoscopic effects of physical phenomena; the curious but sagacious conduct of birds and animals, and many others.

Among the prominent members of the "Buster Brown" company of forty players which will visit here next Tuesday afternoon and night and romp upon the New Plainfield Theatre spacious stage are no less famous comedians than John and George Gorman, late stars of the famous Gorman Bros. Minstrels. It is said that their specialty is alone worth the price of admission.

The big New York success, "Our New Minister," is announced for presentation at the New Plainfield Theatre next Wednesday night; with the original company, including Joseph Conyers, and all scenic effects and accessories that distinguished its metropolitan run. The comedy is by the authors of "The Old Homestead." It is a humorous tale of life in a small New England village. Hardscrabble is the name of the settlement. It is in New Hampshire. The fun of the play is evolved from the quaint ways, sayings and doings of a score of rustic characterizations. It is a very funny story that carried the country folk through the play; the ministerial element is the least of the play's factors. The comedy in a word is a broad inlook at the quaint people of a small country town. Among the many amusing types shown are a country constable who imagines himself a great thief catcher, and a skinflint known as the meanest man in Hardscrabble, and another Hardscrabbler known as the best informed man of the settlement, the postmaster, a veritable encyclopedia of names, dates and general information. The boy from New York, the busy town tattler, the old minister, also the new minister. Then too are presented a Hardscrabbler just released from a term in the county prison, his daughter, the minister's sister and others.

Former United States Senator James Smith, Jr., is being bitterly attacked because he personally opposes Mr. Bryan. For this antagonism, can not it be said of him "we love him for the enemies he has made."

It is going to be no easy task to get the people to consent to a bond issue of $10,000,000 for road improvement work throughout the State. Bond issues, and particularly huge ones, are not popular with the average taxpayer.

"Does Prohibition Pay?" is the subject being discussed at the annual meeting of the local W. C. T. U. today. A visit to the Prohibition State of Maine, particularly to Portland, will convince the most zealous advocate of that idea that it certainly does not.

That the Common Council intends to take immediate steps to have the P. S. C. improve its trolley service is welcome news to the public which has been awaiting anxiously for months for some action of this sort. Not only are the schedules worse than they have been for years but the rolling stock is a disgrace to a city that is called "the city beautiful." Go where one will, it is safe to say that the kind of junk, which serves the purposes of cars here, will not be found in any other city.

Graduates Made Deacons.

Seven graduatess of the Seminary of the Immaculate Conception at South Orange yesterday were made deacons by Bishop O'Connor. The Very Rev. Dr. James F. Mooney, rector of the seminary, was arch-priest, and the Rev. Dr. Thomas McLaughlin, vice-president of the institution, was master of ceremonies. The Rev. William Thompson and the Rev. Geo. Murphy were assistants to the Bishops. The men on whom the order was conferred were the Rev. Edward Hillock and the Rev. John Holton, of Morristown; the Rev. Henry Sheridan and the Rev. James Weisbecker, of Newark; the Rev. James Hobson, of Philadelphia; the Rev. Peter O'Connor, of Bayonne, and the Rev. James Cloherty, of New York city.

STATE NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

South Westville is about the only town in South Jersey without telephones, and an effort is being made to have a service installed.

A certificate of incorporation of the Volunteer Fire Department of Cape May Point has been filed in the office of the county clerk.

Falling downstairs at her home, in Millville, Mrs. Bell White sustained a broken nose, a fracture of the arm and internal injuries, which, it is feared, may result fatally.

Abraham Lynn drove into a freight train at the Norma crossing, of the Central Railroad yesterday, but escaped death when his horse bolted up the switch, avoiding the main track.

Accused of fishing for carp and catfish with nets of illegal mesh, Andrew Faunce, of 1516 East Susquehanna avenue, Philadelphia, was fined $20 and costs by Justice of the Peace Thompson in Camden yesterday.

Out of the mud sucked from the bottom of the Delaware River for the filling of the tract once occupied by the old Gloucester racetrack, Walter Allen, of Gloucester, yesterday picked up a Spanish coin of the date 1725.

Playing near her home yesterday, Helen Harden, three years old, daughter of William Harden, of 860 Pine street, Camden, was relieved of a necklace that had been in the possession of her mother for sixteen years.

While running a naphtha launch at high speed in the creek at Westville, M. Krann's head came in contact with a bridge, and to save himself from going overboard he grabbed an exhaust pipe, which burned his hands.

As he was about to give a sick bloodhound medicine yesterday Henrich Zinn, a butcher, of Eighth and Chestnut streets, Camden, was badly bitten on the arm by the beast. The animal escaped, but was shot later by William Blake.

John McGhan, of Florida and Atlantic avenues, Atlantic City, was held for court under $500 on the charge of selling liquor on Sunday in violation of the excise laws. A. Cunningham, who was also accused of the same offense, will have a hearing Saturday.

A telegram received yesterday told Mrs. Jeremiah Beaston, of 958 South Eighth street, Camden, that her husband had been taken suddenly ill on a train on his way home from a business trip to California. He was taken to an Elks' Home in Indiana.

A notebook in his coat pocket, which turned the edge of his antagonist's razor, probably saved the life of William Howard, of Trenton, when he was attacked by Joseph Heath. The two became embroiled during an argument in a saloon. Heath has disappeared.

About to cross Broadway yesterday, Lillian Davis, six years old, daughter of Adam T. Davis, a saloonkeeper, of Broadway and Chestnut streets, Camden, was struck by a trolley car and sustained a fracture of the nose, and other painful injuries. She was taken to her home.

Thomas Candonna, of Freehold, has commenced suit in the Supreme Court to recover $3,000 damages from Mrs. Julia A. Riker Harmon, of New York, charging that she was in the automobile which, on June 1 last, collided with him while he was riding his bicycle near Middleton, Monmouth county, badly injuring him.

Henry Walker, employed as a farm hand at the Bonaparte Park, near Bordentown, while driving a bull yesterday afternoon slipped and fell and was attacked by the beast and badly bruised about the body. Fortunately for Walker, the bull had been deborned. Physicians as yet cannot say how seriously he is injured.

HUDSON RIVER BRIDGE AGAIN.

So sanguine are the Bergen county Board of Freeholders that a bridge is soon to be built across the Hudson River and that the Jersey approach will be in Bergen County, that a resolution prevailed at the Freeholders' meeting in Hackensack yesterday afternoon to the effect that County Engineer Earle prepare a rough sketch of a boulevard to run from the approach across the county to Hackensack, then to Paterson and south to Newark.

It is planned to obtain some of the $10,000,000 offered by the State for good roads, and to build bridges over the Overpeck and Hackensack Rivers at Palisades Park and Ridgefield Park.

Hunterdon's Courts Opened.

The September term of the Hunterdon county corts opened at Flemington yesterday morning. Supreme Court Justice Alfred Reed and Judge John L. Connet were upon the bench. Josiah Britton was sworn in as foreman of the grand jury. Among the important cases to be considered is that of the murder of Rocco Gromoni, at Milford, on June 14. Joseph Macciocia is locked up charged with the crime. Macciocia fled after the murder, and was arrested at Bloomsbury the following day.

FOUND $10,000 IN BONDS IN OLD SOFA'S LINING.

Hidden for years in an old sofa has reposed $10,000 worth of bonds of the Northampton and Williamsburg Street Railway Company of Springfield, Mass. Now Frank Hughes, of Passaic, son and heir of John Hughes, deceased, wants the United States District Court at Trenton to decree him possession of them. He wishes, it is said, to sue the Springfield corporation, which asserts that the bonds have been assigned on its books for a number of years to J. C. Hammond. The proceedings started at Trenton yesterday before Judge Lanning present many unusual features. John Hughes died in Paterson in 1895. In 1879 he filed a petition in bankruptcy, his schedules showing $40,000 liabilities and but $55 assets. He was supposed to have been a very rich man.

While tearing off the cover of some old furniture his son recently found the bonds issued to Israel E. Sayres and assigned in blank to Sayres. Inquiry of the Springfield company showed that the bonds in question had been transferred to Hammond, and they declined to liquidate them. The court here at first was of the opinion that the court was being used to establish a legal claim for the purpose of bringing a suit against the corporation, and said that if there was anything coming to the estate of Hughes it belonged to the old creditors, but it pointed out that the bonds might have been acquired after the discharge of the bankrupt Hughes in 1879.

This was suggested by former Assemblyman Whitehead, counsel for Hughes. The court asked Mr. Whitehead if he had any way of establishing this fact, but the lawyer said he could not prove it. Judge Lanning was inclined to dismiss the whole matter from court, but because Judge Cross, who had handled the preliminaries, was on his vacation, the court continued the case until next Monday. Mr. Whitehead then expects the court to give the right to begin litigation to show that his client is the owner of the bonds and unclipped coupons.

Think Tramps Burned Summer Home

The handsome home of James Pyle on Scott's Mountain, near Belvidere, with all the outbuildings and shrubbery, was burned early yesterday morning. The blaze was seen for many miles. The fire is thought to have been started by tramps. The house had just been vacated.

SEWER WORK STRIKES SNAG.

Proposed Contracts in New Brunswick Held Up for State Health Board's Approval.

Sewer work in New Brunswick has struck a snag as the result of the recent notice served upon the city by the State Board of Health notifying it that prior to July 1, 1911 the city must cease emptying its sewage into the Raritan River. Common Council last night passed a resolution offered by the Sewerage Committee awarding the contract for the construction of new sewer on Georges road to the "new factory district" to James H. Sheehan, of New Brunswick.

City Attorney McKeag notified council that the contract could not be carried out without the consent of the State Health Board. Under the laws this approval is necessary in all cases of sewer work after notice has been served. Some cities, he said, had gone on with sewer work without regard to the State Board, and in two such cases the State health authorities had applied for injunctions. Proposed sewers on Delafield and Comstock streets are also held up for a similar cause and the State Board's consent will be asked at once.

Monclair's Tax Rate Goes Up.

Montclair is to have a tax rate slightly higher than that of 1907. The County Board of Taxation fixed today the rate for this town at $1.67 a $100, as against $1.65 last year. The rate for Nutley was fixed at $1.72, Irvington $1.46 and Belleville $1.62 for within the fire limits and $1.50 elsewhere. The rate for these three towns is less than last year. Irvington's reduction is due to the fact that it was not necessary for the municipality to include in its budget anything for school purposes as the amount the town receives from the State is enough to cover its expenses in this department. The increase of two points in Montclair's tax rate is due to the fact that the town is making extensive improvements to its schools as well as erecting new buildings.

Newark Man Hurt.

Word was received in Newark yesterday that Siegfried Leschziner, a wealthy real estate operator and president of the firm of S. Leschziner & Co., Newark, was injured and lies in a critical condition at his country home at Pine Hills, N. Y. According to the information, Mr. Leschziner was driving a spirited mare late Tuesday afternoon, when a rabbit darted across the road, frightening the animal, which ran away. Mr. Leschziner was thrown down a forty-foot ravine which was filled with rocks.

Christian Science in Grand Jury.

The September grand jury for Bergen county was sworn in yesterday morning by Justice Parker, in the Supreme Court. Judge Charles C. Black, of the Circuit Court, and Judge Demarest, of the Court of Common Pleas. Justice Parker instructed the jury to investigate conditions in the county, with a view to compelling the strictest enforcement of the Bishops' law. He also directed investigation of the alleged unlawful practice of medicine by persons not authorized.

It is understood that this is the outcome of the efforts of Bergen County physicians to secure action against Christian Science healers.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

The Young People's Social Club met last evening at the home of Miss Verna Allen. The principal matter brought up was the peach festival which will be held in Washington Hall on Tuesday night.

Justice Smith has requested the school authorities for the names of all children of school age, who are not regular in their attendance.

A thirteen year old boy was brought before Justice Smith yesterday on a charge of stealing watermelons. He was fined $2.

Mrs. Howard Elliott, of Clinton avenue, whose health has given her friends much cause for alarm lately, is again seriously ill.

The Middlesex Volunteer Fire Company will give its third grand ball in Washington hall on Friday night.

Mr. and Mrs. William Gorman spent yesterday with Mrs. Norman's mother, Mrs. Cole, of South River.

Loise Randolph left today for Westfield, where she will be the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Ketchel.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The Dunellen F. C. will play the strong St. Joseph's Club team of Bound Brook, at Dunellen, on Saturday. Each team has won a game and this will be the "rubber." Claude Penrose, William Piddington and Earl Fulton, three New Market stars will be seen in the Dunellen lineup, and Conover and Dodwell will do the battery work, while Eick and Schoeller will officiate for St. Joseph's team.

Mayor Harry Swackhamer and the Borough Council attended the sewer conference at Plainfield, last night. The borough is greatly interested in the trunk line proposition and in fact anything that will result in the removal of Plainfield's sewage beds.

port can be made when the next conference is held on Wednesday night, September 16.

Before an adjournment was taken there was a brief discussion as to whether Somerville and Raritan propose to join in the movement. Mayor Swackhamer, of Dunellen, explained that he visited Somerville recently and was assured by the officials of that town as well as Raritan that they are anxious to be represented at future conferences, but would not be able to attend meetings on either Monday or Wednesday nights. After further discussion it was the opinion of those present that possibly Somerville and Raritan could arrange to have representatives at the next meeting even though the governing bodies might find it impossible to be present.

The plan as now proposed is to establish a trunk line sewer to tide water, it being the opinion of the officials that any effort to locate sewage disposal beds in Middlesex county would be fought not only by the county, but the State Board of Health. The disposal of sewage at tidewater now appears to be the only solution to the problem and the interested municipalities are working with that end in view.

Tax Rates for the Oranges Fixed.

The tax rates in Orange, East Orange and West Orange Village, will be higher this year. The rates follow: For Orange, increased from $1.77 to $1.86 per $100. This is due to the revocation of the assessment on the Henry Graves estate which lost the city $3,500,000 in ratables. East Orange increased from $1.50 to $1.53 due to losses in bank stock assessments. West Orange, a decrease from $2.26 to $2.24.

—The genuine Rocky Ford melons are to be had at Neuman Brothers. A big consignment will be received early tomorrow. They are sure to be sold quick so place orders early.

SAY THAT MISS BOWNE HAS JOINED CORDOVA.

Atlantic Highlands, Sept. 10.—T. G. Emory, a prominent architect here and a brother-in-law of J. Frank Cordova, the former Methodist minister, who was recently released from the State Prison, gave out a statement yesterday in which he declares that Miss Julia Bowne, Cordova's paramour, has left her home in Asbury Park and has joined the latter.

Emory states that since Cordova's release from prison Mrs. Cordova's relatives in Asbury Park have watched Miss Bowne's every movement on account of the prevalent belief that she would join Cordova at the first opportunity. For the last few days Miss Bowne has not been seen at the bungalow of her parents in Asbury Park, notwithstanding the fact that her home has been under close surveillance. It is persistently rumored that Miss Bowne left with her child several days ago.

Cordova has been earning a considerable sum of money by doing newspaper work and granting paid interviews in Philadelphia, and it is thought that when he left that city some time ago he had sufficient funds to support Miss Bowne and their child for a number of weeks. Nothing is known of Cordova's whereabouts.

Mrs. Cordova conducts a boarding house here and is said to be making a comfortable living. Her brother Mr. Emory, states that he went to Trenton shortly before Cordova's release and had a talk with Keeper Osborne, for the purpose of learning what plans Cordova had made for the future. Emory says that Mr Osborne was unable to enlighten him on this subject.

REALTY AGENT STEPS FROM AUTO AND DIES.

The body of Augustus Stuart, manager for the Linden Boom Real Estate Company, who died suddenly Monday night, in a wagon shed adjoining the Linden Hotel, which is conducted by Louis acher, was sent to his home in New York yesterday.

The dead man had been touring the township during the day in his big automobile, showing around prospective investors in real estate.

He ran the auto under the shed and was in the act of getting out when stricken with a hemorrhage. He pitched forward on his face and expired without any medical attention. One of the employed around the hotel discovered the body still warm lying beside the auto.

It was carried into the hotel and a hurry call sent to the Elizabeth General Hospital for an ambulance. When it reached the scene with a physician the latter saw there was no need of his services and County Physician Westcott, of Fanwood, was notified. He came to the hotel, made an investigation and decided death resulted from natural causes and gave a burial permit. The body was taken in charge by a Roselle undertaker.

Stuart was about thirty-five years old and his family are well connected in New York. He had only been a week in Linden and boarded with Harry D. Houston on Wood avenue close to the hotel.

GAME WARDENS SAY NEW LAW IS OBSERVED.

Trenton, Sept. 10.—The Board of Fish and Game Commissioners has been making inquiries from the wardens throughout the State regarding the inforcement and effect of the law of last winter prohibiting woodcock shooting in July.

The general tenor of the replies showed a disposition on the part of gunners to observe the law with practically no violations. Most of the wardens also expressed the opinion that the law was a good one, meeting the approval of sportsmen.

Under the present law woodcock shooting is permissible in the northern section of the State from October 15 to December 1, and in the southern section from November 15 to December 31.

President B. C. Kuser, of the commission, has had a number of pheasants distributed throughout the state and, while writing to the wardens, inquiries were made regarding their condition and propogation. The replies showed that the pheasants have multiplied to an extent that is regarded by the commission as gratifying.

SEARCH FOR CHILD'S SLAYER.

New Jersey Police Suspect an Italian Who Took Her Walking.

Posses in charge of Middlesex County Detective Frank Hoffman of the Prosecutor's office, New Brunswick, and other officers, are searching the woods near Cliffwood, for Cisanto Rosino, of New York, with whom the four-year-old daughter of Dominick Scianto of Cliffwood, was seen last on Sunday night. Yesterday the child's body was found in a gully not far from her home.

Director Pownall of the Middlesex Board of Freeholders has offered on behalf of the county a reward of $500 for the capture of Rosino, as an incentive to the searchers.

Rosino was a friend of Sciatno and came to visit his boarding house near the brickyards in Cliffwood on last Friday. On Sunday evening he took Scianto's small daughter for a walk. Nothing has been seen of him since. It is believed, however, that Rosino is hiding in the woods not far from where the child's body was found.

HUNTING THE WHITE-TAILED DEER

BY

THEODORE ROOSEVELT

ONE afternoon, while most of us were away from the ranch-house, one of the cowboys, riding in from his day's outing over the range, brought word that he had seen two white-tail deer, a buck and a doe feeding with some cattle on the side of a hill across the river, and not much more than half a mile from the house. There was about an hour of daylight left, and one of the foremen, a tall, fine-looking fellow named Ferris, the best rider on the ranch, but not an unusually good shot, started out at once after the deer. Ferris found the deer easily enough, but they started before he could get a standing shot at them, and when he fired as they ran, he only broke one of the buck's hind legs, just above the ankle. He followed it in the snow for several miles, across the river, and down near the house to the end of the bottom, and then back toward the house. The buck was a cunning old beast, keeping in the densest cover, and often doubling back on his trail and sneaking off to one side as his pursuer passed by. Finally it grew too dark to see the tracks any longer, and Ferris came home.

Next morning early we went out to where he had left the trail, feeling very sure from his description of the place (which was less than a mile from the house) that we would get the buck; for when he had abandoned the pursuit the deer was in a copse of bushes and young trees some hundreds of yards across, and in this it had doubtless spent the night.

When we got to the thicket we first made a circuit round it to see if the wounded animal had broken cover, but though there were fresh deer tracks leading both in and out of it, none of them were made by a cripple; so we knew he was still within. After working some little time we hit on the right trail, finding where the buck had turned into the thickest growth. While Ferris followed carefully in on the tracks, I stationed myself farther on toward the outside, knowing that the buck would in all likelihood start up wind. In a minute or two Ferris came on the bed where he had passed the night, and which he had evidently just left; a shout informed me that the game was on foot, and immediately afterward the crackling and snapping of the branches were heard as the deer rushed through them. I ran as rapidly and quietly as possible toward the place where the sounds seemed to indicate that he would break cover, stopping under a small tree. A minute afterward he appeared, some thirty yards off on the edge of the thicket, and halted for a second to look round before going into the open. Only his head and antlers were visible above the bushes which hid from view the rest of his body. He turned his head sharply toward me as I raised the rifle, and the bullet went fairly into his throat, just under the jaw, breaking his neck, and bringing him down in his tracks with hardly a kick. He was a fine buck of eight points, unusually fat, considering that the rutting season was just over. We dressed it at once, and, as the house was so near, determined we would drag it there over the snow ourselves, without going back for a horse. Each took an antler, and the body slipped along very easily, but so intense was the cold that we had to keep shifting sides all the time, the hand which grasped the horn becoming numb almost immediately.

When not much molested white-tail feed in the evening or late afternoon; but if often shot at and chased they only come out at night. They are very partial to the water, and in the warm summer nights will come down into the prairie ponds and stand knee-deep in them, eating the succulent marsh plants. Most of the plains rivers flow through sandy or muddy beds with no vegetable growth, and to these, of course, the deer merely come down to drink or refresh themselves by bathing, as they contain nothing to eat.

At times the white-tail will lie so close that it may almost be trodden on. One June morning I was riding down along the river, and came to a long bottom, crowded with rose-bushes, all in bloom. It was crossed in every direction by cattle paths, and a drove of long-horned Texans were scattered over it. A cow-pony gets accustomed to travelling at speed along the cattle trails, and the one I bestrode threaded its way among the twisted narrow paths with perfect ease, loping rapidly onward through a sea of low rose-bushes, covered with the sweet, pink flowers. They gave a bright color to the whole plain, while the air was filled with the rich, full songs of the yellow-breasted meadow larks, as they perched on the topmost sprays of the little trees. Suddenly a white-tail doe sprang up almost from under the horse's feet, and scudded off with her white flag flaunting. There was no reason for harming her, and she made a pretty picture as she bounded lightly off among the rose-red flowers, passing without heed through the ranks of the long-horned and savage-looking steers.

Doubtless she had a little spotted fawn not far away. These wee fellows soon after birth grow very cunning and able to take care of themselves, keeping in the densest part of the brush, through which they run and dodge like a rabbit. If taken young they grow very tame and are most dainty pets. One which we had round the house answered well to its name. It was at first fed with milk, which it lapped eagerly from a saucer, sharing the meal with the two cats, who rather resented its presence and cuffed it heartily when they thought it was greedy and was taking more than its share. As it grew older it would eat bread or potatoes from our hands, and was perfectly fearless. At night it was let go or put in the cow-shed, whichever was handiest, but it was generally round in time for breakfast next morning. A blue ribbon with a bell attached was hung round its neck, so as to prevent its being shot; but in the end it shared the fate of all pets, for one night it went off and never came back again.

Only once have I ever killed a white-tail buck while hunting on horseback; and at that time I had been expecting to fall in with black-tail.

This was while we had been making a wagon trip to the westward following the old Keogh trail, which was made by the heavy army wagons that journeyed to Fort Keogh in the old days when the soldiers were, except a few daring trappers, the only white men to be seen on the last great hunting-ground of the Indians. It was abandoned as a military route several years ago, and is now only rarely travelled over, either by the canvas-topped ranch-wagon of some wandering cattle-men—like ourselves—or else by a small party of emigrants, in two or three prairie schooners, which contain all their household goods. Nevertheless, it is still as plain and distinct as ever. The two deep parallel ruts, cut into the sod by the wheels of the heavy wagon, stretch for scores of miles in a straight line across the level prairie, and take great turns and doublings to avoid the impassable portions of the Bad Lands. The track is always perfectly plain, for in the dry climate of the western plains the action of the weather tends to preserve rather than to obliterate it; where it leads downhill, the snow water has cut and widened the ruts into deep gullies, so that a wagon has at those places to travel alongside the road. From any little rising in the prairie the road can be seen a long way off, as a dark line, which, when near, resolves itself into two sharply defined parallel cuts.

On the trip in question we had at first very bad weather. Leaving the ranch in the morning, two of us, who were mounted, pushed on ahead to hunt, the wagon following slowly, with a couple of spare saddle ponies leading behind it. Early in the afternoon, while riding over the crest of a great divide, which separates the drainage basins of two important creeks, we saw that a tremendous storm was brewing with that marvellous rapidity which is so marked a characteristic of weather changes on the plains.

We spurred hard to get out of the open, riding with loose reins for the creek. The center of the storm swept by behind us, fairly across our track, and we only got a wipe from the tail of it. Yet this itself we could not have faced in the open. The first gust caught us a few hundred yards from the creek, almost taking us from the saddle, and driving the rain and hail in stinging level sheets against us. We galloped to the edge of a deep wash-out, scrambled into it at the risk of our necks, and huddled up with our horses underneath the windward bank. Here we remained pretty well sheltered until the storm was over. Although it was August, the air became very cold. The wagon was fairly caught, and would have been blown over if the top had been on; the driver and horses escaped without injury, pressing under the leeward side, the storm coming so level that they did not need a roof to protect them from the hail. Where the center of the whirlwind struck it did great damage.

The wagon came on to the creek, along whose banks we had taken shelter, and we then went into camp. It rained all night, and there was a thick mist, with continual sharp showers, all the next day and night. The wheeling was, in consequence, very heavy, and after striking the Keogh trail, we were able to go along it but a few miles before the fagged-out look of the team and the approach of evening warned us that we should have to go into camp while still a dozen miles from any pool or spring. Accordingly we made what would have been a dry camp had it not been for the incessant down-pour of rain, which we gathered in the canvas wagon-sheet and in our oilskin overcoats in sufficient quantity to make coffee, having with infinite difficulty started a smouldering fire just to leeward of the wagon. The horses, feeding on the soaked grass, did not need water. An antelope, with the bold and heedless curiosity sometimes shown by its tribe, came up within two hundred yards of us as we were building the fire, but though one of us took a shot at him, it missed. Our shaps and oilskins had kept us perfectly dry, and as soon as our frugal supper was over, we coiled up among the boxes and bundles inside the wagon and slept soundly till daybreak.

When the sun rose next day, the third we were out, the sky was clear, and we two horsemen at once prepared to make a hunt. Some three miles off to the south of where we were camped, the plateau on which we were sloped off into a great expanse of broken ground, with chains upon chains of steep hills, separated by deep valleys, winding and branching in every direction, their bottoms filled with trees and brushwood. Toward this place we rode, intending to go into it some little distance, and then to hunt along through it near the edge.

As soon as we got down near the brushy ravine we rode along without talking, guiding the horses as far as possible on earthy places, where they would neither stumble nor strike their feet against stones, and not letting our rifle barrels or spurs clink against any thing. Keeping outside of the brush, a little up the side of the hill, one of us would ride along each side of the ravine, examining intently with our eyes every clump of trees or brushwood. For some time we saw nothing, but, finally, as we were riding both together round the jutting spur of a steep hill, my companion suddenly brought his horse to a halt, and pointing across the shelving bend to a patch of trees well up on the opposite side of a broad ravine, asked me if I did not see a deer in it. I was off the horse in a second, throwing the reins over his head. We were in the shadow of the cliff-shoulder, and with the wind in our favor; so we were unlikely to be observed by the game. I looked long and eagerly toward the spot indicated, which was about a hundred and twenty-five yards from us, but at first could see nothing. By this time, however, the experienced plainsman who was with me was satisfied that he was right in his supposition, and he told me to try again and look for a patch of red. I saw the patch at once, just glimmering through the bushes, but should certainly never have dreamed it was a deer if left to myself. Watching it attentively I soon saw it move enough to satisfy me where the head lay; kneeling on one knee and (as it was a little beyond point-blank range) holding at the top of the portion visible, I pulled trigger, and the bright-colored patch disappeared from among the bushes. The aim was a good one, for, on riding up to the brink of the ravine, we saw a fine white-tail buck lying below us, shot through just behind the shoulder; he was still in the red coat, with his antlers in the velvet.

CHAPTER XVI.

CONSPIRACY.

"It is significant to you, then?" Thomas asked, uneasily, with a faint smile.

"Oh, certainly not," returned John Lamm, sarcastically. "It doesn't mean anything. But don't delay. How did Marion act? What did she have to say for herself?"

The detective, instead of resuming his seat, began to walk about the room with his hands behind him.

"She hadn't anything to say for herself," returned Thomas. "That's just the trouble. She acted queer—queerer than Stella had ever seen her act in her life."

"How queer?"

"As the girl expresses it, she seemed like a person walking in her sleep. She spoke to Stella, but in a mechanical way, as if her mind were quite elsewhere all the time. They went back to the depot and rode out to Swampscott together."

"Do you mean to say that Marion expressed no surprise when she saw Stella in the street?"

"Momentarily she seemed aroused, but as soon as Stella began to account for herself she relapsed into her 'frozen' condition again."

"What a woman she is!"

"She was not strong enough to conceal from her sister that something terrible had happened. She was so dazed and unnatural that the young girl was frantic with apprehension."

"Of course this places it beyond a doubt that Marion had either killed her legal father or had seen him killed."

"But, my dear Lamm, I can't entertain the first idea for a minute. What possible motive could there be for her?"

"It is to be determined simply by the fact of whether the girl was alone in the house that night."

"Ah, precisely. That is what I am working to find out. Well, Lamm, on the whole journey home, Marion Stackhouse had but two sentences to utter which seem to have any bearing upon the case. The first was when Stella made some mention of Stackhouse. 'Never speak to me of that man again,' said Marion, fiercely. 'He is not my husband.' And again, just before they got to the house, seizing her sister's wrist, 'Stella,' she whispered, 'do you want to see me in my grave? Then never tell a living soul where I have been.'"

"Thunder and guns!" ejaculated Lamm. "That woman is the princess of mysteries. Doesn't it strike you a little peculiar that she should continue to assert that Stackhouse is not her husband? Mind you, she always puts it in that way. I have heard her say it myself. 'He is not my husband.' Now why shouldn't she say, 'I refuse to live with this man any longer,' not forever, 'He is not my husband.' Wasn't the marriage public?"

"To be sure it was. The marriage occurred in St. Paul's church, in the presence of hundreds of people."

Lamm came and placed his hand softly on the reporter's shoulder.

"You don't imagine, Thomas," he questioned below his breath, "that she had been secretly married to this man Fetridge previous to his departure for Australia?"

"What an idea!" cried Thomas, amused. "You seem anxious to give her a monomania on the marriage question. If married already to Fetridge what earthly reason could induce her to marry Stackhouse? It seems to me that you have got a complication there not likely to arise in any well-regulated family."

"Perhaps. But I've gone far enough in this case to know that there is something different behind it than anything I ever met with in all my life before. But to go on. Of course Stella is frightened to death by Marion's reference to the grave, and refrained from telling anybody where she had seen her, until you got it out of her."

"So you might know by the way things have gone on. She was scared enough that night, you may be sure, but the next day when the news came of the murder you can imagine the effect. There seems to have been a great scene between the sisters. Stella came out horrified at Marion's calmness. Marion would tell her absolutely nothing except such enigmatical sentences as these: 'I am not responsible. The affair is out of my hands. Justice will overtake the guilty. Let me alone. If you betray me I shall kill myself. You surely do not believe me capable for any cause of killing a man who has taken the place of my own father. I loved Father North, as well as you did. I could not have harmed him if I had hated him'—all of which was scarcely calculated to appease Stella's agony of apprehension. It was not, however, till the young girl discovered that her sister was sleeping with her father's pistol under her pillow that she quite lost her head, and believed that Marion was really guilty."

"What! The weapon that killed Paul North?" asked the detective, almost helpless with amazement.

"Presumably, since she must have brought it with her from the Marlboro street house the night of the murder, and one of its barrels had been recently discharged."

"What a nerve that woman has!" murmured the detective. "And how in the world did Stella make the discovery?"

"I'll tell you, Lamm. It was in the middle of the night on Saturday. The body of the murdered man had been brought home, and it lay in the hall below stairs ready for the funeral. You can imagine the effect on this young girl, who is of an affectionate disposition, and whose life up to this time had been one merry smile. Everything goes to show that she was the petted darling of her father. Of course, however fond and proud anybody might have been of Marion, she was scarcely the person to be made a pet of. And with this awful cloud of horror and suspicion weighing upon her, Stella could not sleep. The ghost of the poisoned king of Denmark was no more real to Hamlet than was the spirit of her father, threatening with awful finger the perpetrators of his woeful murder, to this young girl. Her fears for Marion under the weight of the night became absolutely appalling. Though not what is called a religious girl, Stella could no longer trust to any earthly aid. She resolved to go and pray by Marion's bedside."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Sept. 13, 1908.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Commending our society.—I. By church attendance.—Ps. xxvi, 1-12; Heb. x, 21-25.

It should be the desire of every Christian Endeavorer to commend the society to the church of which it forms a part and to the community in which the society exists. Self preservation and increased growth in numbers, in grace and in fruitfulness demand that this be done. The society that does not commend itself will soon die for want of additional members and the sympathy and co-operation of the officers and members of the church. Such commendation, therefore, is an important fact in the life of every Christian Endeavor society.

One of the very best methods by which a Christian Endeavor society may commend itself is suggested by the topic—by church attendance—and that means, of course, by regular attendance. The meeting time of most societies is just before the evening church service. Suppose from 50 to 100 young people are present. If as soon as the society is dismissed all immediately quietly and devoutly enter the church service what a deep impression they will make upon the entire congregation! The society at once commends itself to all present. The general verdict is that Christian Endeavor means something, and parents want their sons and daughters to become identified with it.

But behold the opposite picture, which is too frequently seen in some societies! The Christian Endeavor benediction is pronounced, and a procession begins from the church. A few may be compelled to return home. But the others are seen starting in couples for a walk, hurrying to catch a trolley to another church, where a special musical programme has been announced or a sensational sermon subject has been advertised. What will people think of such a society? What will the pastor think as he sees the vacant places in the church? What will the church officials think? What will the people think? All will think that the Christian Endeavor society is a failure; that it trains the young people to break their vows and should have very little consideration or place in the church's life. Moreover, for your own sakes you need to regularly attend your own church services. You have vowed to do so. Nor is that "growth in grace" in transient church going—here at one service and some place else at the next. Transients grow little in grace and in knowledge. But they do grow in restlessness, and many sooner or later have really no church home—a sad state for Christians.

Church attendance is lightly esteemed by many. This is a great mistake. It is of tremendous importance, else Christ would not have founded His church nor have died for it. Christian Endeavorers, do your part in stemming this tide of indifference by being faithfully in your place in your own church at every service.

BIBLE READINGS.

Ps. lxvi, 1-15; lxxxiv, 1-12; cxvi, 17-19; cxxii, 1-9; Acts ii, 42-47; xx, 28; Eph. v, 25-29.

One Secret of Success.

One secret of Christian Endeavor's success is its definiteness. It does not say to young people, "Be good." It says: "Be good for something. Be good enough to make it the rule of your life to pray and read the Bible, to support your own church loyally, to be an outspoken disciple of Christ with a faith that is worth talking about, to do your share of the committee work—in short, be good for something definite and practical that comes down out of the clouds and gets its feet upon the earth." The happiest and hardest workers in our churches today are the young people who have let this genuine Christian Endeavor idea soak in until it has become the active, dominating force in their lives. This same principle, which has made Christian Endeavor such a power in the development of the individual, applies equally to the collective work of the society. The successful, progressive society is the one that sets before its members definite aims and holds them to account for the progress made.—William Shaw, General Secretary of the United Society of Christian Endeavor.

A Prison Endeavorer's Work.

When the Christian Endeavor society held its seventeenth international convention in Nashville, Tenn., before the convention was called to order a Kentucky pastor presented to Dr. Clark a gavel, the gift of the Christian Endeavor society of Eddyville prison. It was made by a prison Endeavorer after his working hours. It was beautifully fashioned from Kentucky wood with a penknife and a file and was ornamented with silver bands. "This brother," said the speaker, "was led to the Saviour by the Endeavor society, and the polish and taste he has given to the otherwise rough material in this gavel are emblematic of the change effected by the gospel in that prison."

Christian Endeavor Seasons.

The Watchword tells of a meeting, a New Year's social, which a Christian Endeavor society once held. One of the members represented the old year and told of what the society had done during the past year. At the close of his address he introduced the New Year in the form of a charming young lady, who then brought before the society her plans for the future. She introduced her four sisters, Spring, Summer, Autumn and Winter, who each told what they intended to do for Christ and the church. A poet could immortalize himself on such a theme.

LOCAL Y. M. C. A. NINE THE STATE CHAMPIONS

Following a conference of officials and team managers of the Y. M. C. A. State baseball league at Newark, yesterday, it was announced that the umpire's decision awarding the disputed Orange-Newark game to the former nine, had been upheld. This gives Plainfield the State championship with a record of eight victories and but two losses. In the event of the disputed game having been awarded to Newark or played over with victory for the same nine, Plainfield and Newark would have been tie.

There is one postponed game remaining to be played between Orange and Summit and aside from this the record for the teams is as follows: Plainfield, won 8, lost 2; Newark, won 7, lost 3; Orange, won 6, lost 3; Summit, won 4, lost 5; Trenton, won 4, lost 6; Elizabeth, won 0, lost 10.

Manager Listman offered to play the Newarks a post-schedule series of three games and plans were underway when the Newarks decided the season was too far advanced for three and as one would not be entirely satisfactory, they preferred to call the arrangements off.

BASEBALL.

The Monroe A. C. has won four straight games and expects to win the rest of the season. It defeated the Climax A. C. 12 to 4; the Jr. O. U. A. M., 12 to 2; the Iola A. C., 12 to 5; and the Plainfield A. C., 4 to 3. This is the first game out of 13 that the P. A. C. has lost. The players of the Monroe A. C. are as follows: O. Dodge, VanArsdale, Vail, Beekman, Apgar, Fritz, Kirkman, Hann, Broomer, Rhudie and Woodruff.

PROFESSIONAL BASKETBALL SERIES IS ARRANGED.

Lovers of basketball are promised a series of fast games this season, commencing on Saturday night, October 10, when a professional team, under the management of William Hahn, of East Second street, and his cousin, John G. Otken, formerly of the famous Flushing Giants, will play here as the Plainfield A. A. A schedule of twenty-five games with the strongest teams in the East, including many college fives, is being arranged. The opening game will be with the St. George A. C., champions of Hudson county, and on October 17, the Yale College five will play here.

The games will be played every Saturday night commencing with October 10 for twenty-five nights. All the leading college and athletic club teams will be brought here and during the season the Company G team, of Gloversville, N. Y., considered the world's champions, will be an attraction.

The lineup of the team that will represent this city will be as follows: T. Lamb, left-forward, formerly of South Sides, of Pittsburg, Pa.; Podesta, right-forward, formerly of Xaviers, of New York; Otken, centre formerly Flushing Giants; Barger, left-guard, formerly St. Peter's, of New York; Hackman, right-guard, formerly N. J. A. A. A., of Vermont. All the games will be played at Saengerbund Hall on Somerset street.

Miss Emma Zink, of Flatbush, N. Y., is visiting Miss Bertha Jones, of Essex street.

Miss Clara Gullberg and Mrs. James Scott, of South avenue, have returned from a month's visit with relatives in Pennsylvania. They visited at Hazelton, Weatherly, Mauch Chunk and Palmerton. During their stay they were taken through several coal mines.

POLITICAL NOTES.

Charles H. Gallagher, member of the Democratic State Committee, and Frank S. Katzenbach, Jr., late Democratic candidate for Governor, are arranging for the reception to be tendered at Trenton, to William J. Bryan on the evening of September 15. Mr. Bryan and his party will go from Camden in an observation car attached to the regular train leaving Camden at 5:26. The visitors will be entertained at dinner at Trenton by Mr. Gallagher. Mr. Bryan will speak in the Taylor Opera House. Mr. Katzenbach will preside.

The Montclair Democratic Club has indorsed the following citizens for offices at that place: Mayor, Otto C. Wierum; Assessor-at-Large, Charles H. Baker; freeholders, William Senior and William C. Barkley. The club will open headquarters in Bloomfield avenue. The officers are: President, William C. Barkley; vice-presidents, Frank Dunning, F. A. Clark and John Blondel; corresponding secretary, Harold P. Anderson; financial secretary, Thomas Hughes; treasurer, Peter J. Carey.

The Independence League of Union county will hold a mass meeting tomorrow night at Sanger hall, in Elizabeth. The speakers will include Joseph R. Buchanan and John Roach, of Newark; Clarence Shearn, Alfred Boulton, Charles Gehring and Rev. Dr. A. D. Bush, of New York. The county candidates will be introduced.

North Plainfield township Democrats at Maul's hotel last night decided on these candidates: Township clerk, three years, George Mobus; township committeeman, three years, John Mobus; surveyor of highways, one year, Roy Smith; pound keeper, Thomas McGann; assessor, three years, Francis E. Bodin; delegate to congressional convention, Francis E Bodin. The appropriation for roads was fixed at $1,500 and for the poor at $500.

A number of speeches were made by township voters.

County Chairman Frank H. Smith, who has been recuperating his health on Long Lake, in the Adirondacks, is expected home in two weeks.

Plans for a vigorous campaign in Elizabeth, with all of the fancywork, street parades, posters, torchlight processions and soforth, were Tuesday night outlined by the members of the Downtown Republican Club, who, after hearing a number of addresses by candidates for various offices, wound up by taking a definite stand in favor of advancing the interests of Senator Ackerman for reelection; Carlton B. Pierce, for Assembly; Dr. Victor Mravlag for Mayor, and Joseph C. Cahill for Freeholder.

At the meeting of the Martine Club of Elizabeth, to be held in Cornell Hall, Second street and Port avenue, in that city tomorrow night, addresses will be made by Mayoralty Candidates Dennis F. Collins and John S. Sauer, and James E. Martine, candidate for Sheriff, according to the program which has been arranged.

The petitions of Dr. Victor Mravlag and General Dennis F. Collins, as candidates for Mayor of Elizabeth, were filed in the office of Elizabeth City Clerk Kenah yesterday. General Collins' petition is said to have had 118 signers, but because one of the sheets of the document filed with the City Clerk has a section torn off, the names of only 107 of these could be learned, the others being on the missing piece of paper. Dr. Mravlag's petition contains sixty-seven names.

R. Henry Depew, president of the People's Lobby of New Jersey, is strongly opposed to the candidacy of former Mayor James F. Buckle, for school board. He has written a number of influential Republicans objecting to Mr. Buckle's nomination.

At any rate it will be smooth sailing for State Senator Askerman and Assemblyman Pierce.

James E. Martine spent the day with the Robert Davis Association yesterday on the occasion of their annual outing and strange to say did not accept a nomination of any sort.

Winston Churchill, the New Hampshire novelist who writes of politics in his native State, appeared at Commonwealth Hall in East Orange, N. J., last night and spoke in behalf of the leadership of Senator Everett Colby, who also addressed the audience. Later Mr. Churchill, Senator Colby, Starr J. Murphy and Sheriff Sommer spoke at a Republican banner raising and rally in Montclair.

North Plainfield's Republicans will organize a campaign club at Saengerbund hall on Monday night. The building has been leased for the campaign and will be opened every night for the young men of the borough A big attendance is expected at the organization meeting.

Newspaper Man Reported Dead.

Probably, because he did not publicly announce in the newspapers of his home town, Westfield, Mass that he intended leaving for Plainfield, where he has taken a position as a newspaper reporter, it was rumored at Westfield today that George W. Searle, was dead. A personal friend of Mr. Searle's in Westfield, telegraphed the latter today seeking information as to his whereabouts. Mr Searle immediately wired back in the words of Mark Twain that "the report is grossly exaggerated."

THOMAS' HORSES BRING AN INSIGNIFICANT SUM

While E. R. Thomas, the former banker and turfman, was groaning on a bed of pain in the Roosevelt Hospital yesterday, under the name of "Mr. Jenkins," his highly prized stallions and broodmares, seventy-eight in number, were being sold under the hammer at a sheriff's sale. The horses, which were estimated to be worth $100,000, and had cost Thomas $150,000, brought the insignificant sum of $18,075.

The sale was made to satisfy a judgment obtained against Thomas by the Metropolitan Trust Company of New York. Judge William A. Coddington, of Reed & Coddington, of this city, looked after the creditor's interests. The Homedale Stud Farm near Red Bank was the scene of the sale. Hermis, which cost Thomas $60,000, brought $900. The biggest price obtained for a horse at the sale yesterday was $4,000, for Lady Amelia, a mare that cost Thomas $15,000.

PERSONAL.

Among recent arrivals registered at the Bristol, Asbury Park, is D. T. Kenney, of this city.

Adam Neuman, of East Fifth street, is not able to be at his place of business on account of illness.

Dr. James F. Lawson, of East Third street, has returned from Point Pleasant, where he spent a week.

Rev. and Mrs. Tomkinson, of Harrisburg, Pa., are visiting at the home of their son, C. C. Tomkinson, of Grove street.

Miss Edith Harmer, of Toronto, Canada, is making an extended visit at the home of her sister, Mrs. James Stewart, of Grant avenue.

David J. Wolfe, of West Front street, leaves this week for Denver, Col., where he will take a four years' course of study in forestry in the State Agriculture College at Denver.

Miss Ella Lunger, of Watchung avenue, has returned to her position as bookkeeper at Gayle's hardware store, after a pleasant vacation spent at West New Brighton, Staten Island.

Mr. Harrington, of Rockview terrace, sailed today for Europe, where he will spend a few weeks. His daughter, Miss Helen Harrington, who has spent the summer abroad, will return with him.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Bailey, of Duer street, returned home from Manasquan, yesterday, where they have been for two weeks. Her son Pierson is visiting at the home of P. H. Bennett, Ocean Grove, and will return home Saturday.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

At the Plainfield Rescue Mission tonight at 8 o'clock in the W. C. T. U. Hall, George H. Fountain will speak. There will be special music. Everybody is welcome.

After being discontinued since August 1, the evening services will be resumed at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church on Sunday, September 13. Rev. Robert E. Speer will preach at both services and will no doubt be greeted by large congregations.

GREAT BASEBALL, THIS

MANY FEATURES ON THE SIDE.

Corps de Ballet Will Assist in Keeping Score and Volunteers Will Serve Homemade Lemonade.

Having made records in steeplechase and tennis events, members of the Watchung Hunt Club have decided to seek new laurels and on Saturday next will jump into the baseball world. Two teams, made up of married men on one side and unattached citizens on the other, will battle for supremacy on a diamond at the club grounds and incidentally furnish large quantites of fun for all who care to look on. The contest will be the result of a boast on the part of the younger fellows that they had an aggregation that could clean up any kind of a nine, the New York Americans excluded. The defi spurred the heads of households, who are club members, into quick action and they are in readiness to see the boys make good.

This is the cast of characters for the married men: Righter, ss; Harry Lovell, 3b; Benjamin Wood, 2b; Gilbert Fletcher, c; A. L. Otterson, 1b; George S. Ring, lf; W. L. Lockwood, p; Daniel Runkle, rf; Harry Butler, lf; substitutes, E. E. Iremonger, John Greason and Elliott Cutter. The single men will put this array of talent against them: Wildey, ss, Alpers, 3b; W. Brown, 2b; Morris Dumont c; Hartley Mellick, 1b; Harry Finch, lf; Bulkley, p; Harvey Fisk, rf; Fred Goddard, rf; substitutes, Jack Tenney, Earl Stockton and Willard Wadsworth. H. M. Stockton, provided several applications for accident and life insurance can be passed upon in time, will be the referee and Fred Butler, assisted by a corps de ballet, will tally the runs as they come in and check up as many of the errors as is possible. Of course, this latter part is always a hard matter as every scorer has his friends, even in a baeball game.

The contest will be called promptly at 3 o'clock and all memzers of the club are to have the privilege of bringing as many guests as they please. They will have other things to occupy the time as volunteers from the roster list will serve lemonade and an orchestra will provide instrumental music. A table d' hote lunch is to be served at the clubhouse during the afternoon and in the evening there will be a dinner The defeated side in the baseball match will have to buy dinner for the winners together with the substitutes, the lemonade distributors and the umpire's body guard. At the conclusion of this part of the affair, medals of a special make and elaborate design will be awarded the victors.

OGDEN M. REID REPORTER ON HIS FATHER'S PAPER.

Ogden Mills Reid, only son of Whitelaw Reid, Ambassador to St. James's, is hunting down the elusive political item as a reporter on his father's newspaper, The Tribune. He began yesterday, and last night he was waiting in vain at the Hotel Knickerbocker to form the acquaintance of William James Conners, of Buffalo, and the Democratic State Committee. Later, at an hour when the seasoned reporter would have called it a day's work, he cheerfully volunteered to go on a still hunt for Republican State Chairman Timothy L. Woodruff, who is a mighty difficult man to find after Republican State Headquarters has closed for the day. "He takes to the work as a fish takes to water," said one of the veteran workers on The Tribune, in discussing young Mr. Reid's first day as a newspaper reporter.

Young Mr. Reid's appearance as an active worker on The Tribune staff recalls the story printed recently in The Times that Whitelaw Reid had refused several offers to purchase his newspaper on the ground that he desired to leave it as a legacy to his son.

The latter is a Yale graduate of the Class of 1904. Subsequently he took a course at the Yale Law School. At the university he was chiefly noted for his interest in aquatic sports. In appearance he does not greatly resemble his father, the Ambassador.

THREAT TO BURN WHITE FACE.

Man Arrested for Attempt to Blackmail Mountain Lumber Company.

Lake Placid, N. Y., Sept. 10.—Probably never before has a mountain been made a medium for blackmail, but that is the use to which John St. Clair of Bloomingdale is charged with putting Mount White Face in a letter to the T. J. & J. Rogers Company of Ausable Forks, demanding the immediate payment of $200 under penalty of a fire, which, in addition to burning the company's holdings of about 15,000 acres of timber land about the base, would probably have swept the entire mountain, destroying forever the wonderful scenic beauty of White Face.

The letter was sent to the company over the name of L. H. Murphy. The company officials decided to set a trap for the man. A check for $100 was mailed to L. H. Murphy, at Bloomingdale. St. Clair, it is charged, called for mail in the name of Murphy, and he was followed to this village by ex-Sheriff S. W. Barnard. After an unsuccessful attempt to cash a check for $100 at the American House, the man succeeded in getting it cashed by a tradesman and was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Allen.

GOOD DIGESTION IS NECESSARY TO BEAUTY.

"To look young and keep your beauty you must have geen digestion," says a beauty culturist. "We feed our patrons upon herbs; we kive them greens and we advise them to take acid fruits. When a gypsy woman gets out of sorts she lives upon dandeloin greens; she mixes sweet herbes; she doctors herself with the fruits of the earth, and she recovers.

"Outdoor life is everything for the woman who wants to keep young.

"Her walk gives away the woman who does not want people to know how old she is. Usually she loses her elasticity. And she takes to high heels and stilted walk. Wear conventional clothing and be elastic in your gait; in that way you will look younger.

"I advise women generally to join a dancing class. By taking the steps one can keep up one's elasticity winter and summer. I have a class of four women who come three times a week to learn the gypsy fandangoes and the Spanish dances. They find that they breathe better, feel better and are more healthy generally from this exercise."

To Make a Violet Perfume.

A delightful perfume can be made to resemble the delicate odor of violets. Put a few drops of genuine oil of rhodium on a lump of sugar, grind it in a glass mortar or bowl and mix thoroughly with powdered orris root. It will take but a few drops of the oil for a large bulk, and but one drop of oil for an ounce of powdered orris root. It is very lasting.

S. S. WORKERS' OFFICERS

Rev. F. T. B. Randolph President of Middlesex County Sunday School Association.

MANY EXCELLENT TALKS.

Rev. Dr. W. H. S. Demarest Makes Address on "The Home and the Sunday School.

The forty-fourth annual convention of the Middlesex County Sunday-school Association which was held in the First Baptist church, New Market, yesterday brought together the largest gathering of Sunday-school workers in the history of the county and was considered the most successful. The entire day was given up to a considered of every phase of Sunday-school work and helpful addresses by prominent religious workers.

The concluding session was held last night, when following the final reports, etc., the address was made by Rev. W. H. S. Demarest, president of Rutgers College, whose subject was "The Home and the Sunday-school." He treated in a masterly way the relations that should exist between the home and the Sunday-school, showing to what great extent one is dependent upon the other if the Sunday-school is to be made a success.

Features of the morning session were the addresses by Miss Angie Wray, county elementary superintendent, on the subject of "Two ways of Reaching the Child," and Miss Rose Scott, State elementary superintendent, on "Teaching Material." In the latter address Miss Scott took occasion to speak of the harmful influence of the comic suppliments. She declared that they put ideas into the minds of children that were not for their best interest and often counteracted the influence of the Sunday-school teacher. She urged all to do their best to discourage the entrance of the comic suppliment among children.

The program for the afternoon included "A Word from Our State Executive Committee," E. W. Barnes, of Perth Amboy; round table on the card answers, conference led by Rev. W. T. Dorward, of Stelton, "An Impression of the Louisville Convention," by E. W. Barnes, of Perth Amboy, the annual address; "The Debt of the School to the Older Scholars," Rev. Milton S. Littlefield, pastor of the Bay Ridge Presbyterian church, of Brooklyn, concluding with the election of officers and fixing the place of next meeting, which will be at the Methodist church, Sayreville. The afternoon session closed with an address by Rev. E. M. Fergusson, State secretary on "Fifty Years of Progress," and "Graded Lessons, or What the Action of the Louisville Convention Means to Your School," by Mrs. J. Woodbridge Narnes, former International field worker.

President, Rev. F. T. B. Reynolds Spotswood; first vice-president, Rev. W. W. Casselberry, Dunellen; second vice-president, Rev. H. J. Belting, New Brunswick; third vice-president, Rev. John F. Fenton, Metuchen; recording secretary, Joseph Thorne, Metuchen; corresponding secretary and treasurer, Daniel Wray, New Brunswick; executive committee, William Edgar, Woodbridge; W. A. Crowell, Metuchen; E. R. Proctor, Perth Amboy; H. B. Zimmerman, New Brunswick; L. C. Hoffman, Cranbury; J. G. Burdick, New Market; R. P. Rodan, Sayreville; home department superintendent, Rev. H N. Jordan, New Market; county primary superintendent, Miss Angie Wray, New Brunswick; teacher-training superintendent, Prof. T. G. VanKirk, Metuchen; member State executive committee, Edward W. Barnes Perth Amboy; adult class work superintendent, Rev. E. F. Garett, New Brunswick. Township secretaries, Howard J. Butcher, Cranbury; George P. Farr, East Brunswick; Charles P. Brown, Madison; James P. Burrows, Monroe; William Applegate, New Brunswick; Howard S. DeHart, North Brunswick; Joseph Clark, Perth Amboy; David J. Perrine, Piscataway; Charles A. Whitlock, Raritan; Charles W. Fisher, Sayreville; William M. Emmons, South Amboy; P. D. Emmons, South Brunswick; William H. Prall, Woodbridge.

Miss Angie Wray, county primary superintendent, then named the following as district superintendents: Miss Laura Scudder, Cranbury; Miss Anna Fitts and Miss Beulah Stults, East Brunswick; Mrs. Anna O. Wall, Madison; Miss Florence Emmons, Monroe; Miss Anna Knox and Mrs. Lyle VanNuis, New Brunswick; Miss Susie Crabiel, North Brunswick; Mrs. A. H. Hubbard, Perth Amboy; Mrs. Charles B. FIREMEN'S BIG FUND CAUSES HOT ARGUMENT

There was almost a free fight at the opening session of the annual convention of the New Jersey State Firemen's Relief Association, which convened on the Steel Pier at Atlantic City yseterday, over the control of a fund amounting to $1,000,000 which is supposed to be used only for the benefit of men injured in action or forced to leave the service because of old age.

Members of the Exempt Firemen's Association took advantage of a recent law to ring in about 100 delegates and by clever lobbying secured 200 more. This made the fight between their faction and the old members of the association proper, led by General Bird W. Spencer, president for thirty years, a most bitter one.

After balloting for hours the Spencer faction won out, but only by the narrow margin of a score of votes.

The following officers were elected: President, Bird W. Spencer, Passaic; vice-presidents, first district, Bayard C. Stavely, Haddonfield; second district, Samuel Carhart, Ocean City; third district, Edward Simonson, Freehold; fourth district, Jacob H. Geedert, Somerville; fifth district, Robert F. Oram, Wharton; sixth district, Charles S. Stelle, Newton; seventh district, Arthur Russell, Glen Ridge; eighth district, John B. Mayer, Millburn; ninth district, Egbert Seymour, Bayonne; tenth district, Charles Sneath, Guttenberg; treasurer, John J. Lane, Summit; secretary, William Exall, Newark; auditor, John S. Gibson, Newark; counsel, William A. Cotter, Newark

The convention voted to go back to Atlantic City next year. There were 201 associations represented there, with capitalization of $1,110,000.

EXCISE PROBERS HEAR ALL ABOUT HARD CIDER

Applejack and hard cider came in for the attention of the members of the State Excise Commission at a sitting at Dover yesterday. It was the testimony of Prosecutor Henry Huston, of Sussex county, corroborated by Sheriff Judson K. Gunn, of the same county, and others familiar with the subject that there were more cider drunks than any other kind. No licences are needed to dispense cider. Sunday laws do not interfere with its sale.

Every official who was on the stand yesterday testified to the popularity of the present excise law which provides that saloons shall keep screens down during prohibited hours. Every farmer in the apple country there abouts has a supply of cider on tap at this season of the year, and in many cases it is "hard" enought to make things hum when a few glasses of it have been stowed away. Then too, there is the famous old Jersey "applejack," native of that neck of the woods.

Applejack and cider look somewhat alike, and the home supplies of both, together with the ease with which cider may be sold during hours when saloons should be closed apparently contribute to make the present excise laws popular.

Mr. Huston said that he believed there should be an amendment to the excise law adding cider to the list of "vinous, spirituous, malt and other liquors" which may only be under a license.

The testimony showed that it wasn't difficult to get a drink on Sunday at Lake Hopatcong, and that there were boats selling liquor to campers and boarders along the shore. It was brought out, too, that there were twenty-five prosecutions by Prosecutor Charles A. Rathbun, of Morris, last year for violation of excise statutes. Most of these were for keeping speakeasies in the mining districts.

It was shown that there are 140 licenses in force in Morris county. There was evidence submitted to prove that the drug stores in Morristown and other municipalities of Morris county sell as much or more liquor than the saloons and hotels.

Warren county's licensed liquor dispensaries are mostly in Phillipsburg—three-fourths of them are there, in fact. Assemblyman Joseph Firth is Mayor of that place.

Among those called by President Charles J. Fisk yesterday were Prosecutor John I. Blair Reiley, County Clerk Charles Hoagland and Sheriff Andrew Merrick, of Warren county; Prosecutor Rathbun, County Clerk Daniel S. Voorhees and Sheriff Geo. Shaw, of Morris, and Prosecutor Huston, Sheriff Gunn and County Clerk Harvey S. Hopkins, of Sussex. Commissioners Howe, Rice, Backes and the attaches of the commission were busy until late considering the testimony of the day.

Excellent Reports and Helpful Address at Annual Meeting of the Local Association.

MRS. TOMLINSON PRESIDENT.

Receipts for Year $643.44—Mrs. Emma Bourne, the State President, Gives a Talk.

Officers were elected, reports presented, a reception tendered to the oldest member, Mrs. Mehala Sims, and other interesting features, comprised the annual meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, held in the rooms on Madison avenue, yesterday. The reports showed the union to be in good condition as to number and finances. Miss Mary Howlett, treasurer, reported the receipts for the year to be $643.44 and the expenditures $634.38, leaving a balance of $9.06

In the election of officers, Mrs. Elizabeth A. Parse retired in favor of Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, who is also the county president. The officers chosen are as follows:

President, Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson; corresponding secretary, Mrs. P. H. Bennett; recording secretary, Mrs. T. C. Bodine; treasurer, Miss May E. Howlett; honorary vice-presidents, Mrs. J. W. Yates, and Mrs. Elizabeth A. Parse; superintendent Loyal Temperance Legion, Mrs. Alvah TenEyck; evangelistic and alms, Mrs. Gilbert VanNest; flower, Mrs. John Manly; literature, Mrs. L. A. Udell, Sabbath observance, Mrs. M. Winter, scientific temperance instruction, Miss Anna Claypoole; social meetings and red letter days, Mrs. I. N. West; soldier and sailor work, Mrs. M. C. Dobbins; Sunday-school, Mrs. M. Winter; press, Mrs. M. C. Dobbins; work for foreigners, Mrs. Jacob Voehl.

During the afternoon Mrs. Emma Bourne, State President, made a short address in which she reviwed the success of the local option movement especially in the west and south and in her opinion where prohibition prevails the moral tone of the communities and the people has been greatly benefitted. She gave encouraging news.

Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson planned to conduct a symposium on "Does Prohizition Pay?" but so much other business was crowded in that little time was left for this, although it was touched upon to some extent in a way that tended to show that it does pay.

An interesting feature of the afternoon was the reception given to Mrs. Mehala Sims, aged 92 years, who is the oldest member of the Union, and Mrs. Augusta Roll, who is also one of the oldest members. They were each presented with bouquets of flowers and they received the congratulations of their many friends. Following this a memorial service was held for the eight members who died during the year. Tney were Mrs. John Dunham, Mrs. Shotwell, Mrs. Sarah D. Stryker, Mrs. H. H. Lowrie, Mrs. P. M. French, Mrs. Mary J. Hawkins, Mrs. Nelson Runyon and Mrs. Boice. Mrs. Tomlinson spoke briefly of the life of each one.

There was an encouraging feature presented in the report of Mrs. Alvah TenEyck, superintendent of the Loyal Temperance Legion, referring to the anti-cigarette club formed among the boys of the legion, the object being to fight against the manufacture and sale of cigaretts. Mrs. TenEyck also reported the distribution of temperance literature and presentation of Bibles to members for faithful attendance. The legion is rapidly growing membership.

The reports of all the various departments of the Union showed steady progress and the members close the old year and begin the new one under favorable auspices.

Will Tell of Conference.

Rev. Edwin Shaw, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, has returned from Boulder, Col., where he attended the general conference of the denomination. At the prayer-meeting tonight he will give a general talk concerning the conference, telling about the convocation of pastors and Christian workers, which met at Boulder the week previous to the conference. The theme for his discourse tomorrow morning will be "The Dignity of Labor."

The K. R. C. Entertained.

The K. R. C. held a meeting at the home of Allen Snyder on West Third street. After a short business session, the rest of the evening was devoted to playing cards. During the evening refreshments were served by Mrs. Aaron Snyder.

FOWLER GETS BUSY NOW

HAS SOME "TESTIMONIALS."

He Encloses Commendations for His Bill Which Congress Overwhelmingly Defeated.

That Charles N. Fowler does not regard his election to Congress as a certainty is evidenced from the fact that he has inaugurated a vigorous campaign. Today a thousand copies of his currency speech in the House on Wednesday, April 29, together with letters of commendation from Lyman J. Gage, Andrew Carnegie and Horace White, formerly editor of the New York Post, were distributed from door to door. In these letters Carnegie is quoted as calling the Aldrich bill a "makeshift." The speech is being distributed in official House of Representatives envelopes.

Fowler's nomination is almost a certainity, although he has many enemies within the party in Elizabeth and Plainfield, and in Warren and Morris counties. In view of the fact that this is a Presidential year and regarded by te Democratic leaders of the Fifth district as uncertain, they are now putting forward their best endeavors to name a candidate at the convention in Phillipsburg, on October 1, that will lessen Fowler's chances. They say that the farmers of Warren and Morris are tired of Fowler and want a change.

As yet there seems to be no Democratic candidate in the field. William R. Wilson, an Elizabeth lawyer, and fromer Prosecutor, has been mention, but Mr. Wilson, it is said, will not accept. Henry H. Isham of Elizabeth, and Joseph A. Sperry, of Cranford, are also possibilities. If Warren or Morris can put up a strong man they will be supported by the local delegates.

LOCAL LIFE GUARD RESCUED TWENTY TWO

Bringing with him a record of twenty-two rescues from the surf, to say nothing of fourteen assists, "Fat" Hurtt returned home last night after a season of lifesaving at Asbury Park. He has been one of the beach guards along the shore and established a reputation for being "on the job" that made his name famous throughout the twin resorts. He will remain in town for several weeks after which he will probably go to Jacksonville, Fla., where he has an offer to be a life-guard for the winter season.

Although he tips the beam at 220 pounds and modestly acklowledges 264 when he went to Asbury at the beginning of the summer, "Fat" is one of the best swimmers that ever lived in Plainfield. He is a veritable porpoise in the water and can remain in the roughest surf for hours at a time without tiring. Some of the rescues he affected were accomplished after the hardest kind of work and on several occasions he was about exhausted after getting unconscious bathers out of the breakers. His last rescue was made on Labor Day when he saved Mrs. S. L. Goodwin, of New York, who was overcome by a huge wave on the sand bar opposite Seventh avenue, Asbury Park.

His First Visit in Ten Years.

Thomas Pringle, a former resident of Plainfield, who conducted a horseshoeing establishment here for many years, and who is now in business near Copperstown, N. Y., is visiting his daughter, Miss Maggie Pringle of this city, and his many friends. Today he will visit friends in Elizabeth and Bloomfield and return home tonight. It is ten years since Mr. Pringle was in Plainfield, and he speaks in high praise of the many improvements in buildings and streets in the "city beautiful." While a resident here he took an active interest in the Scottish athletic sports He is a brother-in-law to Robert Murray, the auctioneer of West Front street.

Perseverance Lodge Active.

Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., will hold an important meeting tonight. Following the business session, the card and quoit tournaments inaugurated a couple of weeks ago will be continued.

—A choice assortment of vegetables at Neuman Brothers tomorrow. Bear in mind that the display at this store is always the largest in town and replenished every day.

ROBBED HIS SAMARITAN

Petman Robinson Repaid Physician's Kindly Act by Stealing His Money.

DOCTOR TREATED HIM GRATIS.

Base ingratitude of the brand first mentioned in the Biblical story of the viper that stung its benefactor was revealed in the city court, this morning, when Petman Robinson, Plainfield's "worst boy," was arraigned on two charges of theft. He was arrested on a charge of stealing a bicycle belonging to Dr. W. Kempton Browning's daughter and selling it for $3, but while the police were questioning him, yesterday, they stumbled upon another bit of wrongdoing. Dr. Browning was the victim in this case also but he took the circumstances as a good joke on himself.

Two weeks ago, the Robinson boy ran a fish hook in one of his fingers and he went to the Browning home to have it extracted. The physician placed him on a chair in a rear room in the house in order to get the advantage of a good light and after considerable effort managed to pick out the offending bit of metal. It became necessary for the doctor to go to the office for some additional dressing preparation and while he was absent, Petman went on an exploring expedition. Mrs. Browning had inadvertently left $7 in a bowl on a sideboard and a costly pearl handled penknife was close by. The boy appropriated the money and the knife and was back in his chair when the physician returned.

"Never mind the pay" the doctor said when Petman asked what his charge was for removing the fish hook; "you're a pretty good boy and we'll call it square."

The money and knife were missed the same night and Petman was suspicioned but as there was no direct evidence against him the police were not informed. Petman was not content with robbing the physician to this extent, however, but returned last Tuesday and stole the bicycle that led to his arrest. The story of the $7 and the pen knife came out when he was being questioned and it was included in the charge against him.

When the prisoner was brought before Judge Runyon today, he pleaded guilty to the two complaints and was held in $500 bail. With him at the time was arraigned Everitt Eastham, a bicycle dealer in whose place he sold the stolen wheel and Charles Wilson, a customer of Eastham's who had purchased it from him. They proved to the satisfaction of the magistrate that they were innocent of any wrongdoing in buying the machine and charge was not pressed against them. Two other colored boys, Horace Martin and Morris Somerset, to whom Petman had given part of Dr. Browning's $7, were in court also and after a severe lecturing were warned not to take money in the future unless they knew where it came from and whether or not it was stolen.

Robinson's parents have ceased interfering in his behalf and he will be committed to Elizabeth, pending the action of the Juvenile Court.

FORMER PLAINFIELD WOMAN DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS.

Mrs. Jeannette M. Johnson, wife of Russell C. Johnson, former residents of this city, died yesterday after her home, 167 West Eighty-first street, New York. She had been ill a long time but bore the ordeal with patient fortitude and calm resignation.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Johnson were well known locally before their removal to New York and the news of the latter's death was received with much regret. Mr. Johnson is a brother to Andrew W. Johnson, of Duer street, and a cousin to Mrs Sarah Randolph and Miss Grace Johnson, also of Duer street.

The funeral will be held at the late residence tomorrow afternoon at 12 o'clock and the body will be brought to Plainfield for interment in Evergreen Cemetery.

UNION'S FREEHOLDERS ENJOY THEIR CLAMBAKE

The annual clambake under the auspices of the Union County Board of Freeholders was held at Bender's Hotel, Roselle, yesterday afternoon, and the usual good time was had. A light lunch was served at noon, while the baks was being made ready by that master chef, Freeholder E. B. Cladek, Rahway, and by 3 o'clock the freeholders and their guests sat down to "a feast fit for a king." It was long after 5 o'clock when the enjoyable affair terminated.

All of the members of the board including Freeholders S. P. T. Wilbur and J. Hervey Doane, of this city, were present, except Freeholders Swain and Cady, of Summit, and E. K. Adams, of Elizabeth. County Attorney William R. Codington and County Engineer F. J. Hubbard, of this city, also attended, as well as several county officials from Elizabeth.

A year ago at the clambake, Freeholder Wilbur lost his watch, a valuable timepiece which he prized highly. Yesterday he was the recipient of a watch from his fellow members, the presentation being made by Judge Codington. Mr. Wilbur was completely overcome by the gift and his happiness was complete when he discovered that he had an Ingersoll timepiece warranted to get him to the meetings of the board on time. There was another presentation to Freeholder Henry Krausse, of Roselle. Recently, his house was robbed and the board thought that an alarm clock would not be an inappropriate gift. He received it with due thanks. The whole afternoon was given up to a general good time and there was a marked absence of any political gossip.

BOROUGH REPUBLICANS ARE ALL HARMONIOUS

Casting aside all factional differences that have prevailed more or less in the past, the North Plainfield Republicans have banded together to promote the interests of the party in borough, county, State and National politics. It is the purpose to work unitedly for the election of all party nominees. To this end a meeting for the organization of a club will be held at Saengerbund hall on Monday night, Sept. 14 at 8 o'clock. The building has been leased for the campaign and it will be the scene of several big rallies to be addressed by speakers of State importance.

The call for the club organization meeting, as published in the advertising columns of this paper today, contains the names of many prominent Republican workers. This is the list of signers: Former Mayors B. A. Hegeman, Jr., Newton E. Smalley and J. H. Cooley, Dr. H. K. Carrol Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan, A. G. Hooley, Frank Thompson, Frank Rowley Alexander Milne, J. W. Coddington J. V. E. Vanderhoef, A. B. Laing Walter Apgar, Charles A. Lee, Georg F. Brown, James K. Arnold, W. F Williams, Henry A. P. O. ARCHITECT EXPECTED HERE WITHIN DAY OR TWO.

Supervising Architect Taylor, of Washington, D. C., will within a day or two send one of his trusted subordinates into New Jersey to inspect sites that have been offered to the Government by their owenrs for public buildings that are to be erected at Plainfield and Burlington.

When bids were opened a few weeks ago for sites in the several New Jersey cities fortunate enough to secure Congressional favor last winter, it was found that with a limit of cost of $100,000 for site and building at Plainfield, six bids for sites had been received, ranging all the way from $8,936 to $60,000, there being two at the latter figure. The sites selected by the inspectors thus sent out are usually approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, but not always.

Terrill Road About Finished.

The work of macadamizing Terrill road from Green brook a distance of about one mile, which will make it a county aid road, is nearing completion. It is expected that it will be finished within the next two weeks. The road is exceptionally well built and will be one of the most attractive thoroughfares in that part of the city.

ARREST LETTER CARRIER

Daniel J. McNamara, Accused of Opening Letters, is Locked Up at Newark.

HE DENIES THE OFFENCE.

Hearing Before U. S. Commissioner Probably This Afternoon —Bears Good Reputation.

Charged with opening and destroying letters at the local postoffice, Letter-carrier Daniel J. McNamara was yesterday placed under arrest by Postoffice Inspectors Entermann, Duryea and Nichols and taken to Newark, where he is detained at police headquarters, pending a hearing this afternoon before United States Commissioner Bigelow. Postmaster E. H. Bird is out of town for a few days and could not be seen today, and the other employes at the local office refuse to discuss the matter. Mr. McNamara, it is said, denies the charge.

For some time letters have been missed at the postoffice, but strangely, never from Mr. McNamara's route. Inspectors were set to work, which resulted yesterday in the discovery, they declare, that McNamara was opening letters in the basement of the office and destroying them.

It is said that the carrier was in the habit of coming to the office an hour earlier in the morning than was required and it is alleged would make a search of the other carriers' desk for promising letters. He would then take them to the basement and rifle them, it is said. Bits of one letter put together disclosed the address of a Herbert Stein, and it was found to contain some postal cards. Several other letters were found torn up and thrown in a basket. It is alleged that McNamara was caught while engaged in this work.

The carrier has always borne an excellent reputation and during his service has been noted for his faithfulness and efficiency. His friends feel sure that he is guiltless of the charge preferred against him and that a hearing will prove this.

This is not the first time in the history of the local office in recent years that letters have been missed in a similar manner. Two other letter-carriers lost their positions and were obliged to serve time after being found guilty of such charges. From time to time complaints have been received by Postmaster Bird regarding lost letters and they became so frequent that he notified the postal authorities. Inspectors have been in this city during the past three weeks at work on the case.

COLORED BOY ARRAIGNED FOR BICYCLE STEALING.

Samuel Foster, a colored boy living on West Third street, near Spooner avenue, was arraigned in the city court, this morning, charged with stealing a bicycle belonging to Alonzo Townley. He claimed to have secured the wheel in a "swap" with a boy whose name he did not know, giving him a home-made wagon for it. He was released in the custody of his parents until tomorrow morning, with instructions to bring the unknown boy to court with him or be prepared to go to jail.

The bicycle was taken from in front of The Daily Press office two weeks ago. Townley made no report of its loss to the police but kept a watch for it himself. While at a baseball game on Crescent Oval, Labor Day, he spotted the machine against a post, despite the fact that its original enamel had been daubed over with paint. He waited around until the Foster boy showed up to ride off with it and then had him arrested. Townley proved the machine was his by the manufacturer's number.

Granger's Picnic Tomorrow.

For the benefit of Plainfielders who wish to attend the granger's picnic at Mount Bethel tomorrow afternoon, stages will leave the corner at Front and Somerset streets at 1 and 6 o'clock. The affair promises to be largely attended as the residents throughout North Plainfield and Warren townships are interested. A feature of the afternoon will be political speeches by several well known Somerset county orators, while an old-fashioned country dance will enliven things at night.

Pastor Shaw and Family Home.

Rev. Edwin Shaw, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, and family, are now at home in the parsonage on Central avenue. Mr. Shaw's family arrived a few days ago from their home in Milton, Wis., where Mr. Shaw, prior to coming here, was professor of Latin for eighteen years in Milton College.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Hockberger and children, of East Fifth street, have returned from a sojourn in Massachusetts.

GOLF.

With the midsummer lull over, the Baltusrol Golf Club has arranged for the busiest kind of a fall season. The tournament committee, consisting of James A. Tyng, T. C. Ennever and Willis L. Garey, announces that a new start in a competitive way will be made today. An eighteen-hole medal play handicap is on for this morning, while four-ball foursomes will be the afternoon attraction. From September 19 to October 10 those who qualified earlier in the season for the I. K. Taylor cup will fight it out at match play.

The semi-annual club championship for women will begin on Tuesday, October 20, with an eighteen-hole testing round, the best four to qualify. Match play rounds will follow on the two succeeding days. The men's semi-annual club championship will then claim attention. There will be an eighteen-hole medal round on October 24, the best eight to continue on at the match game on October 31, November 7 and November 14. The costly cup presented by H. Russel Landale, of Calcutta, India, will be played for on November 3, Election Day.

The tournament committee of the Essex County Country Club, consisting of L. St. Clair Colby, E. F. Sanford, Ellis Adams and O. L. Gubelman, has drafted a fall schedule. On October 10 the club championship will begin with an eighteen-hole medal play qualifying round, best sixteen scores to qualify for match play. The championship final will be decided on Election Day.

In a thirty-six hole stroke competition held recently over the Scarborough course, in England, Harry Vardon and Edward Ray tied for first honors with scores of 138. Ray's morning round of 65 equalled the course record, while Vardon's homeward journey of 31 in the afternoon was the best ever recorded for the second nine. James Braid, the open champion, competed, and finished with 141.

Clinton Avenue will play at Rahway tomorrow and the Plainfield boys declare that they will return home with a victory.

Adam Schott the reliable left-fielder on the Clinton Avenues, has not made an error this season and he has had a great many difficult chances. It is this kind of work that counts for victories.

Norman Barnes is now considered about the most reliable hitter on the Clinton Avenue team. It is seldom that he misses a hit or two and he often starts a batting rally.

It would be difficult to find two players that work together better than Emery and Jack Martin. They are invincible in their positions and

"Warry" McLaughlin will continue to pitch for Scotch Plains the rest of the season.

There has been a marked improvement in the general play of the Clinton Avenues since Boelbley joined the club. His backstop work inspires confidence, not that O'Loughlin did not do good work, but he was a little weak in throwing to bases.

Phil. Smith continues to pitch winning ball for Bound Brook, but those who have witnessed the games there think that Phil. is expected to do all the real work.

The West Ends of Somerville will be here on Saturday, September 19, and it is reported that the biggest crowd ever will accompany the club. They can be assured of meeting with a warm reception here and a fine game.

50th Celebration

ALL NEW JERSEY GLADLY JOINS NEWARK IN CELEBRATING OUR 50TH ANNIVERSARY.

NOT in Newark's history has there been such a popular celebration of the birthday of any of the city's business or industrial institutions as has been witnessed on the occasion of our 50th Anniversary.

It has been an occasion for general rejoicing and it seems that all New Jersey has joined with Newark in the festivities.

From almost every town and hamlet for fifty miles around, men, women and children came to see the State's greatest store decked in its holiday clothes. Fully 40,000 people visited the store on Tuesday, the first day of the Golden Jubilee. Great crowds attended on Wednesday. Yesterday again, the store was thronged from morning till closing time. Today we expect a repetition of yesterday, and on Saturday we expect the biggest crowds of all. Thousands will come to the store to see the illumination if for nothing else.

While floral tributes have been generous indeed, the telegrams and letters of congratulations have come by hundreds from all parts of the United States, and the kind words and good wishes have made us feel more than ever the importance of the store to the community and our responsibility to the people.

We hope to deserve all the good things that have been said of us, and to make the store greater aud grander and more helpful to the people as the years go by.

Plainfield, N. J., September 11, 1908.

Under present conditions, when by the provisions of the new primary law, any voter my file a petition for the nomination provided he gets but 100 signers, it is a handsome tribute on the part of the Republicans of Union county to find that Ernest R. Ackerman is the only one named for the party nomination for State Senator. But when it is considered fo but one moment what an excellen record this model legislator of our has made at Trenton, it is by n means surprising that there is no the slightest opposition in any quarter to his being returned. No matter what factional differences there may be in the rank and file as to the merits and qualifications of other candidates, when it comes to the high office of State Senator, he is the unanimous choice of all Republicans and it may be added of many, many Democrats who place "principle above party."

Mr. Ackerman's part in behalf of legislation pertaining to direct primaries, civil service, equal taxation the election of United States Senators directly by the people and numerous other measures for the welfare of all the people and for ideal government, is too well known to b mentioned here. Suffice it to say that the Governor of the State, who has carefully watched his course i the Legislature, has declared that th Plainfielder has discharged his duties with the highest possible credi to himself, to his immediate constituents and to the people at large. There has been no selfish movemen in all his work, and he has time an again sacrificed his own personal interests to devote valuable time i the interests of those whose publi servant he is. The view of his political career as taken by the Governo is shared by his colleagues in th upper house. Senators Frelinghuysen, Hillery, Bradley and the other look to him as a model representative of Union, and this, it may b added, is the opinion of all who have given their attention to the work o the State's lawmakers.

Appreciating the work he has done for the cause of Republicanism in Union county during the ten years he has served as a member of the party's county committee and particularly the last four, during which he has capably and loyally performed the work as county chairman, it is to be expected that the Third ward voters will nominate Frank S. Smith for that body with a flattering vote at the coming primaries. His friends not only in Plainfield, but through the county naturally resent the opposition that is being made to prevent his being continued as chairman, particularly as he is unable to be on the scene to do battle. Because of continued ill health, Mr. Smith has heeded the advice of his physicians and will not return from the Adirondacks until after primary day, but those who have seen fit to oppose him may rest assured that every honorable means will be used to obtain a decisive majority for him on Sept. 22.

Fisher, Sayreville; Miss Henrietta McKenna, South Amboy; Miss Cora Wright, South Brunswick; Miss Grace Huber, Woodbridge.

There was special music at the evening service by a quartet comprising the Misses Cora Dayton and Iva Dayton and Wade Palham and Walter Hazelton. The delegates and all who attended the convention were entertained at dinner and supper by the members of the home church and a large committee in charge of Lewis D. Walter, Mrs. Walter Clawson and Miss Sofield served the two meals and everyone was delighted with th entertainment.

$3,000 FIRE AT BERNARDSVILLE.

Two wagon-houses, a shed, a corncrib and large woodpile, connected with the farm buildings on the estate of Mrs. J. H. Ballantine, of Newark, at Bernardsville, were burned to the ground last night.

A large supply of corn and much wood was destroyed, but the vehicles and animals were rescued. Some valuable pheasants belonging to William McGary, the foreman, barely escaped the flames, but a large number of blooded carrier pigeons belonging to his son, which were locked in the loft of one of the wagon-houses, perished. The damage done is estimated at about $3,000, fully covered by insurance. The fire is supposed to have originated from a lighted match, dropped into some oil or feathers in the loft of one of the wagon-houses. The flames had gained considerable headway when the firemen arrived. The roof of the large farm barn and of the foreman's cottage, which stands a short distance from the wagon-houses took fire from sparks, but the flames were quickly extinguished by the prompt work of the firemen.

The Bernardsville Fire Company's chemical engine and hook-and-ladder were at the fire eighteen minutes after the alarm was sounded by the steam whistle on the power plant of the Bernards Light and Power Company.

$25 for the Day Nursery.

A successful lawn fete was held at the home of Mrs. D. S. Alpaugh on East Sixth street, yesterday afternoon, for the benefit of The Day Nursery and $25 was realized as profit from the sale of ice cream, cake and candy. The affair was under the direction of Miss Bertha MacDonald, of Arlington avenue, and she was assisted by a number of young girls, including Florence Alpaugh, Dorothy Stelle, Elizabeth Morton and Edith Nowry.

Short But Exciting Runaway.

A horse belonging to George Schlereth, of West Second street, became restive while standing in the yard next the Standard Carpet Cleaning works this morning and started off on a rampage. The animal shot out of the yard so quick it couldn't turn and fetched up against a tree in front of Trinity church, where it was thrown down. The top of the wagon attached to it was ripped off.

Christopher Russ, Jr.

Christopher Russ, Jr., the one-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Russ, of West Third street, died yesterday afternoon. The funeral will be held at the parents' home tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock and burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

—Use Press want ads. They pay.

—City Engineer A. J. Gavett is giving more attention to the sprinkling of the brick pavement and he has given instructions to the driver of the cart in the business section to thoroughly soak the pavement with water whereby it can be kept cleaned and more or less free from dust.

—The relative merits of Tarvia and "Asphaltoilene" have not yet been determined by the Councilmanic street committee. Both appear to be giving excellent satisfaction and the absence of dust on streets where the preparations have been used is considered a great blessing by the residents.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The case of Henry Schenck, who was arrested several weeks ago, on a charge of atrocious assault preferred by John Reick, was brought up by the grand jury yesterday. Several witnesses in the case were called to Elizabeth, but only one was called by the grand jury.

Manager Frentz will present a strong lineup against Westfield tomorrow in the game at Recreation Park. McLoughlin and Albert will be the battery, the balance of the lineup being Flannery, 3b; Baldwin, ss; Allen, 1b; Frentz, 2b; Reick, lf; Eller, cf; Tucker, rf.

A traveling tinker, well pickled with Jersey lightning, furnished amusement for the boys in twon for a couple of hours last night. If an officer had been on duty the fun would have been short lived.

Edward L. Hand, John Z. Hatfield and William Van Valkenburg are the local exempts who are attending the State convention of the Exempt Firemen being held at Atlantic City.

The weekly prayer and praise meeting of the Baptist church will be held tonight in the parlors of the church. Rev. Mr. Watkins will lead.

John Fitzgerald, who has been visiting his aunt, Mrs. Ferdinand Schmidt, of Forest avenue, has returned to his home in Philadelphia.

County Superintendent of Schools J. J. Sairtz, of Westfield, was a visitor at the school yesterday.

Mrs. W. R. Buckley has returned from a stay at Atlantic City.

BOUND BROOK AND VICINITY.

Mrs. William Eichman, of High and Madison streets, South Bound Brook, is visiting at the home of her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Foster, in Trenton.

Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus DuFour, of Brooklyn, were lately guests at the home of Mr. DuFour's brother and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Leon DuFour, in Main street, Bound Brook.

Mrs. Louis S. DuFour, of Clinton street, South Bound Brook, has gone to Chicago, where she will spend several weeks at the home of her mother, Mrs. W. F. McCarthy.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Langdon have been entertaining Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Grove, of Raritan, at their home in East Second street, Bound Brook.

Recent guests at the home of Dr. H. D. Powelson, in Hamilton street, Bound Brook, were Mr. and Mrs. John McDowell, of Newark.

Rev. J. W. Morgan, of Chester, is a guest at the home of his father-in-law, Thomas L. Walters, in High street, South Bound Brook.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Reed and children, of John street, Bound Brook, have been visiting relatives in Elizabeth.

Miss Mary DuFour, of South Bound Brook, has returned from a stay of several days with friends at Lebanon.

Mrs. William Sofield, of New Bound Brook, spent Tuesday with friends in Plainfield.

NORTH BRANCH.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Hyler, of Plainfield, have been visiting Mrs. Hyler's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Scott, at North Branch, for a few days.

Services will be resumed in the Reformed church at Readington next Sunday. The edifice has been undergoing extensive repairs.

Miss Anna DuMont has returned to her home at North Branch Depot after a visit to Miss Jennie Stryker, in Somerville.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Van Fleet, of Readington, have been recent guests of relatives at North Branch Depot.

Frank Borgeous, of Brooklyn, has been spending two weeks with his cousin, Jesse Conover, Jr., at Readington.

Mrs. William Van Doren, of Readington, is entertaining her cousin, Mrs. Anna Gilbert, of Kingston, this week.

Mrs. Elizabeth Little has returned to her home in Trenton, after a visit to Mrs. Frederick Brokaw, in South Branch.

Harry Ross and sister, Miss Hattie Ross, of Jersey City, have been visiting in Millstone.

Ira Voorhees, of Somerville, was a guest this week of relatives at North Branch Depot.

Mrs. John Hall, of Neshanic, has been a guest of friends in North Branch.

WESTFIELD.

Westfield is again without a dog catcher. Raymond Turft, who has filled that office for two months past was arrested by Sergeant Coffield on Tuesday and turned over to the Newark officials, who wanted him for violating his parole, given to the Rahway Reformatory. He caught two dogs while in office.

Ira C. Lambert, Charles Sorter and Chief of the Fire Department Fred Decker, of Westfield, are at Atlantic City attending the New Jersey State Firemen's Association convention.

Repairs to the Lincoln School, Westfield, are nearly completed. New metal ceilings have been put in and the new fire escapes have been put on the building at the sides.

Chief of Police Thomas O'Neill, of Westfield, is on his vacation, leaving the department in charge of Sergeant Coffield.

Walter Mooney has taken the management of Powers' hotel, Westfield, which he recently purchased.

An ordinance to renumber the houses in Westfield has been introduced in Council.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Miss Henrietta Crosman under the direction of Henry B. Harris and Maurice Campbell will appear at the New Plainfield Theatre tonight, presenting Shakespeare's beautiful comedy "As You Like It." As an exponent of Shakespearean comedy, it is believed that Miss Crosman is probably better versed, and more familiar with the plays of this great author, than anyone now conspicuous upon the American stage. She is not only an inveterate student of Shakespeare, but is a reader of the highest class of fiction, of the most eminent authors of the day. Miss Crosman would be like one lost in the wilderness were she to travel without a complete set of Shakespeare as her companion.

Lyman H. Howe is practically the only exhibitor in this country who presents pictures with the seriousness and dignity that should characterize this modern art. This claim is well substantiated by mere mention of some of the features of the new program to be seen at the New Plainfield Theatre tomorrow afternoon and night. It covers a trip to Naples, India, Savoy, France, and Sicily; a personally conducted drive through Rome; a review of a brilliant military pagaent in London as well as the Reedham Orphans in a new drill; stirring scenes of Australian sports; and a still more exciting steeplechase in England; novel and weird effects of physical phenomena, and the strange friendships of birds and animals as well as many others.

For next Tuesday afternoon and night the management of the New Plainfield Theatre has secured as its attraction "Buster Brown," the master success of the year in the somewhat over crowded field of musical comedy. Buster Brown needs no introducing inconiums, we all know his face—all the children have worn clothes fashioned after his. It needs only to be said, therefore, that this is a third and all new edition of the musical comedy in every feature. The scenery, costumes, music and songs are spic and span with newness, while the cast headed by Master Reed, the little chap who fairly exudes mirth, is away and ahead of any yet seen we are promised. Buster should be largely welcomed.

"Brown of Harvard," with James Young in the title role, comes to the New Plainfield Theatre next Friday night. This college play which in New York and Chicago has more than duplicated the success of "Strongheart" and "The College Widow" is the first play supposed to be a faithful reproduction of life in the oldest and most famous American University. While appealing particularly to Harvard men, in whom college traditions are more deeply rooted perhaps than in any other American institution, it is scarely less interesting to anyone who boasts of an Alma Mater. The sports, the youthful life in this play are what every man who has gone to college has enjoyed to a greater or less degree, and in being thus filled with the care-free spirit of the irresponsible age, some explanation of its remarkable success can probably be found.

It is acted by young men and women all of whom are but recently out of college and are still inspired by the enthusiasm and ambition which helped them through school. For this reason the players in "Brown of Harvard" are merely living over again, scenes and incidents still fresh in their memory, giving the performance a realistic abandon seldom seen on the stage.

Plays that don't live are those that are made up usually of pure fancy, imaginative figments that impress even the most careless that their stories have been pieced together mechanically. The characters in plays of this class don't seem real to an audience, nor do their speeches seem natural. Watching a machine-made play is like listening to a phonograph with a moving picture attachment. The performance is distracting, but not convincing. Plays that live on the other hand may be said to have people of real flesh and blood for their personages and stories of strange interest and sure conviction for their basis. "The Old Homestead" is a play of the latter class. "Our New Minister," the newest play by the same authors, is another real play of the same sort that promises to live as long as its illustrious predecessor. It will be at the New Plainfield Theatre next Wednesday night.

Fred Newhall and son, of Yonkers, N. Y., has returned from a visit with Mr. and Mrs. John Smith, of Jackson avenue.

Miss Marjorie Hart, of Fairview avenue, has returned home from Asbury Park, where she spent the summer.

Miss Hazel Walters, of DeLacy avenue, the borough, has returned from a two weeks' stay at Asbury Park.

John and Walter Harper, of Manning avenue, have returned home from a short visit at the home of George Schwartz, of Martinville.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Kenney and family, of East Second street, have returned from a sojourn at Great Neck, L. I. They made the trip by automobile.

For Just Writing the Best Last Line to the Following Tabasco Limerick

$1,000 for the Best; $750 to Second; $500 to Third; $250 to Fourth, and $5 Each to Next 100 Winners.

TABASCO LIMERICK.

A soubrette who worked for Papasco
One day kicked up quite a fiasco,
As the hair on her head
Turned from yellow to red

The last word of the last line must rhyme with the last words of the first two lines.

All that is necessary is to send us what you think is the best last line to our Tabasco Limerick with your name and address. Contest closes May 1, 1909, and prizes announced May 15, 1909.

Get busy now; tell your friends. Here's a great chance to win an income free.

Remember, this contest is open, free to everybody. Someone must win the above prizes. Why not you?

WHAT IS TABASCO?

For forty years it has been used by cooks everywhere. Every first-class hotel, steamship, restaurant and dining car uses it in the kitchen and upon the table. Tabasco is great for soups, roasts, fish, fowl, game, seafood, for eggs of any style, for the outdoor luncheon or the afternoon salad. Use it in your kitchen all the time.

What makes excellent the cooking of the chef will make delicious the food of the home. Get the Tabasco habit in your kitchen, on your table. One drop works wonders. Buy from your grocer today. He has it; every grocer has it. Ask his opinion.

This contest is open to everybody free. Send in your Limericks in your own way and as often as you please. The fund to pay these prizes is now on deposit with Geo. W. Young & Co., Bankers, New York City.

NOTICE TO ABSENT DEFENDANT.

In Chancery of New Jersey.

To Anna Marie Stebbins:—

By virtue of an order of the Court of Chancery of New Jersey, made on the first day of September, nineteen hundred and eight, in a certain cause wherein Albert C. Stebbins is petitioner, and you, Anna Marie Stebbins, are defendant, you are required to appear, and plead, answer or demur to petitioner's petition, on or before the second day of November next (1908), or in default thereof, such decree will be taken against you as the Chancellor shall think equitable and just.

The object of said suit is to obtain a decree of divorce, dissolving the marriage between you and the said petitioner.

Dated September 3, 1908.

WRITTEN IN RED

By

CHAS. HOWARD MONTAGUE AND C. W. DYAR

(Copyright, by The Cassell Publishing Co.)

"Natural enough in this 18-year-old girl," commented the detective.

"It was the last effort, you understand, to obtain contrition from the woman who had been impervious to the most piteous appeals, the most solemn entreaties. The poor girl went and found her sister's door unlocked. She approached the bedside. It seems that Marion was asleep, but her sleep was light; her dreams perhaps troubled, for she sprang up suddenly with an awful cry and grasped Stella by the shoulders, demanding in a tone that nearly frightened her sister out of her senses: 'What do you want? What do you want?' She shook her so that Stella made a frantic effort to get away. In the struggle the pillow was dragged from the bed and something beneath it fell with a crash. Marion by this time awoke to a realization of her surroundings. She sprang out of bed with a haste that could not escape Stella's observation, and picked up the something which had fallen. 'What is it?' demands the startled Stella. 'Nothing,' replies Marion. 'What is the matter, dear?' 'Go back to your bed and I will come to you.' But no. Affairs had reached a climax now where suspicion must either be allayed or confirmed. Marion was confused and dismayed by the sudden transformation in her sister, and before she could regain control of herself the hand of the younger girl came in contact with the cold steel. 'It is father's pistol,' whispered Stella, in what state of mind you may imagine. 'Don't deny it, Marion; you have been sleeping with it under your pillow.' 'I won't deny it,' said Marion, considerably disturbed. 'But why will you insanely insist upon knowing things which it would be better for your peace of mind to remain ignorant of?'"

"And all this time it was quite dark in the room!" Lamm asked.

"Absolutely. Stella's conclusion that Marion held her father's pistol was one of those intuitive leaps at correct conclusions that are peculiar to women. And thereupon, almost crazy with terror, Stella cries out: 'You killed him, Marion! It was your own hand.' Of course, the moment the words were out of her lips she was penitent for having uttered them. 'Stella,' says Marion, tremblingly, 'your mad suspicions are indiscreet. Do you suppose I could sleep in this house where the man who has given me all that I possess except life is lying dead, if the guilt of his death were at my door? And are you the same girl who used to cuddle down in my arms in the old days and tell me that you loved me better than anyone in the world except papa? Tell me, do you remember what I owe to this man who was more than a father to me? Have you forgotten who it was that nursed him in his last illness because he couldn't bear to have a hired nurse profane him with unsympathetic hands? Can you recall ever in my life a single expression of ingratitude—'"

"Bosh!" interrupted the detective. "That is all very well for Stella, but for me it is necessary to be told how she became possessed of that pistol which was supposed to be locked in Paul North's desk in Marlboro street."

"Unfortunately," returned Thomas, uneasily, "she neither explained nor apologized for her conduct. You know what women are. Stella's heart, which is not located far from the surface, was touched. She began to cry and to plead for forgiveness. And then Marion forgave her; but just as soon as Stella began to beg for an explanation the woman said to her very coldly: 'Go to your aunt, dear. What you want is somebody to dry your tears and soothe you. I am no comforter in a time like this, and I certainly shall not tell you things which would only add to your worry and distress.' And she did go to her aunt; not to make a confidante of her, but to beg for consolation and sympathy."

"It ended just as I have told you. But Stella, though she tried her best, could not repress her anxiety. She was unable to bear the strain of such a position. She constantly saw before her eyes the spectacle of the officers entering the house and dragging Marion off to prison. In view of all these facts, is there anything strange in her eventual action? The funeral was scarcely over, and the family returned to the house, when she hastened to Marion's room, took the revolver, and fled—a headlong, terror-stricken flight. Her first idea was to put the evidence of Marion's guilt out of sight. She threw it into the water, little thinking that I was watching her. She says that she had no clear idea what she was doing, or where she was going; but she had determined never to go back to the house. She felt that she could never face her sister again. In the train to Boston she bethought herself of some friends in Hartford, where she had often visited, and had always been welcome. For that city she therefore set out, only to find that the house was closed, and her friends gone to the beach for the summer. By this time she was almost crazy from fright, lack of sleep and food, for she had been able neither to eat nor rest since the news of the murder. Heaven knows what would have become of her if accident had not put me upon her trail! Such is the story of Stella North; and in view of it, John Lamm, I want to know if you blame me for what I have done?"

"I blame you for only one thing, Thomas," said Lamm, earnestly; "and that was for being afraid to trust me with your secret."

"How did I know in what light you would view it?" returned the reporter, uneasily. "You are always so matter-of-fact and business-like. And, of course, I am perfectly aware that my present position is quite the reverse of business-like."

"Hang the position!" exclaimed John Lamm. "That's your affair. It's the inwardness of the North case that I'm looking after, and your story has given me a wonderful push ahead."

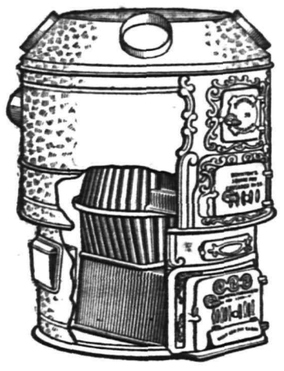
Did You Burn Too Much Coal?



It's cheaper to have a good furnace, to say nothing of the comfort. The best furnace is the

BOYNTON

The Furnace with the Square Fire Pot

THE SQUARE POT
Patented

It has the only fire pot that furnishes perfect combustion, burns all the coal cleanly, without clinkers or clogging, and at the same time saves coal and labor. Look up a Boynton dealer and ask him to explain.

There are BOYNTON heating plants of all kinds. Ask about our Round or Sectional Boilers for steam or hot water. Also ranges.

Will Play Deciding Game.

The Plainfield A. C. will cross bats with the strong Marion A. C., of Bound Brook, on the Clinton Avenue grounds, tomorrow afternoon. This will be the third contest between these teams this season, each having taken a game by the same score of 6 to 4. Beside an exciting contest, the followers of the team are promised an exhibition of fancy acrobatic feats by Bert. Hanson, the clever gymnast, of this city. This will be the last game Slocum, the crack college twirler, of the Plainfield A. C., will appear in this season, as he returns to college next week. He has won nine out of eleven games for his team, including eight straight victories. Harry Van Zandt and Eddie Fallon, the former of the Mono A. C., and the latter of the fast Orange A. C., will alternate in the box for the Plainfield team the rest of the season. The Plainfield A. C. will lineup as follows tomorrow: Hann, ss; Luthman, 3b; Hanson, 2b; Pope, 1b; Mullen, c; Slocum, p; Molleson, lf; Coriell, cf; Driver, rf.

ISRAEL C. PIERSON DIES AFTER TWO WEEKS' ILLNESS

Following an illness of two weeks with an apoplectic trouble, Israel C. Pierson, one of the city's best known residents, died at his home on Watchung avenue late last night. He had been failing steadily for several days and the end was not unexpected.

Mr. Pierson was sixty-five years old and was a native of Westfield. He removed from there to Plainfield in 1875 and had lived here ever since. He was connected with the actuary department of the Washington Life Insurance company and was held in high esteem by his business associates. He had never taken any active part in civic affairs but was greatly interested in the work of the Crescent Avenue church, of which he had been a member for many years. Beside Mrs. Pierson, who was Miss Edgar, of Westfield, he leaves two daughters, Mrs. Malcolm McKenzie and Miss Mabel E. Pierson, both of Plainfield.

The funeral will be held at his late residence Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock and burial will be at the convenience of the family.

EARLY MORNING FIRE CAUSES $1,000 DAMAGE

A one-story building belonging to William D. Thickstun and located at 308 and 319 Liberty street, was badly damaged by a fire that broke out shortly before midnight last night. The structure housed four different business enterprises, a restaurant conducted by James Thornton, a grocery store belonging to Victor Baunio, a bicycle repository owned by Nathan Segar and a shoe store run by Dominick Naigo. The fire started from a range in the restaurant and cleaned out that part of the building and badly damaged Baunio's stock of odds and ends. The blaze was discovered by John Madden, who was returning from a social gathering, and who turned in an alarm from box 46 at 12:04 a. m.

The department reached the scene in remarkably short time and quickly had the flames under control but the men worked an hour before the recall was sounded.

The damage to the building is placed at $500 while a similar amount is divided between Thornton and Baunio on their stocks. Baunio being the heaviest loser of the two.

STATE NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

Millville physicians have abandoned all hope for the recovery of Moses Bailey, who shot himself in the abdomen Sunday.

Falling downstairs at her home, Mrs. Albert Bullock, of 607 Roberts street, Camden, sustained severe contusions of the body and arms.

A large number of spectators witnessed the liveliest meeting of the Vineland Borough Council Tuesday night that has been held for years. Joseph Neale made sundry charges of neglect against his colleagues and the superintendent of public works, which created general comment. It was voted that the charges be typewritten, and tomorrow night was set for a thorough investigation.

Caleb Green, who has been confined in the Cumberland County Prison at Bridgeton on several charges of larceny, managed to escape by slipping a lock which had been left unfastened. Barefooted he hurried into the swamps and managed to make his way nearly to Elmer. Officers with the aid of a bloodhound tracked him to his hiding place and late last night he was captured and brought back to the city. He was nearly exhausted having had nothing to eat all day.

TO GET AFTER TRUANTS

Superintendent Krebs, of the Borough, to Enforce Compulsory Attendance Law.

IT'S A FINANCIAL QUESTION.

Revenue from State Depends on Number of Children in Attendance—The Law's Provisions.

Radical changes regarding the compulsory education act were made by the Legislature of 1908, and it is the purpose of the local public school authorities to see that they are strictly enforced. Heretofore, the age limit regarding compulsory attendance of children at school has been fourteen years, but the change in the law has raised the age to fifteen years, and in addition to this pupils must attend school until they are seventeen if they have not completed the Grammar school course.

In other words, all pupils must attend "every day and hour that the schools are in session" until they are seventeen, unless they have completed the Grammar school course prior to that age. Grammar school graduates under fifteen must go to the high school until they are fifteen. Even then they must attend until they are seventeen, unless they are "regularly and lawfully employed in some useful occupation or service."

Superintendent H. C. Krebs, of the North Plainfield Public Schools, in speaking of the new law today, said:

"The borough schools will carry out this law strictly. Notices to parents have been printed and the truant officer will call at the homes of all children included in the law, whose names are on the school census but not on the school registers.

"The State appropriation for every day's attendance of each pupil for the coming year is ten cents, or $18 per year. Every pupil who does not attend school therefore deprives the taxpayers of $18 of State money, which means $18 additional for the district to raise by local tax. A strict enforcement of the law will therefore reduce tax bills, and is thus of direct concern to every taxpayer."

WOMEN'S RELIEF CORPS' SUCCESSFUL DIME SOCIAL.

Under the auspices of the Women's Relief Corps a dime social was held in Reform Hall, last night, to which was invited the members and friends of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R. During the evening there was an informal program consisting of phonographic selections by Mrs. Andrew Cox, piano duets by Miss Clara Smith and Mrs. Jennie Berman; readings by Mrs. William Gibbons and brief remarks by Commander J. F. Berg, Comrades I. L. McVoy, Samuel Reese and Mrs. I. L. McVoy, of the Corps. An added attraction was a grab-bag. There was also a handsome sofa pillow sold. This bore the names of many persons who paid a nominal sum to have them worked on the pillow. The proceeds from the affair netted $10. The committee in charge comprised Mrs. Andrew Cox, chairman; Mrs. Frederick Wenzel, Mrs. Jennie Bergman, Mrs. Sarah Mattox and Mrs. S. R. Struthers.

In the City Court.

In the city court this morning, Fred Harris, a colored youth who liquored up last night and got scrappy, was fined $5 with a preference of twenty days. He was arrested by Patrolman Messler. Jacob Bosen, a New York peddler, picked up by Patrolman Saffron gor selling women's skirts without a license, paid $5 to gain his freedom. He might have gotten away on suspended sentence but for his framing up a lie and stieking to it when Judge Runyon asked him the circumstances in the case.

Primary Union's "Birthday."

Celebrating the thirteenth anniversary of the Plainfield Primary Union, a "birthday party" will be held by the organization in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium Monday night. Plans are under way to make this annual celebration of a particularly novel nature this year, and the committee, of which Mrs. F. R. Baker, of Westfield, is chairman, is hard at work.

Garwood Shops Picking Up.

A number of Plainfield men employed in the Garwood shops before the depression began, were notified today to report for work Monday. It is said that business in many of the manufacturies along the Central is steadily on the pick-up.

—An extra fine assortment of fruits will be at Neuman Brothers' store this afternoon and evening The display will include fancy white and yellow peaches, Bartiett pears, plums, grapes and California melons. Don't delay in placing orders.

WARRANT FOR ARREST OF MRS. H. E. MUNROE

A warrant was issued at Reading, Pa., yesterday, for the arrest of Mrs. Harriet E. Munroe, of Washington, owner of the copyright of the entertainment, "The Scottish Reformation," which was given in Rhodes Opera House at Boyertown, Pa., last January, when 171 persons of the four hundred present were burned to death. Mrs. Munroe is well-known here, where at Hope chapel she gave "The Scottish Reformation," "Oliver Cromwell," and other entertainments of a similar character, meeting with great success.

Mr. Munroe was not present at the entertainment given at Boyertown, but it is aleged that she employed incompetent help and that they caused the disaster. The prosecurtor is Frank Moyer, who lost a daughter in the fire. Mrs. Munroe's attorney at Reading agreed to accept service and the case will be presented to the Grand Jury next week. Dr. Thomas J. B. Rhodes, owner of the opera house, is now under arrest for criminal negligence.

HOPE'S BOYS CLUB IN ANNUAL SESSION

At the semi-annual business meeting of the Hope chapel Boy's Club, held in the Sunday school rooms last night, the following officers were elected for the ensuing six months: President, Clinton Firstbrook; first vice-president, Clarence Hoffman; second vice-president, James McInness; secretary, Arthur Hoffman; treasurer, Harry Kenney; chairmen of committees, entertainment, Howard Firstbrook; membership, Earl Hoff; lookout, Alfred Patterson; game, George Myers; initiation, Bertram Smith; athletic, George Gage; light, George Patterson.

The retiring president, Harry Kenney, was in the chair and the various officers present reports. They showed the club to be in a flourishing condition, both as to membership and finance, and that the work is progressing favorably.

Following the business session, a bean supper was served in charge o the entertainment committee. During this part of the proceedings, addresses were made by Rev. L. R. Howard, G. Herbert Condict and the new president, Clinton Firstbrook. The entertainment committee was composed of Clinton Firstbrook, George Gage, Joseph Muir, Harry Stewart, Bertram Smith, Clraence Hoffman and Harry Kenney.

Borough Schools Open Tuesday.

In preparation for the opening day all pupils who have never attended the public schools of the borough, are requested to appear at the office of the supervising principal in the Somerset School Monday morning, between 9 and 12 o'clock, so that they may be registered and classified. The high school and grammar departments open at 8:20, the other departments at 9 o'clock on Tuesday morning. A general teachers' meeting has been called for Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The Warren Township Board of Education, which last year transported a number of pupils to the Bound Brook High School, will this year run the stage to the North Plainfield High School It is expected that seven pupils will attend. Guy D. Peck, of South Stirling, has the contract.

Promised to Be Good.

James McCarthy, a shoemaker living on West Third street, was arraigned in the city court this morning, charged by his wife with continued drunkenness and disorderly conduct. Mrs. McCarthy informed Judge Runyon after the case had been heard that she was willing to give the defendant one more chance and for this reason a suspended sentence of sixty days was placed over him. McCarthy gave his solemn promise that he would be on his best behavior for a thousand years and a day.

Remanded for a Hearing.

Letter-carrier Daniel J. McNamara, attached to the Plainfield postoffice, who was arrested on Thursday, charged with opening and destroying letters, was arraigned before United States Commissioner Bigelow, of New York, yesterday, and remanded for a hearing on Monday. It is understood that the carrier still denies the charge preferred against him and his friends believe he will have no trobule in clearing himself. John P. Owens has been engaged as counsel for McNamara.

The Marathon Race.

BRYAN WILL ENVADE JERSEY NEXT WEEK

William J. Bryan will speak at Washington Park, Camden, on Tuesday, and will then go by special train to Trenton, making several rear-platform speeches en route. He will speak in a theatre at Trenton on the night of Sept. 16. On Thursday night he will speak at Rochester in the Convention Hall, and will return to New York for a conference with his Eastern managers. He will then speak in New York.

On the next day he will make two or three speeches in Connecticut.

It was announced at Democratic National Headquarters yesterday that Nathan Straus would take charge of the Business Men's Committee today, and that the work of organizing the business men in the country into a Bryan brigade would be started forthwith.

John H. Atwood, chairman of the Speakers' Bureau of the Democratic National Committee, came to New York yesterday after an extended tour of the West. He spoke enthusiastically regarding Mr. Bryan's chances.

"The Democratic party," said Mr. Atwood, "has never presented such a united front as now, In Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, Minnesota, and Kentucky we feel certain that Mr. Bryan will win. In Illinois Cannonism has bred disgust, while the Democrats are a unit for Mr. Bryan. In Iowa, owing to the dissensions there, it looks as though the Democratic party would elect a United States Senator. It is also probable that we will carry the electoral vote in that State.

"Kansas is for Bryan owing to his attitude on the bank deposits guarantee matter. Missouri will be for the Democratic nominees by 60,000 or 70,000. Nebraska is already conceded to the Democratic ticket by the Republicans. Conditions are strong in Minnesota for the Democrats. With Gov. Johnson's assistance Mr. Bryan will carry the State easily. In Indiana conditions are more favorable for Bryan than at any time since 1892. Kentucky is safely in the Democratic column, as the so-called Democrats and all other elements are working in harmony for party success.

"Maryland is the only Eastern State where I am familiar with the condition and in which there seems to be any uncertainty. If the election were to be held tomorrow Mr. Bryan would be elected."

STATE'S JUNK PILE COST HALF A MILLION

Just what disposition to make of the voting machines that are scattered about in the various municipalities of the State is a problem that Secretary of State Dickinson is anxious to solve. The local authorities do not want them, the State authorities also do not want them, and Colonel Dickinson, their custodian, says he has no place to put them.

The State of New Jersey spent about $500,000 for these machines in the last three years, but every place they were tried they met with disfavor, so much so that many towns and cities have voted to discontinue using them altogether. The chances are that these machines will eventually find their way into the junk heap, unless some other State can be found that is willing to experiment with them, but the people of New Jersey say they do not want any more of them.

Attorney General McCarter is in Europe, but is expected home in about ten days, and Colonel Dickinson says he hopes then to get a solution of the troublesome question.

Foresters Will Pay Increase.

Court Plainfield, No. 1144, Independent Order Foresters at its meeting, last night, initiated three candidates, paid a number of sick claims, the mortuary benefit held by the late Alexander James Flynn, received five days after proof of death, was filed and was paid to the mother of the deceased. The increase in rates on all members who joined prior to 1899 goes into effect on October 1. As over ninety members in the Court are affected a special committee has had the matter in charge and a majority of them will pay the increase, while a few will take a decreased insurance. Special inducements will be made to get new members in the next three months and it is hoped to round out 1908 with 450 members.

Trinity Church Re-Opens.

Trinity Reformed church will be re-opened tomorrow after being closed last Sunday for cleaning. Rev. Dr. E. P. Johnson will preach both morning and evening and the quartet choir will also furnish music both morning and evening.

INFERNAL MACHINE MAILED TO GOVERNOR

WOULD-BE ASSASSIN FOILED.

"Get Right With God" Inscribed—Sent Day After the Famous Proclamation.

The fact that an infernal machine threatening possible death to Governor John Franklin Fort failed to reach its destination became public today. The machine was sent to the Governor the day following his proclamation regarding Atlantic City and the calling out of the State troops should the officials there fail to observe the laws. According to the information obtained the package lacked two cents postage to carry it to Governor Fort. It was posted at Philadelphia.

The postal officials in the Philadelphia postoffice fearing that the package contained some explosive material, judging by the way it was made up, wrote to Governor Fort, explaining the matter and asked for instructions, adding that they would be glad to open the package and forward to him anything they might find therein of value. The Governor immediately gave them the authority.

The address on the package was placed thereon from letters cut out of a newspaper. Inside the large outside envelope was a blue one and this contained a tin-foil tube in which there was a quantity of highly explosive material. Great care had to be exercises in opening the package.

Accompanying the package was a letter, written in a poor hand, informing the Governor to "Get right with God," and "You will know me better after you receive this package," together with other threatening language. It was directed to the Governor at his Sea Girt home.

When Mr. Fort was questioned about the matter today, he simply replied: "I have nothing to say; I think the package explains itself."

MISSING BOY SOUGHT BY THE LOCAL POLICE

The local police today sent out a general alarm for John Edward Connolly, the fifteen-year-old son of Edward Connolly, of Richmond street, who has been missing from home since Tuesday last. He left on that day with the intention of going to Easton on a pleasure trip and has not been seen since. He has never been in the habit of remaining away from home and his parents are greatly worried over his continued absence.

The boy is about five feet four inches in height, has a dark complexion, black hair and blue eyes. He wore a blue cap, coat and shirtwaist and brown knickerbockers. He graduated from the city grammar school last June and was to have commenced a commercial course in a business college next week.

The full vested choir under the direction of W. E. McClymont, will be present at all services.

To Seek Excise Law Changes.

John J. White, of the Marlborough-Blenheim; Daniel S. White, of the Hotel Traymore, and Dr. J. B. Thompson have been appointed members of an Atlantic City citizens' committee to urge remedial excise legislation. Other members of the committee include Joseph W. Salus, Louis Kuehnle and Walter E. Edge.

Met To Fill Vacancies.

The Union County Board of Elections met at Elizabeth this morning to fill vacancies on the district boards.

BRAKEMAN FARLAY CRUSHED TO DEATH

A strange accident caused the death yesterday afternoon of John Farlay, a brakeman, and resulted in severely injuring engineer Charles Boyer, who was operating drill engine No. 325, on the Central Railroad, at Perth Amboy. The fireman, Harvey Adams, escaped unhurt.

The engine on which Farley was brakeman was engaged in shifting cars on the south side of B dock, and the first car behind the engine was a heavy steel, coal laden gondola. Farlay stood on a step on the rear of the drill ingine's tender between that and the buffer of the first car.

For some reason yet unexplained the coal car suddenly began to give a series of jerks and before the engine could stop the gondola left the track. Farlay had no time to escape from his perilous position. His head was about level with the coupling buffer of the car and his skull was crushed like an eggshell.

The gondola car bouncing over the roadbed swung the engine to one side and the coupling pin broke. The car remained on the dock but the engine with engineer Boyer in the cab, toppled over the edge of the dock and fell thirty feet to the ground, where it was almost a total wreck.

Boyer was pinned under the engine and was terribly burned and scalded before rescuers could get him free. Word was sent at once for assistance and Dr. E. W. Fithian attended to Boyer's wounds. It is believed he will survive his hurts.

A. G. Pickersgill, who is the acting coroner at Perth Amboy, has been unable to find what caused the coal car to hop and leave the rail, and will pursue the investigation. He permitted the brakeman's body to be taken home.

Farlay had been employed eighteen years by the Central Railroad. About twenty minutes before his death a severe bump between cars on another track knocked out the front wheels from their fastenings on the car attached to a tender, and the wheels bounced up on the tender steps.

Farley, who witnessed the crash, remarked to a companion:

"If I'd been standing on those steps nothing could have saved my head being crushed."

In a brief while he met death in such a manner as he had mentioned. He was the sole support of his aged parents and for their sake never married.

MURDERER LANG SANE AND TO BE HANGED

One of the hardest fought battles to save the life of a man convicted of murder in this State ended yesterday afternoon when the jury in the case of Frederick Lang, whose mental condition has been the subject of a hearing in the Middlesex County Court at New Brunswick for the last two days, returned a verdict finding him sane. Lang was sentenced months ago to die by hanging on September 25 in New Brunswick.

The hanging of Lang will be the first execution of this kind to occur in Middlesex county in twenty-five years, and it will be the last that ever will occur unless the law which provides capial punishment by means of the electric chair is revised. Lang was sentenced before this law became effective.

The murder of Katie Gordon, for which Lang is to die, occurred in Piscataway in April, 1906. Piqued because the woman, who was his niece, refused to marry him, Lang, who was a mere youth, shot and killed her.

Lad Loses Part of a Finger.

Frank McCarty, aged ten years old, of Manson place, while watching a neighboring boy chop some wood on Thursday, accidentally got his hand too near the axe and he lost the ends of the second and third fingers. Both pieces were sewed on by Dr. P. B. Cregar, but he thinks it will be impossible to save the end of the second finger.

Bicycle Case Continued.

The proceedings against Walter Foster, the West Third street colored boy accused of stealing Lorenzo Townley's wheel, were again continued in the city court this morning. The defendant again denied being guilty and the case was put over until Wednesday morning to secure further information.

Installing a Coal Bunker.

VanZandt & Voorhees, of Park avenue, are having a modern coal bunker installed in their yards by the R. H. Beaumont Company, contracting engineers, of Philadelphia. Its capacity for all sizes of coal will be about one thousand tons.

ELKS HOLD CLAMBAKE AT WATCHUNG SPRINGS

The Watchung Spring Water company's grounds on upper Mountain avenue are the Mecca for Elks from all parts of Union and Somerset counties today. The cause of the influx of the antlered host is the annual field day and clambake of Plainfield lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., which began this morning. It will last until this evening.

A large crowd was on hand by noon time and a program of sports arranged by the outing committee is being carried out. A feature of this part of the affair will be a baseball game between teams representing the Plainfield and Somerville lodges. There will also be quoit pitching, running and jumping matches and hammer throwing for the championship among the Union and Somerset county Elks. The bake will be served at 4 o'clock under the supervision of "Al" Staats.

The outing committee in charge of the affair is composed of Edson Wescott, George O. Stevens and Lawrence Marshall.

STEAMSHIP SERVICE FOR ATLANTIC CITY

Long cherished plans of linking Atlantic City to New York and Philadelphia with a steamship service, to carry freight and passengers, is to be realized next March, when the Atlantic City Steamboat Transportation Company will put a service into operation. It will be kept up all year. The service to Philadelphia will at first be freight only, but later on passengers will be transported. To New York both freight and passengers will be carried.

The company is capitalized at $250,000 has chartered steamships and leased landing places. The officers are Jacob Bothwell, manager of steel pier, president; vice president, Thomas J. Ryan; secretary, Howard J. Cloud; treasurer, Henry W. Cochran. These officers are members of the board of directors, which includes Charles Cahill, Republic Rubber Works, Philadelphia; E. f Chandler, attorney; Thomas Small, Camden, and William J. Melony, Atlantic City, general manager.

"These boats," said Mr. Melony, "as now arranged, will leave here and Philadelphia at five o'clock p. m. in the afternoon and will reach their destination twelve hours later. The New York branch will cover the trip in seven hours and the round fare will be three dollars. The boats will draw seven feet of water, and the line will help the resort in getting an appropriation for a deeper channel over the bar."

POSTMASTERS TO ATTEND BIG BANQUET TONIGHT.

Postmaster E. H. Bird, of this city, is among the postmasters who will attend a banquet to be given by Postmaster Harry Bacharach, of Atlantic City, at the St. Charles Hotel, tonight. The speakers will include C. P. Granfield, first assistant to the Postmaster General; P. V. McGra, fourth assistant; F. E. McMillan, chief postoffice inspector; John A. Holmes, secretary to the Postmaster General; Basil Miles, superintendent of mails; H. B. Holliday, chief clerk to the second assistant Postmaster General; Representative John J. Gardner, chairman of the House Committee on Postoffices, and Edward C. Stokes.

James Cortelyou, brother of the Secretary of the Treasury, and who is connected with the Postoffice Inspectors' Department, addressed the conference yesterday. Last night the postmasters were entertained at Young's Pier theatre.

C. E. Convention to Meet Here.

At a meeting of the Congress of the Plainfield Christian Endeavor Union, held Thursday night in the Y. M. C. A. parlors, it was decided by a unanimous vote to invite the State Christian Endeavor Union, through the State executive committee, to meet in Plainfield in 1909 As the State committee has informed the local Union through its President, J. T. Sproull, that an invitation of this kind would be accepted, the convention for Plainfield seems to be a certainty. The formation of several convention committees was discussed and a special session of the Congress will be held on Thursday, October 1 to complete arrangements.

Will Give Children an Outing.

The annual ice cream festival and outing for the children of the members of the Gesang and Turn Verein, will be held in Saengerbund Grove, North Plainfield, tomorrow afternoon and evening. The committee in charge has prepared a fine program of outdoor events for the children.

GRAIN THIEF CAPTURED

Colored Boy Admits Pilfering Corn and Oats from Freight Cars.

SEVERAL OTHERS IMPLICATED.

Sewer Contractor Who Is Alleged to Have Purchased the Stolen Goods Also Taken Into Custody.

Continued thefts of oats and corn from cars placed on sidings at the Richmond street freight station led to the arrest yesterday of Horace Martin, a colored boy living on Fillmore avenue. He is the first of a coterie of East End youths who will be apprehended for the offenses as there are five or six of them concerned and their depredations, covering a period of two years, have cost local grain merchants many hundreds of dollars.

When Martin was taken into custody by Detective-Sergeant John Flynn he readily admitted his guilt and said that he had pilfered several bags of oats from cars and had sold them to Michael Mango, an Italian sewer contractor, who has an office and store on Richmond street. It has been the custom of boys in the neighborhood, he said, to make a little "easy money" in this way as Mango would pay twenty-five cents a bag for all the corn and oats brought to him. The contractor was immediately arrested by the officer and was arraigned with Martin in the city court this morning.

Mango stoutly denied that he had purchased anything from the boys at any time but Martin declared that he had and that he could procure several of his companions who would swear to the same thing. Judge Runyon accordingly released the juvenile defendant in the custody of the detective-sergeant to get some of them and the case will be held in abeyance until the other boys are procured.

Percy S. Dayton, who has been one of the heaviest losers by the depredations, was in court this morning and declared that he would spare no expense in prosecuting the receivers of the stolen grain. He told Judge Runyon that practically every car consigned to him would be broken into either before or after his employes started to unload. Frequently several bushels would be taken while drivers were darting the contents to his mill but despite systematic watch the culprits escaped detection. The other dealers had suffered the same way, he continued, and they were aware that a dozen or more Italians living in the East End who had horses never purchased feed supplies in the regular way.

The Martin boy is the son of the late Special Officer Thomas Martin, and was in the city court yesterday in the Petman Robinson case. He admitted receiving part of the $7 stolen from Dr. Browning's home by the youngster who has a dozen or more thefts charged against him.

SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSOCIATION IN SOMERSET CO. ELECTS.

Mrs. J. A. Powlison, of North Plainfield, was on Wednesday re-elected superintendent of primary work of the Somerset County Sunday-school Association at its forty-ninth annual session held at Bound Brook. There were 177 delegates present, representing forty-three of the eighty-eight Sunday-schools of the county. There were thirty-seven visitors. Assemblyman W. W. Smalley, of Bound Brook, was elected president of the association for the coming year. The vice-presidents are Judge L. H. Schenck, of Somerville; Thomas D. Wesley, of Pluckemin, and Rev. J. A. Bliss, of Somerville. The other officers are as follows: Corresponding secretary and treasurer, Rev. C. J. Culp, of Bound Brook; recording secretary, Rev. J. T. Scott, of Lamington; State executive committeeman, James L. Griggs, of Somerville.

Will Attend a Convention.

Judge and Mrs. William Newcorn, of West Front street, left today for Bridgeport, Conn., where Mr. Newcorn goes as a grand representative from the State to the Grand Council of the Improved Order of Red Men. The convention will continue until Thursday of next week, after which he and Mrs. Newcorn will enjoy a trip to Maine.

Silk Hosiery Shower.

Miss Jeannette G. Addis, of Orange place, who has been spending the summer with her sister, Mrs. C. N. Mundy, of Winthrop Highlands, Mass., was tendered another surprise by her Winthrop friends in the form of a "silk hosiery" shower, Wednesday night. The evening was passed in dancing and other forms of amusement, after which supper was served.

STATE NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

The Presbytery of Wes Jersey will meet at Elmer next Tuesday and Wednesday.

While gunning for reed birds below Millville, Asa Robbins received seven shot in the face from a gun in the hands of a careless hunter.

For having in his possession four robins that had been shot, Angela Carlo, of 142 Cox street, Camden, was fined $80 by Justice of the Peace Roub yesterday.

During a quarrel over a note that was past due, John Gotti beat Lewis Schenck with a stake and cut a large gash in his forehead, at Newfield. Gotti was placed under bail for trial.

Miss Jennie Chase and Mrs. Martha Kelley, daughter and mother, residents of Trenton, were nearly burned to death yesterday by the explosion of an oil lamp, which they always keep lighted at nights alongside of their bed.

John McKetchie, twenty-five years old, was seriously burned about the arms, face and chest by the explosion of a gasoline engine in Mitchell's quarry, in Lower Pittsgrove, yesterday. He was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, Paterson.

Harry Roberts, whose residence is in Wyoming City, slipped and fell off an Erie train at Ramseys last night. He sustained a fracture of the left leg and was badly shaken up. He was taken to the General Hospital at Paterson.

Salem County for years has been the only county in the State with no American flag or a place from which to fly one. In line with improvements made to the old courthouse, the Board of Freeholders voted to erect a pole and buy a big flag for the front of the structure.

A man, who gave no name, took lodging Wednesday night at the boarding-house of Laslo Rouse, in Trenton. Yesterday the stranger disappeared, and with him $100 in cash from the trunk of the man who shared his room. The stranger overlooked $200 which the man in the next room had secreted in a sock.

A westbound trolley car on the Camden-Trenton Railway jumped the track west of the Pennsylvania Railroad bridge at Roebblings yesterday afternoon and went part way down a twelve-foot embankment, and would have turned over, but was prevented by coming in contact with a telegraph pole.

S. E. Hadley, forty years old, of Philadelphia, who was employed in the postal department at Broad Street Station, that city, was struck by a West Jersey and Seashore Railroad train near Corson's Inlet last night, and died as he was being taken to Ocean City. He was deaf, and did not hear the warning whistle of the locomotive. He leaves a family.

The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty of Animals, at Trenton, yesterday, had William Raub arrested for neglecting his cab horse while he played pinochle in a saloon for eight hours, during which time the animal went without food or water. The court let him go, but warned him not to get so absorbed in cards that he forgets his steed.

A tarantula caused a panic in the office of Mayor Story, of Atlantic City, yesterday. Of the half dozen men in the antechamber of the Mayor's sanctum, when the terrifying insect appeared, only one was ready to give battle. This was a youth, the assistant clerk to the Mayor's secretary, H. Wesler, who used a broom handle with fatal effect to the invader.

About 200 members of the congregation of the Market Street M. E. church, Paterson, made welcome to their pastor, Rev. Dr. Winfield C. Snodgrass, and A. B. Van Houten, the church treasurer, last night in the lecture room of the church. Dr. Snodgrass and Mr. Van Houten were members of the party to "The Land of the Midnight Sun," which returned to this country last Wednesday.

Yachtsmen from Anglesea, who believe that they saw the body of Charles Bateman, of South Atlantic City, floating out at sea yesterday, could not pick up the corpse, because women abroad the yacht went into hysterics when the craft was run toward the floating body. Bateman was drowned with Miss Clara Strickland by the overturning of their launch in the heavy seas off Egg Harbor Bay. The body of the girl was recovered.

Children Should Be Neat.

A waste paper basket should form part of every nursery equipment. Children should be taught to put into it all scraps of paper, cuttings from dolls' dressmaking and any other little odds and ends that would otherwise litter the nursery floor.

It will teach them an excellent lesson in tidiness, and be good training—especially for the girls—for the day when each will have a home of her own.

While children are young it is comparatively easy to teach them to be tidy, but the lesson is hard to learn in later life.

Surface Transit.

"Step lively, please," said the conductor.

"If I were young enough to do that," responded the aged passenger, climbing aboard, "I'd walk and beat your car."—Philadelphia Ledger.

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY PRESS

MOTHS IN THE HOUSE MEAN MUCH TROUBLE.

Eternal vigilance is the price of freedom from moths. This year is marked more than usual by the presence of the destructive insects, and the housewife who has not instituted a search for them would do well to delay no longer.

The common clothes-moth (Tinea Pellionella is its important sounding scientific name) measures about half an inch from tip to tip of its wings which are grayish yellow, with indistinct tawny-colored spots. The female moth is not particular where she lays her eggs, but favored spots are the winter garments, a downy blanket, a rug or an inviting fur. Laying the eggs, she dies, happy in the thought—if she thinks—that her progeny will be numbered by the score, if not by the hundred, and that they all will have plenty to eat.

It is these tiny eggs which are especially to be feared, says the Boston Traveler. We may pack away the winter woolens so that the moths cannot reach them, and that is indeed wise, but are we sure that the moths have not effected a lodgment in them, leaving eggs there? If the eggs are present, they will hatch into larvae, which will feed on what is within reach, and then move on to get a new supply. In time the moth, provided with a pair of wings, will fly off into the outside world to cause more trouble.

The moth does not like the odor of camphor or cedar, so will not lay her eggs where it is, but the eggs once laid no such odor will prevent their hatching. Dr. Howard, the eminent entomologist, in giving directions for an anti-moth campaign, says that the best way is to beat, brush and sun the articles to bestored. Then put them into large pasteboard boxes such as tailors use to send home clothes in, and gum a strip of wrapping paper around the edge, so as to seal up completely. The moth cannot get in to lay her eggs, and when the garments are taken out to be worn one will not be annoyed with the odors that moth-preventives are apt to leave.

If you have packed away the winter garments safely, having first thoroughly beaten, brushed and sunned them so as to make sure that there can be no moth eggs in them, your mind may be at rest. If you have not gone through this process you had better take the garments out and treat them in the way described. Anything woolen not to be packed should be beaten and brushed and put on the clothes line as soon as possible. Burn sulphur candles in the closets where these woolen articles must continue to be kept. Wipe the walls with a solution of carbolic acid, and when possible, wipe the garments themselves off with gasoline. Having done this it is safe to say that you need not fear moths.

THE "POMP" IS GOING AND WE'RE GLAD

The summer girl's head no longer looks as if it had been blown up by an air pump all around. Instead, directly on the top, there is a rather flat effect.

The pompadour bulging violently from every point of the head is distinctly out of it. While many women still cling to the hair raised from the brow it has ceased to be a towering mass of Marcelling.

The newest pompadour is soft in effect rather than stiff. Often the "rat" is arranged well toward the back, so that the hair is on an inclined plane, even drooping slightly over the brow.

The Psyche knot is very fetching when worn by a young face with regular features; it makes a snub-nosed girl look like one of those squat cream jugs that our grandmothers doted on.

If a roll is used in the back it is happily not allowed to droop. Nothing was more distinctly bad style than the Niagara Falls effect in hair dressing, flopping almost to the collar.

While the stiff puffs are no longer in the first fashion, the woman who thinks it worth while to bother with an elaborate coiffure in hot weather, still wears great loose loops, made by twisting strands of hair over the finger and pinning them into place.

Some of the new puffs are pulled down over the temple at one side.

Stray locks are frowned upon. Not even the summer windstorm is considered a justifiable excuse for a dishelved head.

It is smart, but not especially becoming to the average woman, to part the hair to one side and brush it back loosely over short rolls, with one side bulging more than the other.

Waves are looser and not so regular as in the ordinary marcelling.

The girl whose hair defies even the curling iron in summer should by all means wear a rat. It keeps the hair from falling in a dejected mass on the forehead.

What Really Counts.

The candidate, he kissed the baby, rubbed the heads of Sam and Sue; he swore the twins were beautiful and wished that he had two—but that doesn't count. He asked about the corn bread that he vainly tried to chaw and forthwith begged a recipe, of course, that tickled maw—but that doesn't count. But just before he left he winked and then closed up his jaw, and slipping out behind the barn he took a drink with paw—and that's what counts.—Carson City (Mich.) Gazette.

THE RETURN OF OLD-FASHIONED STITCHES.

The fancy for crocheting and for filet lace which has struck the community hard has brought back all the old-time stitches familiar in long past generations. Among other things, women long unfamiliar with the crochet hook are making crocheted table mats for the polished luncheon table. In the women's exchange and in fancy shops there has been such a demand for the work that many a woman is earning good pin money by the means. Plate doylies, centerpieces and smaller and larger mats for the serving dishes come in entire sets at what seem fabulous prices for the average woman.

Made at home in odd minutes, the work is easily accomplished and has the merit of keeping the fingers busy without straining the eyes. Pattern books with many designs for varrious crocheted articles are to be had in all needlework departments. Crocheted insets for waists and gowns, the narrow insertions used for setting seams together and crocheted tops for buttons will occupy many a woman's veranda days this summer.

DELICIOUS FRUIT SALAD.

There are several different ways of preparing a grape fruit salad. For a sweet fruit salad, cut in halves, remove the seeds and with a pointed pair of scissors snip the membranes that hold the centre core in place and the pulp to the walls, then remove all together. Fill the cavity in the centre with powdered sugar, moistened with Maraschino liquor, sherry or grape juice. Let stand in a cold place for several hours before serving. When heady to serve put a Maraschino cherry in the centre of each fruit.

Serve a half fruit to each guest. White grapes cut up and seeded are often added to the pulp, which is nearly always served in the grape fruit shell. At this season fresh sour cherries are often substituted for the Maraschino.

Another grape fruit salad is made by removing the pulp from halved grape fruit, discarding all the pith. This done, return the pulp to the skin, put a tablespoonful mayonnaise dressing on each half and serve on lettuce leaves. Chopped nuts may be added to the grape fruit pulp or chopped celery when in season.

Manager Listman of the Y. M. C. A. team has arranged a game with the Mono A. C., to be played on Crescent Oval this afternoon at 3:45 o'clock, and a fine contest is expected.

The Clinton Avenues will journey to Rahway this afternoon and make a determined effort to score a victory to make up for the defeat of Labor Day morning.

"Red" Alberts played two games on Labor Day, in the morning with Rahway and in the afternoon with Scotch Plains. He is a favorite with the fans and always gets the glad hand.

The fans are anxiously waiting for the Somerville team's appearance on Crescent Oval, September 19. This contest is expected to draw the biggests crowd of the season.

How about another game with High Bridge? Manager Dorflinger should try and arrange another contest.

It is regretted by all the local fans that Manager Dorflinger has been unable to schedule a game this season with Flemington. The Hunterdon county boys have evidently had their hands full with teams in and near Hunterdon county and they are only near-champions this year, judging by the record of games.

Mike Donlin is getting a good many hits by his fleetness in getting to first base.

The New Yorks have twenty-nine more games to play, the Pittsburgs twenty-four and the Chicagos twenty-three.

President Pulliam's latest bulletin shows that Frank Chance has signed a contract with the Chicagos to cover the next four years.

With McGraw and Jennings directing the opposing forces, no city will be more interested in the coming world's series than Baltimore. Maybe Ned Hanlon can tell the outcome.

It is reported in Milwaukee by friends of Konetchy, first baseman of the St. Louis National League club, that he is to be traded to the New York club for next year.

It has been officially decided that the pennant season of the National League ends in the West on October 4. In the East it ends on the 7th, and the question was raised whether the Western teams could play off postponed games in their section after the 4th, when the last games out there are scheduled.

About all there is for the New York Americans to fight for now is to avoid losing a hundred games. The outlook for such avoidance isn't at all bright. There are twenty-seven more games to play and the Highlanders must win more than they lose from now on to escape the hundredth defeat.

GOLF.

About sixty aspirants for the amateur golf cahmpionship title practiced over the Garden City links Thursday. Some did well, others indifferently, but those who did get around in low figures were all players with reputations.

The best card of the day was made by Chad Sawyer, the Midland record holder, who started off brilliantly with a 3 at the first hole. With the exception of a 4 at the short second hole and a 5 at the sixth, Sawyer played practically par golf. Henry H. Wilder, the Harvard champion, was on his game, and made two rounds in 82 and 79.

An interesting four-ball match had Walter J. Travis and Warren K. Wood, one of the Western cracks, on one side, and Jerome D. Travers, the national champion, and Fred Herreshoff on the other. The rivals finished all square, Travis and Herreshoff getting 77 each and Travers an 81.

These were the only scores given out. Others noticed on the course, however, were Mason Phelps, the Western title holder; Robert Abbott, a former intercollegiate champion; W. Fellowes Morgan, Jr., of Baltusrol; W. C. Fownes, Jr., and Eben M. Byers, of Pittsburg; Nelson Whitney, of New Orleans, and A. W. Tillinghast, of Philadelphia.

Harold W. Beveridge, the English player, was on the course when he received a cable dispatch announcing the death of his father. Beveridge intends to sail immediately.

Leighton Calkins, secretary of the Metropolitan Golf Association, takes exception to the recent statement on the part of Will Anderson, the former open title holder, that the monetary inducement offered by the association for its next championship tournament is insufficient. Mr. Calkins thinks any criticism on the part of a "pro" over the size of the prize money comes with ill grace. In his judgment, it is especially ill timed at a period when there is a difference of opinion in the ranks of the Metropolitan Golf Association as to the advisability of doing anything at all for the professionals.

A GREAT NEWSPAPER.

Mr. Scudder has just cause for pride in the achievements of that very excellent daily, the Newark Evening News, which has just observed its twenty-fifth birthday. From a place of small importance in New Jersey newspaperdom, his paper has firmly established its right to be ranked an easy first among the many creditable journals of New Jersey. In fact it occupies a field all to itself for it alone covers the news of the day in every city, town, village and township in New Jersey. Its news is gathered thoroughly, selected well and edited carefully. Its editorials have made it a power in New Jersey political life and in consequence his journal is a factor to be reckoned with at all times by the powers that be. To it more than to any other source may credit be given for the change for better government and higher political ideals in this State. And all this is solely due to the wisdom shown by the proprietor in engaging the very best newspaper men to editorially direct his most profitable investment.

It is well generally admitted that no one is in a better position to judge of a political manager's worth and particularly of one who is placed at the head of his party's county organization than a State Senator. As the opinion expressed by Senator Ernest R. Ackerman of County Chairman Frank Smith, but a few months ago, is still fresh in the mind of everyone, any further endorsement of the latter is hardily necessary until primary day when it will be given more still emphatic expression by the Third ward Republicans.

Captain Robert Kirkland's candidacy for the shrievalty will appeal to the voter who desires to have as public officials men of sound judgment and thorough business experience. He is highly rescepted in Elizabeth where he has spent all his life and where he has earned a reputation as an honest, hardworking and practical man.

Mr. Bryan proposes to devote two days next week to New Jersey. It is to be regretted that he will make the visit so short inasmuch as it is up to New Jersey to poll as big a majority as possible against him.

Mr. Bryan charges $500. per talk when on lecturing tours. In view of the effective work he is doing for Mr. Taft, Chairman Hitchcock should mail the Nebraskan a good, fat check.

The Social Element In the Life of the Other World.

Ninth of a Series on Heaven by REV. DR. CHARLES E. HERRING

What a strange place heaven will be if each soul is to sit in solitary contemplation of the glories of Christ through all eternity, and yet that was the idea of the dying woman who thought that in the heavenly world she would have no knowledge of her devoted husband though he were sitting by her side because her entire thought would be centered in her divine Redeemer. The truth is that when we love the Lord our God with all our hearts, our love for others will be intensified, and especially for those who are near and dear to us.

In the very nature of the Divine Being, there is this social element. As we conceive of God, He is a Trinity of Father, Son and Spirit, and the whole Bible is a revelation of the unfolding of God in these relations. The Father loves the Son and the Son loves the Father, and They both send the Holy Spirit to the earth. The divine plans for the world are the result of the counsel of these three persons. The Son can do nothing of Himself but what He seeth the Father do. Then our Lord says that the Spirit will not speak of Himself but shall glorify Me and shall bring the things that I have taught to your remembrance." The whole plan of redemption is not the work of the Son simply; but the work of the Father and the Holy Spirit likewise. This is not only true of the fact of redemption but also of creation and providence. "What the Father does, He does by the Son and through the Holy Ghost."

What does all this prove? Does it not point to the social element in the very character of the Godhead? God made man in His own image; so when man craves communion and fellowship with his particular friends, it is because it is a part of His eternal nature; for social life is an element of the divine character. It is said of Adam that he did not find Eden a paradise until Eve was given to him in his worship. Heaven will be a paradise to us as we mingle with our own people in singing the praises of God.

Heaven to perfectly satisfy us must be the place where every element of our nature will find its perfect employment. Those whom we have loved here we shall not love any less in the world to come. Why should we imagine that an entirely new set of conditions will be ours in that world.

There will be a change. Here we know each other in part and because of the partial knowledge there is misunderstanding. In that world, we shall know even as we are known and because of that perfect knowledge, we shall have perfect relations with each other.

You have asked: what about the children in that world? Shall they grow beyond all your recognition. I imagine we shall all grow more and more in that world but the children will always be our children, and there will be something about them that we shall recognize.

The Father says I cannot make all this clear to you now but Heaven will satisfy you in this respect. I have no doubt that some new power besides that which we already possess will be ours in that world and this power will enable us to recognize them, for Scripture assures us that "we know not what we shall be." There are dormant powers in us then, which we believe are capable of indefinite expansion. We know the possibility of a particular seed we plant in the soil. We know that from our experiesce: but our infinite possibility we do not know because it has never been revealed to us.

The recognition of our friends in that world will not be only through the remembered features of their bodies but through the irradiating characteristics of their souls; when we awake and our new senses sweep the historic generations of the redeemed, we shall know the great masters of thought and song and the great leaders of the sacramental host in instant glance from our long knowledge of their thoughts and deeds.

Our loved ones and friends in the other world will be perfect in their holiness; but will have their individual ways of doing things whereby we shall be able to recognize them.

It is thought by some that because the Scripture says: That in Heaven there will neither be marriage nor giving in marriage, the social life and the particular love of earth must pass away; but Christ was simply speaking of the ordinance of marriage for the purpose of raising a family, for in that world there will be no births or deaths.

Dr. Archibald Alexander beautifully says; "As here knowledge is acquired by the aid of instructors, why may not the same be the fact in Heaven? What a delightful employment to the saints who have been drinking in the knowledge of God and His work for thousands of years to communicate instruction to the saints just arrived. How delightful to conduct the pilgrim, who has just finished his race, through the ever-blooming flowers of Paradise and to introduce him to this and the other ancient believer and to assist him to find out and to recognize among so great a multitude old friends and earthly relatives."

This instruction of the saints will be to powers and faculties in us that are not ours today. Then new powers shall be granted to us of which today we can form no conception. What does the caterpillar know of the new powers it shall possess when it develops into the gorgeous butterfly; but the powers are lying dormant in the caterpillar. Someday it shall know. Someday it will follow the instincts of its nature and God will not disappoint it.

Some one tells us the story of the little boy who asked his father: "What is poetry?" The father answered; "Poetry is the most beautiful thing in the world." "Show me some peotry," said the boy and the father showed him; but the boy could not see its beauty even when the father read some of it to him. The boy said: "I can see how the Heaven is beautiful with all its stars, and how mother's face is beautiful," but he said, "father, I can't see how this poetry is beautiful." Then the father said: "I can't explain it now but when you are older you will understand how beautiful poetry is." The father with all his knowledge and love could not make it plain to the undeveloped powers of the boy. It was simply a question of waiting. How we shall know our dear ones in the other world has not been perfectly revealed to us, because such knowledge is impossible to us as was the beauty of poetry to the little boy. There are other problems which perplex us. We wonder at the strange providences of God. Why do things happen so if God is interested in us and is watching over us. The answer is the answer of the father to his little boy. You shall understand by and by. This thought should comfort us today that we shall be different in the other world in the sense that we shall be perfect there where we are imperfect here for there every thing shall be perfected, even our friendships.

THE FORUM.

As to Trunk Sewer Engineer.

Editor, The Daily Press:

Your account of the joint meeting recently held to discuss the proposed joint sewer to tide water, and several points brought out at the meeting seemed to leave room for comment which I had hoped to see in last night's paper.

Plainfield must insist on the employment of a capable engineer, but as we expect six or more municipalities to join with us, all of these should be consulted before a decision is reached in the matter of appointing an engineer.

It was stated by Mayor Swackhammer of Dunellen that he had gone to Somerville and Raritan and learned from them the statement that they would like to consider the project and could meet on any nights excepting Monday or Wednesday. Notwithstanding this the finance committee according to your report, will meet at an early date to definitely select an engineer, and perhaps before these two additional municipalities can have an opportunity to be heard on this important issue.

Is there need for such haste? Does this argue well for subsequent concentrated actions so necessary to the success of such a project.

Concerning the relative ability of the engineers, Hering and Fuller, and Alexander Potter. The former have undoubtedly a wide reputation, but it does not appear that they have been engineers on any joint trunk sewer work similar to the project under consideration, which has as yet been brought to completion, whereas the trunk sewer serving Summit, Roselle Park, West Orange, South Orange, Irvington, Vailsburg, Milburn, Short Hills, Wyoming, Maplewood and portions of Elizabeth and Newark is ample evidence of Mr. Potter's ability as an organizer and an engineer. This work was completed in record time without litigation or even injunction from start to finish and has given great satisfaction.

Mr. Potter's price appears to be less than half of the other firm's, but seems to be a fair price in view of the existing notes, maps and profiles of previous preliminary surveys for a tide water sewer which Plainfield has already paid for and which are at the disposal of the engineers who will do this work. Any engineer knows that these will prove to be valuable assistance in this instance.

Is it not pertinent to ask if a report made by an engineer who has had no previous affiliation with any of the towns will not be received with greater impartiality than one made by an engineer who are at present identified with the interests of one or two of the municipalities? Taking all things into consideration, will it not be more economical and better in this instance to employ Mr. Potter and after accepting his report have it submitted to some other engineer, let us say, Messrs. Hering and Fuller, for their examination and criticism; such a review can certainly be made for five hundred dollars. This gives the municipalities the services of Mr. Potter with his recent sewer experiences, both in organization, construction and maintenance (for he is still chief engineer of that system), and also the services of Messrs. Fuller and Hering for four hundred dollars less than these gentlemen alone want to do this work. This suggested method of procedure is not at all unusual, in fact customary in important work of this nature, as an instance of this it may be cited that after Messrs. Hering and Fuller completed their report and plan of the Passaic Valley sewer recently made, other engineers were employed to go over and check up their work.

L. M. BOOTH.

Plainfield, N. J., Sept. 12, 1908.

The Charm of Billie Burke.

There was no thought of Billie Burke when Caillavet and De Flers wrote "Love Watches" or "L'Amour Veille," as it was entitled in the French. But when Charles Frohman read the curious adventures of the will-o'-the-wisp, love-sick Jacqueline—it was Miss Burke, not Jacqueline or Miss Burke as Jacqueline that danced about his fancy. Mr. Frohman thinks Miss Burke the one woman in the world for the part—a srong statement from one who manages so many actresses, all of them nationally and some of them internationally popular exponents of charming womanhood. But the rare talent of Billie Burke is an exuberant, frolicsome display of impulsive girlishness that always stops this side of the line of mere entimentality. She never suggests effort. In "Love Watch," at the Lyceum her unmistakable freshness of look and frankness of manner, her self-reliant air of innocence, carries her over scenes that might be risque in hands less deft. She cats what the word ingenue must have signified before it became bandied about in stageland. She inspires an impression of flower-like innocence and beauty which would not call for particular mention but that in her case the charm is of ingenuous girlhood directed by a good common sense of proportion.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Services tomorrow at the Baptist church will be held at the usual hours, morning preaching 10:45; B. Y. P. U. 7:15 p. m.; evening service, 8 o'clock. Rev. Mr. Mathews will preach.

The weekly Bible study meetings which were discontinued during the summer have been resumed, the class meeting last night at the home of William Guest.

The evening service at the Methodist church tomorrow night will be an Ira Sankey service, instead of the regular preaching service.

No game will be played on the home grounds this afternoon, the locals playing Westfield at Recreation Park.

John Van Nosdall has returned from a visit with friends in New York State.

Albert Walpole has returned from a two weeks' visit with friends in Boston, Mass.

Miss Marion Goodwin has returned from a short stay at Asbury Park

Miss Emma Cox has returned from a visit with friends in Massachusetts.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

There will be preaching in the Baptist church tomorrow as usual. The morning subject will be "Ye Believe in God, Believe also in Me," and in the evening "The Christian's Heritage."

Lorena Harris, Gladys Thorne, and Edward Norman are among those from here who will attend Florence Bunting's birthday party this evening at Stelton.

Monroe Pyatt will lead the Christian Endeavor meeting tomorrow evening. The topic will be "Commending Our Society by Church attendance."

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The public school children are now in full swing of the fall and winter work and the new superintendent as well as the teachers have made an excellent start with the daily routine.

The number of registered voters thus far is 454 as against 456 last year. The completed registry will add some few names to the voting population.

The Sunday-school session at the M. E. church will be resumed tomorrow afternoon at the usual hour for the winter months.

HERE AND THERE.

Blakeslee and Stewart Roberts, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Miles Roberts, of Kensington avenue, who have been spending the summer at Tolland, Mass., in the Berkshires, are expected home in a few days. Recently they arranged a picnic on the banks of the beautiful lake at Tolland, where a dozen lassies and laddies had a fine time. It was planned that Blakeslee Roberts should contribute the fish for lunch and he determined to make an extra effort to keep his promise.

While trolling for his "finny" contribution, he felt a vigorous pull on the line; quickly and quietly he wound his reel, land ing a fine pickerel weighing more than three pounds. Such shouting and cries of joy and hurrahing as came from the lucky fisherman and his companion in the boat, roused the echoes of the mountains surrounding the lake. Everyone rushed to the bank to learn the cause. One of the picnickers had his kodak with him and photographed the "catcher" and the "caught" as soon as the boat came near shore.

This pickerel is a specimen of the excellent fish with which the lake is stocked. Blakeslee made the record catch of the season and he is mighty proud of his success.

During the summer other Plainfielders who have sojourned at Tolland include Mr. and Mrs. John Cottrell, Mrs. C. W. Foster and family, Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Halloway and Miss Harriet Halloway. The Misses Cahoone, of Watchung avenue, who are spending the summer abroad, have purchased a beautiful site at Tolland and another year will erect a commodious bungalow there where they will spend future summers.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Lyman H. Howe is practically the only exhibitor in this country who presents pictures with the seriousness and dignity that should characterize this modern art. This claim is well substantiated by mere mention of some of the features of the new program to be seen at the New Plainfield theatre this afternoon and tonight. It covers a trip to Naples, India, Savoy (France), and Sicily, a personally conducted drive through Rome; a review of a brilliant military pagaent in London as well as the Reedham Orphans in a new drill; Stirring scenes of Australian sports; and a still more exciting steeplechase in England; novel and weird effects of physical phenomena; and the strange friendships of birds and animals as well as many others.

There was a time when John Brown was supposed to be the pivotal head of the Brown family, but in these later days he has given place to the youthful scion of the house of Brown—Buster by name—Buster Brown, and who does not know him? —comes to us in theatric form when the stage of the New Plainfield theatre next Tuesday afternoon and night will be given over to an evening of joyous mirth, accentuated by tuneful numbers and the latest catchy songs. Nor is this all, for the bevy of charming girls going to make up Buster's retinue will be seen in a number of dances and marches, among the latter being a most enjoyable one, "Buster Brown's Bobby Burn's Brigade." The cast presenting this merry musical comedy is headed by Master Reed as the demure resolving "Buster," and this clever little fellow is said to stand out as the head and front of one of the best musical organizations the current season will offer. In the support of Master Reed petite Alice Mortlock will be seen as "Mary Jane," while the well known pantomimist, Edwin Lamar, as "Tige," Buster's ever present canine companion is also an efficient member of the best cast ever given this popular musical comedy. New scenery will grace the stage and comely maidens galore will be in evidence.

The town tattletale is most amusingly caricatured in the comedy of life at Hardscrabble, N. H., written by the authors of "The Old Homestead." It will be seen here next Wednesday night under its well known title of "Our New Minister." One of the quaint rustic types among the comedy characters is an eavesdropping, meddlesome old maid, and the fun she makes for the audience while she is making trouble for her neighbors is said to be plenty. The New York company will interpret the roles at the local performance.

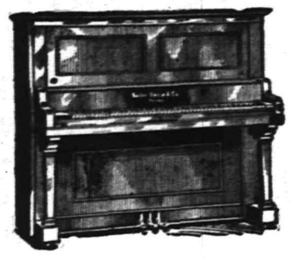
Rida Johnson Young, the author of "Brown of Harvard," which the Shuberts will offer at the New Plainfield theatre next Friday night, with James Young in the title role, has risen in three years to the position of our most successful woman dramatist. In quick succession she has written four straight successes in "The Boys of Company B," "Glorious Betsey," "Brown of Harvard" and "Ragged Robin," each of which has added to the lustre of such stars as Arnold Daly, Mary Mannering, Henry Woodruff and Chauncey Olcott. Although such speed on the part of the writer might put her under the suspicion of "pot boiling," a close study of Mrs. Young's career proves a long period of study and application in the magic art of producing dramatic incident and dialogue. Mrs. Young first became a student of the drama while a student at Radcliffe and entered actively in the field as leading woman in support of her husband, then a popular star through the South. While in this position,



QUALITY and PRICE

The two vital questions in your piano purchase are, first, quality; second, price. An unsatisfactory piano, in tone and action, is the most annoying article you can have in your home. You dislike to be expending money on it continually to keep it in playing condition.

WORK THAT TELLS.

Plenty of It Has Been Done Right Here in Plainfield.

Cures that last are cures that tell. To thoroughly know the virtues of a medicine you must investigate the cures and see if they prove permanent. Doan's Kidney Pills stand this test, and plenty of proof exists right here in Plainfield. People who testified years ago to relief from backache, and kidney disorders, now declare that relief was permanent and the cure perfect. How can any Plainfield sufferer longer doubt the evidence?

Mrs. John Driscoll, 753 West Third street, Plainfield, N. J., says "The statement I gave several years ago concerning my experience with Doan's Kidney Pills was true and I still holds good in every particular. I had a dull pain across my back which clung to me incessantly. Hard work increased my misery and at times I also suffered from headaches and dizzy spells. I tried plasters and remedies of various kinds but without finding relief. Doan's Kidney Pills, which I finally purchased at Randolph's Pharmacy, relieved me and I heartily recommended them. I know of other persons who have used them with just as good results."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York sole agents for the United States.

A GIRL IS KNOWN BY HER STATIONERY.

In these days of fads and fancies a girl is known by her stationery almost as well as by her given name. Many fashionable girls select a certain color and type of writing paper and never vary it for years and years, and the idea is a good one. It stamps a girl as having individuality of her own.

All personal stationery for social notes should have the writer's monogram on it. Some girls still cling to the three initials—others have their Christian names printed out in full, such as "Ellinor," "Muriel," etc.—while still others prefer to have the address of their home in place of either initials or name. Whatever the inscription, it should be stamped in gilt, silver or colored letters of a dull tone. Bright red monograms on white paper are never seen.

For the girl in mourning will be found a black-bordered paper in four widths. The heaviest, or No. 1 border, is used for deep mourning, the border growing narrower as the girl lightens her mourning, and just before she goes into colors she uses a pure white paper with what is known as the Italian border—the tiniest little black line possible all around the paper.

The young girl graduate who writes reams and reams to all the girls in her class will find money in her pocket by investing in a pound or more of what is called "foreign note paper." This is extremely thin and the envelopes which match it are lined, so that the writing on the letter itself will not show through to enlighten the inquisitive eyes of the local postmistress.

Eggshell paper was much used for several years, but of late it has given way to what is known as a cambric or organdie paper. The eggshell paper, while it was very dainty, was extremely hard to write on, the rough finish refusing to take kindly to the ink. This cambric paper has a soft, smooth finish and can be bought in all colors.

While talking about colors it is well to remember that only the palest of shades is used. The blues are dull, gray blues—not a Copenhagen shade. The pinks have just a suggestion of the dawn in them—not a raspberry hue, while the lavenders used are colored like the palest aster, not the purple shade. Greens, yellows and such odd colors are extremely bad form. It is always safe to have white paper, unless as mentioned above, you wish to have some individual paper.

Matching the paper in tone, if not in actual color, must be sealing wax, says the Philadelphia Press. The women in the smartest set always seal their letters. Many of them have a small die for the seal matching the monogram on the paper, reduced several sizes, while many other use a die with a single initial on it.

If you happen to be a girl who is called upon to write many short notes a great convenience will be found in the note cards, which should match your regulation stationery. These cards are about five inches square, made of medium-weight bristol board, like a visiting card would be. They should have your monogram just as your note paper does and envelopes to match. These cards are bought in packages of twenty-five and are great time-savers.

THOUGHTS.

Do you know that your thoughts rule your life,
Be they pure or impure in the strife?
As you think, so you are
And you make or you mar
Your success in the world,
By your thoughts?

Are your thoughts just and true every hour?
Then your life will attest with great power.
If it's love that fills your heart,
Then all hate must depart
You will find all success
In good thoughts.

Are you kind in your thoughts to all?
Then but kindness to you must befall;
As you sow, so you reap
In a measure so deep,
Either pleasure or pain,
By your thoughts.
—Emily Tupper Bendit in Philadelphia Inquirer.

All Depends.

Down the long garden path in a row.
And we candidly say
In a pitying way
"Now, are they not terribly slow?"

But put yourself in a snail's place,
The point of view alters the case.
Their belief may be strong,
As they slide along,
That theirs is a terrible pace.

WRITTEN IN RED

The detective took out his note-book, disfigured with his peculiar hieroglyphics, and began at once making additions, corrections and reflections, quite as if the problem before him had been one in mathematics, and could be approved by applying some of the advanced rules of the higher arithmetic.

"Well," said Thomas, after he had watched him in silence for some minutes, "what is your theory?"

"None, Thomas," returned the detective quickly. "What is yours?"

"That Marion is trying to shield somebody from the results of a capital offense."

"And that somebody is?"

"Either Fetridge or Stackhouse."

"With a leaning toward—"

"Fetridge," said Thomas. "But I should like to know which of the men went to the house that night, if either—before expressing any deep conviction."

"Ah, quite so. And that I propose to ascertain. But go on, Kingman. Your conclusions are always logical, and they interest me for that reason. There is no crime without a motive. What was the motive?"

"My dear fellow," said Thomas, "that is just the mistake made by criminal theorists. But you and I know that the majority of murders are done without adequate motives. Few men in these days plot to kill. They kill when they are insane with rum or jealousy, or to defend themselves."

"You emphasize that, I see!"

"Because I have thought it right along," said the reporter. "The fact that the bullet must have been fired from a point lower down than an erect man naturally carries his hand leads me to believe that the murderer of Paul North was on his knees; and it is logical to presume from that that he had been knocked down."

"Clever!" said John Lamm, with genuine admiration. "Clever, and just like you, Thomas. Of course we can think of hundreds of reasons why North might have knocked down his partner, whose advice had ruined him—for North was steady enough before he came under Stackhouse's influence—or why he should have knocked down an importunate gentleman who might have been trying to deceive his daughter."

"Precisely," agreed Thomas.

"And then," said Lamm, slowly, "you throw the idea of a most deliberate and cunningly-laid conspiracy of murder for security and revenge out of the question."

"Conspiracy?" echoed Thomas.

"Conspiracy!" said John Lamm.

Thomas looked like a doubtful man who would be very glad to become convinced.

"Yes," said John Lamm, in a tone of deep conviction. "I am willing to stake my professional reputation at this stage of the case on the prediction that this murder of North is a conspiracy—either for ruining Stackhouse or for revenge upon Paul North."

"And—the girl is in it?" murmured Thomas, apprehensively.

"Certainly, the girl is in it. To be sure the girl is in it. You can't alter that fact to save your life. For good, bad or indifferent purposes—Marion Stackhouse planned the game. Whose hand carried it out I won't say at this time; but I am convinced of one thing—it originated in her mind."

"Why, John Lamm? Why?" demanded Thomas, aghast.

"Because I always look to the character of the person to correspond to the nature of the crime. There is nobody else in this little coterie capable of originating a crime, so cunningly conceived, so admirably executed."

"What do you mean?"

"What do I mean?" asked the detective. "Good heavens, Thomas, where are your eyes? Can't you see that in every step we have taken we have been baffled, misled, made fools of? Do you imagine Paul North would have gone to his town house, shut up as it was for the summer, unless he had been enticed there? The writing of Stackhouse's name on the wall proves conclusively to my mind that Stackhouse did not do it. Why, how absurd it is! The medical examiner gives 180 seconds as a limit to North's life after he was shot. Do you suppose if Stackhouse had shot him he would have run away before assuring himself that he was dead? Would he have let North write his name on the wall? If North had done it, wouldn't he have smeared it out again? Why, of course he would. And in this name upon the wall is the animus of the whole matter. There we see the fangs and the teeth of the serpent. The bitter, deadly enmity that underlies the whole scheme. That the entire object was revenge upon Stackhouse I do not believe. It is too roundabout and too dangerous a method of revenge; but that the perpetrators of the deed hated that man—why, the fact is as clear as sunlight. Now, who hates Stackhouse? Who on the day of the discovery of the crime drove him from her side, from the house, knowing full well, nay, triumphantly welcoming the fact in so many words—that such an act would only deepen the suspicion about him? Who, with Paul North alive, was not free to meet the man she really loved; and who, Paul North dead, and Stackhouse out of the way, might reunite herself with her guilty lover? Who, for no cause but one that under such circumstances we can understand, flies into a passion of anger at the remonstrance of an innocent girl, and is so excited by the impending crime that she cannot keep herself away from the scene?"

"Stop! Don't go on!"

Thomas had risen and was holding up his hand. There was something horrible even to this veteran in the merciless arraignment of the sister of the woman he had protected. It might be true. John Lamm was the shrewdest of shrewd men; but he would not believe it until he had all the proofs before him.

"I tell you, Lamm," he declared, "I will not believe that woman planned that murder as long as there is a chance in the world for a reasonable doubt. And I can show—"

There was a rattle at the door handle.

"It's my man, Bill," said the detective, "back again from Swampscott."

He unlocked the door.

"And what has her ladyship to offer to-day?"

"This."

The messenger placed a letter in John Lamm's hand. The detective broke the seal and read it eagerly. "See," he said, passing it to Thomas, "it's from my little parlor maid at Swampscott."

The reporter perused the missive in his turn. With a little editing it would have read as follows:

"She is getting worse and worse. If this goes on much longer I can't stay here. Since Stella ran away she's acted stranger than ever. It wouldn't do to speak to her for your life. Mr. Fetridge called last night again. Their talk was short. She got a letter from her husband last night. I brought it from the post office, and know his S's. She spent all the evening, I think, writing, for her room was full of tiny scraps, written on, this morning; but she must have torn them all up, for no letter has been posted from this house; that's certain. I'm crazy to know if that poor girl has been heard from. Don't keep the news from me, as soon as she is found. I think Stella's going has scared M. She looks like a ghost, and I'm afraid of her, and so are all the rest."

"It's evident she tried to answer the letter Stackhouse wrote her," said Thomas. "Something must have thrown her into an unusual state of indecision." John Lamm's comments were entirely mental. He only remarked that he had a deal of work before him. Before setting out, however, on his new quests, the detective took a decided notion that he wanted to be introduced to Stella, with whom he had never been given an opportunity to talk. Thomas was delighted at the chance of converting his friend wholly to the cause of the unfortunate girl, as he was sure a visit to her would do. So the two men were soon in the horse cars, on their way to the reporter's home.

Thomas led Lamm to a little room in the second story, where his mother—a delightful lady with a sweet voice and a face a little faded and worn with the cares of 50 years, but brimming full of good will and sympathy of a heart that the years had failed to harden—is seated at her knitting. The old lady takes off her spectacles, and is delighted to meet any friend of her son, whom it is easy to see she has placed in a niche far above the ordinary walks of mankind. She drops a little courtesy, and when her son whispers in her ear, becomes brimful of importance and mystery. Going to the door of the adjoining chamber—her own room—she says something in a low voice. There is a rustle of a woman's dress, and Stella North appears on the threshold. Pale and haunted by a cruel fear such as never troubled her young life before, she is, nevertheless, so much her old self that her eyes seem ready to laugh again, and the dimples to indent themselves in her pretty cheeks, if sufficient encouragement is given for her roguish smile. Alas, poor child! Her accustomed mirth had been a stranger to her for some time; and the laughing face that nature had given her was only a cruel mockery. It was useless for John Lamm to ask himself whether she were part and parcel of the murderous conspiracy which he suspected. The refutation of all doubt was written in her clear blue eyes, her timid shrinking from a stranger, her honest, roguish face.

Why, that girl was meant for the open air and the sunshine, to sing, to love, to be happy, he thought. It is an incongruous hardship that a tragedy like this should come into her life. She is as out of place as a gay soubrette in the family of Lady Macbeth!

But when she spoke, when, encouraged by the ready tact of Thomas, she was led to take part in the pleasant conversation that ensued—Thomas had expressly stipulated that no reference should be made to the tragedy—why, then John Lamm could not restrain his honest admiration and his cordial sympathy. A creature at once so frank, so free, so shy and so bold, so modest and so reckless, in a breath, was enough to disarm the most severe of critics. And the detective pronounced her the beau ideal of an innocent, mischievous, light-hearted girl, not too shallow to love, but altogether too sunny to hate.

But, more than all, he noted the half-abashed, half-reverential air with which she regarded her guardian Thomas; and the peculiar solicitous, respectful and protecting manner which he exhibited toward her.

"Well, well," sighed Lamm, as he walked away, "there is one outcome to the North case which I feel perfectly safe in predicting at the present time. These two people are in love. A curious match! To think that Thomas should meet his fate under such circumstances! Well, well! I wish I felt so sure of the rest as I do of them!"

And John Lamm hastened back to resume the dropped thread of the case which was intensifying in interest with every hour of investigation.

"If I am right," he muttered, "I shall soon find that Richard Fetridge and that curious woman were in that house together."

He went direct to his inner office and sat down at his desk.

CHAPTER XVII.

MADAME RAYMOND

John Lamm, confident that a conspiracy was to be found at the bottom of the North case, was reasonably sure already of two parties thereto—Marion Stackhouse and Richard Fetridge. Whether there was anybody else concerned he had not yet made up his mind. The plain yet puzzling charge of Thornton Stackhouse in the letter to the Moissot woman, who seemed to the detective to have been created for the express purpose of tantalizing him with the enigma of her existence, indicated that Stackhouse himself had reason to believe her the head and front of all offense.

Again and again John Lamm studied that letter, endeavoring to squeeze out of it the last drop of possible significance; but the writer had so well chosen his words, with the evident purpose of making them unintelligible to a third person, that the detective was suspicious of what seemed the logical deductions therefrom. One thing was certain, Stackhouse charged Marie Moissot (the "person unknown" of Mr. Lamm's notes) with having carried to successful issue, on the 16th of June, a conspiracy to ruin him, and Mr. Lamm believed himself fully possessed of the unfortunate events which had overwhelmed this man during that day. The discovery of this unique charge of murder written in red on the wall of North's library, he did not forget was not the only misfortune. The extraordinary conduct of his wife was quite as serious to Stackhouse, not impossibly more so than this implied accusation. To be sure, these two conspicuous facts seemed to be part and parcel of one larger fact, and perhaps appeared to Mr. Stackhouse's mind as one thing; but the detective was altogether too cautious not to have seen that the letter might refer to either one of these calamities. The problem in John Lamm's mind, therefore, stood in this wise:

Q. Does Mr. Stackhouse hold Marie Moissot responsible for implicating him in the murder of his partner or in embittering his domestic relations?

Q. If the former were his belief, would he not have acquainted me with the fact?

And as Mr. Lamm could not help answering the latter question in the affirmative, he was still reasonably sure that there was no evidence in his possession of a third party to the great "conspiracy" which was so puzzling him.

Whence it seemed to be plain that his present duty was to center his efforts upon the two people whom he suspected—to investigate their doings thoroughly, to watch both of them with all possible vigilance.

To keep Marion Stackhouse under

AGAIN AND AGAIN JOHN LAMM STUDIED THAT LETTER

surveillance was a comparatively easy task. She had not left the confines of the North estate, except on the occasion of the funeral, since the discovery of her father's death; and for a full report of her conduct for the immediate present Lamm felt he could safely rely on the vigilance of Moffett and Mollie White. But the movements of Richard Fetridge were not so easily followed. Consequently, John Lamm did not dare to trust this apparently most important task to anybody but himself and those under his active supervision.

On the Wednesday when he received Thomas' confidence in the Stella North affair, Lamm doubled the safeguards and precautions previously taken to assure himself of the integrity of Richard Fetridge. Not that he ignored other possibilities of investigation. Into the past lives of Stackhouse and North and Marion he was already instituting the most careful inquiries; but Fetridge's career interested him still more. With that affable good fellowship which made it possible for him to make friends with all sorts and conditions of men, he insinuated himself into the good graces of Fetridge's clerk, and hearing that Olsen had a predecessor who had been discharged for taking too much interest in his employer's affairs he hunted up that man, with what degree of reward will be hereafter recorded.

WARDROBE NECESSARY FOR A HOUSE PARTY.

It is pretty hard to tell just what costumes will be needed at a house party, as the program varies so greatly with different hostesses, but there are several dainty outfits that will seldom come amiss.

In some fashionable households the hostess appears at breakfast in an elaborate negligee of lace and silk, and in others the short skirt and shirtwaist are adopted. This is usually the case when the head of the household is of athletic tastes and leaves the table for the tennis court or the golf links. The average week-end guest cannot go amiss if she takes a negligee along.

A becoming tea gown will add immeasurably to the comfort of the guest, as she will wish to don something loose soon after her arrival. This would best be of some soft silk which does not crush readily when packed. It may be made on strictly empire lines and lightly trimmed with lace, or be wholly of net or chiffon untrimmed, but elaborated with a sleeveless lace coat. Some of the daintiest summer tea gowns imaginable are allover white muslin embroidery. Their short waists are defined with filet bands and their wing sleeves are of the same lace. Because they may be packed into the minimum of space they are ideal garments for week-end visits. It must not be supposed, however, that the summer tea gown is in any respect a negligee, nor is it intended for any place save the drawing-room several hours preceding dinner.

A lounging robe of some description should always be included among the week-end luggage, for while some hostesses have Japanese kimonos and slippers in each guest chamber, this is by no means an invariable rule. The safe way is to keep on hand a thin flowered silk negligee, which may be rolled into a wad and be none the worse for such treatment, or else have a short jacket of lingerie materials and use it as an accompaniment to the silk drop of the traveling gown.

It is always a mistake to rely upon a hostess for either a bathing costume or a riding habit, as neither is likely to fit even if extra ones chance to be on hand. If a woman is devoted to either diversion and knows that she will have an opportunity to indulge in such sports, she should either crowd the proper garb into her box or express it ahead. The same rule applies to the golfing costume, for, although any short skirt and loose blouse will answer temporarily, it is far better to have something at hand that will withstand a journey over the links, as no hostess cares to introduce at the clubhouse a guest whose white shirt and shoes are begrimed with dust or stained with grass.

To Serve With Salad.

Beat two eggs without separating; add one cupful of vinegar, one teaspoonful of salt, dash of cayenne, half a cupful of sugar and a quarter of a cupful of melted butter. Mix well and cook in a double boiler. Stir constantly until the dressing has thickened, then cool and serve. This dressing may be thinned with either cream or oil.

COLORED GRAND LODGE OBSERVES CENTENNIAL

The one hundredth anniversary of the first Grand Lodge of colored Masons in the United States was held in Boston on Thursday, at which were gathered Masons from all over the country, including Chicago, Washington, Richmond, Baltimore, Delaware, California, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Vermont.

The parade was over six miles in length, headed by the first division, New York and New Jersey, Sir Eugene Phillips, R. E. G. C., for the State of New York; Sir. William Jones, R. E. G. C., for New Jersey. The grand commandry staff under the command of Sir. William J. Douglass, of Plainfield, inspector-general, 33d, grand captain-general of New York and New Jersey, was followed by Ivanhoe Commandry of New York; Mt. Calvary, of New York; Cypress, of New Jersey, and St. Paul's, of New Haven, with the grand lodge of the States of New York and New Jersey and the subordinate lodges, followed by other divisions.

As the parade passed the Governor's reviewing stand, Ivanhoe Commandery was easily conceded to be the best standard bearer of the entire Knight Templars.

DISPOSITION OF CASES IN SOMERSET COURT.

In the Somerset county courts in Somerville yesterday six boys, charged with shooting crap on the Duke estate, were arraigned on allegation and entered a plea of guilty. Judge Schenck placed them all on probation for a term of two years and Andrew Hovan, John Rosso and Benedicto Jaquinto were also fined $15 each, Dominick Sorians, $10 and James Soriano and Petro Caruso, $5 each. Archie Rattles, colored, charged with breaking and entering the residence of Robert Staats in Franklin township and stealing therefrom $27, was also arraigned on allegation and pleaded guilty. He was placed in charge of the probation officer for two years and fined $30.

CALL ALL TO GETTYSBURG.

Every Surviving Soldier Who Fought There Wanted in 1913.

The initiative steps toward the proper celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg on July 1, 2 and 3, 1913, were taken by a meeting of citizens in the court house at Gettysburg, last night. It was decided that the movement shall be headed by the State of Pennsylvania and be of national importance and scope.

One of the features will be to have all the veterans who participated in this fight transported there and furnished subsistence by the States to which they belong.

NEGRO ATTACKS GIRL BUT RESCUERS COME.

The police are on the lookout for a negro who Thursday night attacked Miss Evelyn Archer, 16 years old, at Asbury Park. The girl's screams attracted several pedestrians to the spot in time to see a huge negro disappearing. Before he left her he snatched an earring from her ear. The girl says the same negro attacked her several nights previous, and being frightened away by approaching pedestrians departed with the warning that he would "get her yet." Miss Archer lives with Miss Doran principal of the Neptune Township High School, on Prospect avenue.

Several nights ago Miss Jennie Murray, who lives with her mother on West Asbury avenue, was attacked by a negro on Monroe avenue near the railroad tracks as she was on her way home from work. In response to Miss Murray's calls for aid a young man ran to her assistance and frightened the negro away.

BOUND BROOK SCHOOL DEDICATED LAST NIGHT.

The new high school building to be known as the Washington High School, at Bound Brook, has been completed and formally dedicated last evening. The exercises were held in the large assembly room on the top floor. Pioneer Council, No. 58, Junior Order American Mechanics, presented a large American a large American flag for use on the large flag pole recently erected in the yard.

The presentation speech was made by Rev. Titus E. Davis, of Washington, D. C., past councilor of Pioneer Council. The Nathan Hale society presented a set of Harpers Encyclopedia of United States History; the graduates from the Bound Brook High School, who have entered Rutgers College, presented a picture of Rutgers College buildings, and Middlebrook Chapter, Daughters of American Revolution, also made a presentation.

JULIA BOWNE AT HOME.

Sister Says She Will Never See Cordova Again.

Julia Bowne has not left her home at Asbury Park, as was reported in dispatches which said that she had joined the unfrocked minister, J. Frank Cordova.

She was sitting on the porch of her father's home yesterday, watching Cordova's little son at play in the yard. A neighbor said that there was no likelihood of Miss Bowne joining Cordova; that she had recently expressed strong dislike for the former minister, and that her sister had told the neighbors that Julia would never see Cordova again.

Milton Burns Insane.

Milton Burns, an artist formerly connected with some of the leading magazines of New York and other cities, and a resident of Millington, has lost his mind and will be committed to an institution.

—An automobile school has been started on South avenue, instructing a large class in the mysteries of that erratic vehicle.

—The Stable of Robert Cornish at Millington was entered on Wednesday during the absence of the coachman and a suit of clothes and $42 were stolen.

—All peaches remaining at Neuman Brothers tonight will be sold at cut prices. None will be carried over as a fresh consignment of 200 baskets of fancy white and yellow fruit will be received Monday.

POLITICAL NOTES.

Senator Everett Colby, after explaining the issues of the campaign to a large audience of Nutley voters Thursday night, urged those having automobiles and who favored his renomination for the Senatorship to get their machines in good shape on primary day. "We will be on the job!" yelled one in the audience, which caused the candidate to smile.

Assemblyman Philip Daab, of Hoboken, withdrew his nomination petition yesterday as an independent Democratic candidate. He was disappointed at his failure to get the organization indorsement for renomination, and filed a separate petition with the County Clerk.

Garwood borough is about to lose its Mayor, Ferdinand Sartorius, who has been promoted by the Standard Oil Company, by whom he is employed. He will move to Oil City, Penn Mr. Sartorius will be succeeded in the mayoralty by Councilman Kaylor, who is president of the Garwood Borough Council.

Thomas P. Connelly, the candidate of the regulars for the Republican nomination for Sheriff in Hudson county, who has announced as his platform the strict enforcement of the Bishop's law, further augmented the stand he has taken on the liquor question yesterday. He promised that if Hudson county elected him Sheriff he would not select for service on the petit or grand juries any saloonkeeper or other person who has violated the Bishop's law or any other law of the state.

The Rev. Dr. Alexander P. Camphor, former pastor of St. John's African Methodist Episcopal church, Orange, has been appointed president of the Central Alabama College, at Birmingham, Ala., and last night he left Orange for his new charge.

Former Mayor Frank S. Katzenbach, Jr., candidate for Governor last fall, has been selected to preside at the Bryan massmeeting to be held in Taylor Opera House, Trenton, next Tuesday night. William Jennings Bryan and party will arrive at Clinton street station at 6:52 o'clock p. m. The party will proceed at once to the Hotel Sterling, where it will be entertained at dinner, with State Committeeman Charles H. Gallagher as host. Mr. Katzenbach will introduce Mr. Bryan, who will discuss the issues of the present campaign for at least an hour.

Fred C. Hyer, of Rahway, the Democratic candidate for Senator, was the principal speaker last night at the rally of the new James E. Martine Club, downtown. Mr. Hyer confined himself to State issues, dwelling on the public utilities measure, popular election of United States Senators and taxation of railroad property by local authorities. Other speakers were the two Mayoralty candidates, General Dennis F. Collins and Councilman John S. Sauer. The latter yesterday filed his petition with the city clerk of Elizabeth.

The Independence party attempted to place Thomas L. Hisgen, of Massachusetts, and John T. Graves, of Georgia, in nomination in New Jersey, yesterday, by filing a petition with the Secretary of State. Under the law at least 800 signers are required for this purpose, but there were so many irregularities in the petition that it will probably be thrown out as invalid. Whole pages of names purporting to be signers were in the same handwriting, and if they should prove to be names of actual residents would be regarded as forgeries. There were also irregularities in affidavits which attempted to nominate Hisgen and Graves directly instead of naming Presidential Electors. Acceptances of nominations were filed by 14 prospective electors, whereby New Jersey is only entitled to 12.

The Republicans of New Market have completed their ticket for the coming election. Arthur Tappan has filed his petition for member of the town committee and Charles Day for the nomination of town clerk. Robert Pierce, William Riley and William Goebel have filed their petitions for the nomination of constables. Thus far the Democrats have not completed their ticket and it appears to be doubtful whether they will before the time of holding the primaries.

The petitions of Councilman Herbert Buxton and Frank DeW. Randolph and Judge William Newcorn and Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., from the Fourth ward, and Leslie M. Daniel and F. H. Andrews from the Third ward, were filed in the office of the city clerk this morning as delegates to the State Republican convention.

John Hensey, of the Fourth ward, has been placed in nomination on an Independent ticket for member of the Common Council, and his petition was filed in the office of the city clerk this morning.

"Christian Science and The Complete Gospel," will be the topic for Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring's discourse at the First Presbyterian church, tomorrow night. There will be communion in the morning.

There will be a change in the hour of services at Warren chapel tomorrow. The morning service will begin at 10:30 instead of 11 o'clock, and Sunday-school will be held at 2:45 o'clock in the afternoon.

SCHOOL OPEN TOMORROW

Some Changes in Teaching Corps in the City and Borough Public Schools.

THE BUILDINGS RENOVATED.

Superintendents and Principals Busily Engaged Today Making Preparations for Tomorrow.

The Plainfield Public Schools will reopen for the fall term at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning. Thereafter the pupils of the High School and the Grammar departments will assemble at 8:30 o'clock in the morning. The faculty of the High School will practically remain unchanged from that of last year, the only new teacher being Miss Pope, who succeeds Miss Walrad.

The superintendent and principals are busily engaged today enrolling new pupils in preparation for tomorrow. At the High School examinations have been held for the pupils entering from out-of-town schools and for those who have failed in promotion. The indications are that the enrollment in the High School will be about 350.

All of the buildings have been thoroughly renovated and put in first class condition for the opening. At the High School fire escapes have been placed at the outside auditor, indoors, and the Gamewell auxiliary fire-alarm has been installed. This provides the school with an additional safeguard against danger of fire by having direct connection with the fire department headquarters.

The equipment in manual training is extended by the installation of six wood-working lathes and in consequence better results are expected of the pupils.

The entire teaching corps of all the schools of the city is ready for work and everything will be in readiness for the resumption of studies tomorrow morning. It will probably be two or three days before accurate figures will be available regarding the enrollment, but Superintendent I. W. Travell believes that it will far exceed that of last year. Of course, it will be some time before the new primary school at Darrow avenue and Essex street will be available, and the increased number of pupils will have ot be cared for in the best way possible until additional accommodations are obtained.

Everything is in readiness for the opening of the public schools in North Plainfield, tomorrow. The buildings and grounds' committee has put the two schools in fine shape and Janitors MacDonald and Sohl have their respective headquarters in splendid condition. The furnaces are ready for fire when needed, and the fire apparatus has been put into working order. Slate blackboards have been placed in a number of rooms and the books and supplies are ready for distribution.

The clock and bell system have been overhauled, while the lawn in front of the Somerset School is attractive and the yard in the rear has been cleaned. Everything that needed attention has been looked after, so that nothing may interrupt the school after the term begins.

There are a few changes in the teaching corps and several new faces will be seen. The high school department will have three new teachers this year, owing to the resignations of the Misses Scudder and Ellis and the leave of absence of Miss Montague. The English department will be in the hands of Miss Phoebe N. Waller, a graduate of Oxford College, Ohio, and a post-graduate student at the University of Wisconsin and at Columbia. Miss Waller taught several years in high schools in her native State, Kentucky.

Miss Anna Clauder, of East Orange, a graduate of Bryn Mawr, will teach the history class. Miss Clauder taught last year at Summit. Miss Montague will be succeeded for the present year by Miss Alice J. Campbell, who has taught commercial subjects in several high schools.

The manual training department will be in the care of George E. Webster, a graduate of Bucknell University. Mr. Webster had charge of this line of work for several years at the State Normal School at Millersville, Pa. He is a member of the National Guard of Pennsylvania.

Miss Rita S. Dalley, of Raritan, will be in charge of the 6 B. Grammar grade. She is a Trenton Normal graduate, formerly taught in the borough schools, and has earned golden opinions by her work at Raritan.

Miss Simonson, of Chicago, has been engaged to succeed Miss Webster. She has taught for several years in the suburbs of Chicago and in the city itself. She is a graduate of the Aurora Normal School, and has done four years of professional work at the University of Chicago. Her desire to do Saturday work at

PLANS FOR ITALIAN EVANGELISTIC WORK

Plans are about completed for the establishment of an Italian Evangelistic Association in this city. Quarters have been leased on East Third street next to Faith chapel and it is expected that within a few weeks everything will be in readiness to hold meetings there. Fourteen denominations, including religious workers from this city and Bound Brook, are interested in the movement and an Italian minister, who was formerly in the priesthood, has been engaged to undertake the work among the Italians of this city and vicinity.

It is proposed to hold three services a week in this city and judging by the success attending the movement there will be a large number of attendants. This work is the outgrowth of steps taken by members of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church about a year ago to provide Protestant services for such Italians as are not identified with any denomination. A canvass was made and the results showed that there are hundreds of Italians in this city and vicinity who did not belong or attend any church.

NEGOTIATIONS FAILED.

Sisk Went to His Wife's Home to "Make up" But Instead Was Toted to Jail.

David J. Sisk, an engineer residing on South Second street, was arraigned in the city court this morning on a charge of disorderly conduct preferred by his wife. The couple have been living apart for some time and Sisk went to the wife's home on Evans avenue, Saturday afternoon, accompanied by Justice Hezekiah Hand, with the idea of patching up their difficulties. The husband had liquored up for the ordeal and getting excited started to clean house. Mrs. Sisk called the police and he was locked up.

The wife told Judge Runyon this morning that she would withdraw her charge if Sisk was made to stay away from her home and the court agreed to the plan. He hung a forty days sentence over the defendant's head as an incentive to steer clear of Evona avenue.

Observed No Sabbath.

Disregarding the Christian Sabbath as well as his own, Isaac Golberg, of Liberty street, started yesterday to build a new porch on a piece of property he had purchased. He was warned by police officers to stop but kept on after they had gone away and was later arrested by Patrolman Saffron. He admitted to Judge Runyon this morning that he had a position that compelled him to work Saturdays and he observed no particular Sabbath. The magistrate let him off on a suspended sentence after he had promised to keep Sundays hereafter.

Charles L. Guyre.

Charles L. Guyre, son of M. F. Guyre, of Dunellen, died Saturday night after a lingering illness from a pulmonary complaint. He was in his twenty-second year and was very popular with a large circle of friends in Plainfield as well as in the borough. He was a member of the Dunellen Athletic Club which will attend the funeral in a body. The service will be held at his late home on Washington avenue at 8 o'clock tonight. The burial will be at the convenience of the family.

Rally Day Exercises.

There was a large attendance yesterday afternoon at the Sunday-school rally day exercises at Grace Methodist Episcopal church. Two beautiful solos were sung by Mrs. Thomas MacDonald and a violin and piano duet was rendered by the Speer brothers, of Watchung. The address was delivered by Rev. W. A. Therrell, who spoke upon "The Significance of Biby Study in Sunday-school."

Proved His Innocence.

Louis Mauchello, an Italian, was arraigned before Justice Smith at South Plainfield, yesterday, charged with stealing a crate of eggs from a Lehigh Valley freight car. He proved that he was innocent as he had taken the crate for one intended for him. The case was dismissed on his agreeing to pay for the eggs and the costs of court, at total of $12.

Bicycle Trips.

Fifteen members of the Plainfield Bicycle Club rode to the Vailsburg track on Sunday afternoon. Twelve of the members expect to start for Washington, D. C., on their wheels on Sunday, September 20. They will stop at Wilmington, Del., and at Baltimore, Md. After spending a day in Washington they will start on their return trip.

The Little Minister.

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. A. C. McCrea, of Central avenue, are parents of a son born to them Saturday morning.

PROBABLY FATALLY HURT

Italian Struck by B & O Flyer is in a Critical Condition at Muhlenberg Hospital.

ACCIDENT AT WESTFIELD.

Pasquale Retino, the Victim, Married—His Leg Removed at Hospital—Little Hope for Him.

Pasquale Retino, aged thirty-one years, of Spring street, Westfield, employed as a trackwalker on the New Jersey Central, is in Muhlenberg Hospital in a critical condition as the result of injuries received this morning while performing his duties. One leg had to be amputated and this fact together with severe cuts and bruises about the head left the man in such a state of shock that his recovery is doubtful.

Retino was proceeding along the main eastbound track toward his home, when the westbound B. & O. 'flyer' due in this city at 9:13 approached him at a high rate of speed. Just as the train reached a point near Retino the cylinder-head of the engine blew out and struck the trackwalker with terrific force, hurling him a distance of several feet and crushing both legs. The train was stopped and when the crew reached the injured man they found him in an unconscious and dying condition. He was quickly placed on the train and brought to this city with all possible speed in the hope that his life might be spared.

Upon the arrival of the train here the ambulance was in waiting and Retino was rushed to the hospital. He was removed to the operating room and the surgeons decided at once that one leg must be amputated. The man had losed a great quantity of blood and together with the terrible shock left little hope for recovery. After the removal of the one leg Retino's vitality was at such a low ebb that it was doubtful whether he would rally at all.

Retino, whose home is on Spring street, Westfield, has been in the employ of the New Jersey Central for some time and had a record for being a steady and efficient workman. He has a wife and one child.

Sunday Morning Game of Hearts.

Arthur and William Morris and Jules Martial, boys, were arraigned in the city court, this morning, charged with gambling and disorderly conduct. They were arrested yesterday morning by Detective-Sergeant Flynn on complaint of East Front street residents who were annoyed by their actions as they were grouped about a tree near Tier's dam. The boys said they had been playing hearts and as there was no evidence that money had been passed in the game, sentence was suspended with a warning to select some other place to pass away Sunday morning.

Signs With Big Production.

Peter Winn, of this city, who has been connected with the stage force at the New Plainfield theatre, signed Saturday as electrician with William A. Brady's big new production, "A Gentleman from Mississippi." The show is now in reeharsal in New York and will open next week. Beside supervising the electrical effects, Mr. Winn will be seen as an "actor," dashing out on the stage in one scene to use his strong right arm in ejecting the "villian."

First Fall Meeting.

The Women's Association of the Congregational church will hold its first fall meeting and reunion of members in the church parlors tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock and a full attendance is desired. Miss F. F. Clark, of the Seminary, will read an original paper bearing on the coming winter's study, "Africa," and there will be a program of music and a social time.

An Approaching Wedding.

Mrs. Alexander Campbell, of East Second street, has issued invitations for the wedding of her daughter, Miss Jessie Scott Campbell, to William Henry Thorn, also of East Second street. The ceremony will take place at the bride's home on Tuesday afternoon, September 29, at 4 o'clock. The young couple will afterward make their home on Jackson avenue, Netherwood.

Watchung School Opens.

The public school at Watchung reopened today. Miss Nora M. Koons, of Phoenixville, Pa., is in charge of the primary department and Ray W. Schrope, of Lansford, Pa., is the principal and is in charge of the Grammar department.

Services Resumed.

Services were resumed yesterday at All Souls' Unitarian church, which had been closed for the summer. Rev. A. W. Nickerson, the pastor, has been spending his vacation at Randolph, Vermont.

DENOUNCES "X-SCIENCE"

Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy's Religious Teachings Strongly are Arrainged.

REV. DR. HERRING'S SERMON.

New Creed, He Says, Is a Denial of Historic Facts of Christianity—Says She Distorts Bible.

In the course of a sermon, last night, devoted to his impressions of a recent visit to a Christian Science church service, Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, strongly condemned the teachings of Mother Eddy. He declared that they were a denial of historic Christianity and were a direct contradiction of the teachings of the Bible.

Rev. Dr. Herring said:

My purpose tonight is to give some impressions of a visit to the Christian Science church in Boston. This church is certainly a most beautiful piece of architecture and its great dome reminds one very forcibly of St. Paul's, London. The great audience room with its two galleries on each side and its three galleries in the rear, it is said, seat five thousand people. Perhaps it can hold that many people but it seemed to me that five thousand people in that church would give very little breathing space for each individual. The mid-week meeting is held on Wednesday evening in this large auditorium. It was certainly surprising to see three-quarters of this great room filled. I believe, however, that this is the only "Science" church in Boston and therefore all Boston "Scientists" must attend this one church. The only sermon that is preached in the Christian Science church is Mrs. Eddy's book. This book is both pastor and preacher. The only need, therefore, the pulpit has is a reader. These readers first read a passage from the Bible and then a selection from Mrs. Eddy's book. Before reading the selection from the book the reader must give its title and mention the author. "Science and health with key to the Scriptures by Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy."

The order of service was as follows: Singing, reading, silent prayer, Lord's Prayer, singing, testimony and singing. There was no benediction. There were a number of testimonies. People confessed to being cured of nervous dyspepsia, epilepsy, rheumatism and bad temper. I questioned two ladies as to the similar movement in Boston which is called the Emanuel church. They said they knew nothing about it as "Science" was good enough for them. I found these people very pleasant and perfectly satisfied that they had the real thing and teh only thing. Mrs. Eddy says that she discovered this panacea for the ills of life in 1866 She discovered that the "divine mind and its ideas are the only accualities." "Sin, sickness and death not being the ideas of the divine mind cannot have any reality. They are simply the ideas of our mortal minds and should be forever banished from our thoughts." Mrs. Eddy claims to have received these truths directly from Christ. No human tongue suggested the contents of "Science and health" to her nor can tongue or pen overthrow it. Whatever men now think of it, its truths will remain for the Christ-inspired to discern and follow. Mrs. Eddy claims that wherever Jesus went He demonstrated the power of Divine Science, and the greatest need of the age is for His disciples literally to follow his commands, to heal the sick and raise the dead to cleanse the lepers and cast out demons. I believe that this command is on the cover of every book of Science and health. "Mortal mind," she claims, is "flesh that is opposed to spirit." It is "human error that is opposed to goodness and truth." It is her thought that if you read medical books you will be sick. Where there are less doctors and less thought on sanitary subjects there are better constitutions and less disease. "What on abuse of nature,' says Mrs. Eddy, "to say that a rose, the smile of God, can produce suffering!" (rose cold). "It is profane to fancy the sweetness of clover and the breath of new mown hay can cause nasal pangs." She claims that "one disease is no more real than another." "All disease is the result of hallucination." "Disease is a form of belief." "Sickness is a dream from which the patient needs to be wakened" Therefore we "should rise in rebellion against disease." In regard to surgery "until the advancing age admits the efficacy and supremacy of mind, it is better to leave the adjustment of broken bones and dislocations to the fingers of a surgeon. Surgery is the last branch Christian Science will be able to teach."

AUTOISTS IN A CRASH

Judge Runyon and Two Other Plainfielders Hurled from Wrecked Machine.

THEY BARELY ESCAPE INJURY.

Magistrate Rendered Partially Unconscious by Contact With Flag Pole at Hickory Tree Cross Roads.

As the climax to a series of mishaps which befell them in a business trip by auto to the State Hospital at Morris Plains, Saturday afternoon, City Judge William N. Runyon, John A. Gaffney and Thomas M. Muir, met with an accident in which they narrowly escaped serious injury. The sudden breaking of the cylinder in the engine of their machine, demolished the entire mechanism and swung the car into a flag pole at Hickory Tree cross roads, a small village two miles south of Madison.

All three men were hurled from the auto and Judge Runyon, who was driving, was thrown against the pole, rendering him partially unconscious. His companions rolled clear of obstructions, receiving only a few slight cuts and bruises, and immediately went to the aid of the disabled magistrate. With the help of villagers who were attracted to the scene by the crash, he was assisted to the home of Hiram Whistlecraft, on the Morris county turnpike, where he was revived by first-aid remedies. He was afterward able to proceed homeward by train and had fully recovered by this morning. The wrecked auto was lifted into a cornfield and later towed to Madison by garage employes.

The eventful trip was commenced at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon and proceeded without incident until just before the asylum building was reached, when a front tire exploded. The auto was shoved to one side of the road to await the coming of a repair man from a Morristown garage which was telephoned. This trouble was overcome after an hour's delay and on concluding their business at the State institution, the Plainfielders commenced the returned trip. It was dusk when they passed through Morristown and in the hurry to get home as soon as possible, the wrong road was taken just outside the city. Instead of bringing up in Springfield as they had planned, they found themselves in a "pocket" at Pleasantville. The machine was turned around and at 7 o'clock had reached Hickory Tree where the first indication was given by the auto engine that something was wrong. Judge Runyon immediately slowed down and was just at the cross roads when the crash occurred.

The entire mechanism seemed to smash at once, making it impossible for the reverse to work. The driver attempted to keep the car in the road but it wobbled as though the steering gear was gone and before any of the frightened occupants could get a firm grip, the flag pole in the center of the green was hit. Muir was in the rear and landed on the grass while the others were pitched forward and Judge Runyon came in contact with the pole. But for the fact that the speed had been reduced he would undoubtedly have been fatally hurt.

The crash made by the breaking machinery and the collision was heard by residents in the vicinity and a dozen or more men were quickly on the scene. A question directed at one of them enlightened the autoists as to where they were, a fact that was missing up to the time of the accident. Madison was gotten on the telephone and an auto sent out took the three men into the town. They proceeded from there over the Lackawanna to Newark and reached home late Saturday night. A garage employe declared the mishap to the engine to have been cused by a lack of oil in the cylinder.

Birthday Party.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Terry, of Park avenue, entertained a few of their friends last Friday evening in honor of John Terry's birthday. A delightful evening was spent playing games, music and singing. Among the guests were Miss Anna De Haven, of Seawaren; Miss Florence Tappen, of Elizabeth, and the Misses Florence Johnson, Sadie Terry, Harriette Terry, Alice Hooper, Mrs. W. S. Terry, Mr. and Fred Mellick, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Terry, Mr. Orville Freeman, Mr. Frank Kelly, Andrew Conway, Monroe Terry, John Terry and Frank Terry.

Firemen Return.

William McCullough, Captain Edmund H. Terry and David Tenny returned from Atlantic City on Saturday night. They have been attending the State meeting of the New Jersey Firemen's Relief Association. Chief Howard Woolston and his wife will remain a week longer.

ELKS ANNUAL OUTING PROVES A BIG SUCCESS

The annual clambake and outing of Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., Saturday afternoon proved to be the most successful yet conducted by the organization. The attendance was close to the 200 mark and included a large delegation from Somerville while there were other visitors from Elizabeth, New Brunswick and New York.

The affair was held on the grounds of the Watchung Spring Water Company off Mountain avenue and continued from 10 o'clock in the morning until late in the evening. Athletic games were the principal diversions and kept everybody busy until the bake was served at 4 o'clock. Everything was steamed up in Rhode Island style under the supervision of "Al" Staats and Chef Erwin Y. Neighbor.

A baseball game between nines made up from Plainfield and Somerville Elks was a big feature of the day. The locals had a battery composed of George Dupee and "Bill" Counihan, pitcher, and Walter McNaughton, catcher, while the points for the visitors were covered by Chester Cawley and Charles Wencke. Each side rang in so many fielders that it was impossible to get the rest of the lineup. The kindly scorekeeper claims that Somerville won on points because each side made nine runs.

The outing was arranged and conducted by a committee composed of Edson C. Westcott, George O. Stvens and Lawrence Marshall.

Y. M. C. A. NINE WINS TWO STRAIGHT GAMES.

The Y. M. C. played a double header on Crescent Oval, Saturday afternoon, defeating the Highland A. C. in the first contest by a score of 13 to 0 and taking the second from the Mono A. C. by a score of 14 to 11. The Newark Y. M. C. A. team cancelled the game scheduled with the local association late in the week and Manager Listman was unable to get an out-of-town team on short notice The first contest went seven innings. Jack Peacock held the Highlands down to one hit, made by Higgins in the second; struck out ten men and only twenty-seven men faced him in the seven innings.

Had No License.

A Greek with an unpronounceable name, who has been peddling peanuts in the streets of Plainfield, was arrested yesterday, charged with selling peanuts without a license. He was found guilty and a fine of $2.75 was imposed by the court. As the man was unable to pay more than $1.50, he was about to be committed to Elizabeth for thirty days when the complainant, John Elelain, decided to pay the rest himself.

Released in $700 Bail.

Letter-carrier Daniel J. McNamara, who was arrested last week on a charge of opening and destroying letters at the local postoffice, was arraigned before United States Commissioner Bigelow at Newark this morning for a hearing. He furnished bail in the sum of $700 for his appearance before the Federal Grand Jury next week. Mr. McNamara was accompanied by his counsel, John P. Owens, of this city.

Hopewell Defeats Somerville.

The West Ends, of Somerville, had an off-day Saturday and were walloped by the Hopewell team, by a score of 10 to 8. It was a regular merry-go-round. Home runs and errors galore were the features. Montross and Bruggey each contributed to the West End scores with home runs. The home team made seven errors, while Hopewell was credited with six misplays.

Funeral of William Cheshire.

The funeral of William Cheshire, who was found dead in bed at his boarding place on West Third street, was held at Cole's undertaking rooms Saturday afternoon. The service was in charge of Rev. G. W. Bailey, assisted by Prophet Jones. Burial was in the Plainfield avenue cemetery.

Death of Twins.

About seven weeks ago twins were born to Mrs. Robert Wood, of Dunellen. A few days ago one of the twins died and now the other has passed away. Mrs. Wood is protrated at her home. Friends of the family extend their sympathy to the bereaved parents.

Buster Brown Coming.

For the benefit of school children the "Buster Brown" matinee at the theatre will not begin until 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Mrs. L. W. Sertell, of West Seventh street, left Saturday for Europe. She will be abroad several months.

Mrs. William Callan, of New York, who has been visiting her cousins, the Misses Arnold, of Liberty street, returned home yesterday.

STABBED HIS "AFFINITY"

BARELY MISSED VITAL SPOT.

Assailant Arrested and Remanded to Await the Outcome of His Victim's Injuries.

Angered because the woman repulsed his endearing advances, Frank Mohring, of West Fifth street, a man well known to the police, drew a long-bladed pocket knife, Saturday night, and stabbed Mrs. Ella Hoppock, of New street, as she was passing along West Front street, opposite Grove. The weapon was driven into her right side, inflicting a deep and dangerous wound, and causing her to drop to the sidewalk in a pool of blood. A half-inch further up and the stabbing would have been fatal.

Patrolman Cornelius McCarthy was in the immediate vicinity when the affair took place and had Mohring in custody before he could get away. He at first denied using the knife, claiming that he had only struck the woman with a sharp stone, but later said that he had had the weapon in his hand and that she accidentally run against it. He was taken to police headquarters while Mrs. Hoppock was assisted to Dr. Lufburrow's office, where the injury was dressed. She was afterward taken home.

Mohring was arraigned before Judge Runyon this morning but at Chief Kiely's request the hearing was adjourned until Wednesday. The police head explained that Mrs. Hoppock's condition is quite serious and that it had been impossible to get a proper version of her side of the case. If she recovers sufficiently it is possible that she will appear against the prisoner when he is next brought into court.

Mohring has a long police record and on a previous occasion was sent to jail for sixty days for shooting bullets through Mrs. Hoppock's back door. The fact that he was intoxicated at the time saved him from going to prison. He was told to remain away from the woman's home but continued to "butt" around and has caused her trouble on numerous occasions. According to the police, it is a sort of "affinity" arrangement with all the ardency on his part.

Saturday night, Mohring went around to the house and was told by Mrs. Hoppock that she was going away. He attempted to kiss her farewell but she declined his endearments. She started to go uptown and her admirer followed, all the while entreating her to make the parting a little more than a Platonic leave-taking but she still refused to have him come near her. It was then, the police say, that he drew the knife and inflicted the stab wound.

When questioned by Chief Kiely at headquarters, Mohring stuck to the stone story until the blood-stained weapon was found in his pocket. He then admitted that he had hal it in his hand but claimed that if Mrs. Hoppock hadn't run toward him she would not have been hurt.

PLAINFIELD SOCCER TEAM SHUTS OUT THE METUCHENS.

The Plainfield Soccer Football Club opened the season on Saturday playing its first game with the Metuchen Club. The local team played in fine form, considering it was the first game. The ball was passed from one to another in championship style, and it is hoped that before the season is over Plainfield will try conclusions with the best teams in New York and New Jersey.

In the first half, Plainfield scored three goals, two by J. Mitchell, inside right, and one by George McCombs, outside left. In the second half three additional goals were scored, one by J. Mitchell, inside right, one by R. Cale, outside right. J. Jamieson also scored one from centre, making a total of six for Plainfield, while Metuchen failed to score.

The Plainfield team lined up as follows:

Goal, A. Stevenson; full-backs, F. Craig and L. Gould; half-backs, S. Turner, J. Craig, A. Cowley; forwards, J. Jamieson, J. Mitchell, R. Cale, S. Sutton, George McCombs. Linesman, B. Eglington; referee, Fred Cross. Two forty-five minute halfs. Next Saturday the Plainfield club will play the strong New Brunswick F. C. on the South Second street grounds.

W. G. Debele, of Somerset street, who has been traveling in the Western States with his wife, is expected home today.

—Neuman Brothers have just received fifty cases of olive oil direct from France. It will be sold by the gallon, half gallon, quart or pint.

FALL MILLINERY OPENING

THURSDAY, FRIDAY & SATURDAY OF THIS WEEK

Showing copies of the latest arrivals from Europe's fashion centres some just as the original models—others, subdued to meet the tastes of the more conservative dressers.

The millinery work-rooms is headed by Miss Root, of New York, an artist of high reputation, which is well earned, as her work will attest. YOU ARE EXPECTED TO ATTEND and see the beautiful bonnets, there is no insistance to purchase, you are our guests on these opening days, and Miss Root will be on the floor to greet you. There are some surprises in special values on a limited number of the most stunning models for opening day buyers, don't forget to see these, as they will positively not be duplicated, and, are put out only as an advertisement to this department. BY ALL MEANS COME.

Showing the New Fall Dress Goods

The biggest selection to be seen hereabouts, and our claim is that the values are better than you can duplicate, not only in Plainfield, but in Newark and New York, take our samples for comparision, and you will surely buy here.

GOLF.

A two day golf tournament at Wilkesbarre, Pa., on the course of the Wyoming Valley Country Club, postponed from last June, is set for Friday and Saturday, October 9 and 10. Several prominent golfers are expected in the field from New York and Philadelphia. The course has a fine reputation among golfers for its putting greens and the varied character of its fair green surface. The course measures 5,900 yards and the distances are from 200 yards to 515 yards.

Secretary Leighton Calkins of the Metrooliptan Golf Association takes issue with Will Anderson's remark that the prize money in the M. G. A. open championship, the first being of $150 and a gold medal, is too small to warrant players journeying from Chicago and other distant points to play. The tournament is to be at the Baltusrol Golf Club on September 23 and 24. Calkins says in part:

"There are many in our association who are opposed to the use of any of our limited income for prize money for professionals and who believe that these open tournaments are doing the game no good in this country. My own view is that properly conducted they do the game a positive good and should be encouraged, and for this reason I urged the increase of dues in our association a year ago for the express purpose of making an annual tournament for professionals possible. Our yearly income is less than $900, yet Anderson expresses contempt for a tournament at which $550 is put up for prize money!

"The fact is that the association is entirely local in character. A larger sum for prizes would be out of place, even if we could afford it. The tournament is primarily for local players, although players may enter from any part of the globe. As the event this year has been thrown open to all for the first time, it comes with bad grace for a Western player to criticise it in this manner. It may be that it would not pay Anderson to come on for that event. Of course that depends on what he can win, and as he did not pay expenses at Myopia, he possible does not care to take another chance.

"But the winner, whoever he is, will get not less than $150 and a gold medal, to say nothing of a title which with these players has a money value. In special prizes the winner can hardly fail to make $20 or $30 more, and it must not be overlooked that the event is followed the next day by a special event for $200 in additional prizes, very generously donated by the Baltusrol Club. Of course, the title is not as valuable as the title played for at Myopia, and we do not expect players from a distance to come on to any great extent, but all are welcome who wish."

KEARNY'S BRIGADE WILL HOLD A REUNION.

Great preparations have been made at the country home of General E. Burd Grub, "Grassmere," near Burlington, where, tomorrow, he will entertain the white haier survivors of Kearny's First Brigade of New Jersey at their annual reunion in commemoration of the battle of Campton Pass, Md. This is the twenty-seventh reunion of this brigade and the seventh to be held at General Grubb's home.

Kearny's First Brigade was originally composed of the First, Second Third and Fourth New Jersey regiments, all of which were organized in 1861. Death by disease and bullets soon depleted the ranks, and the Fifteenth, Tenth, Twenty-third, Fortieth and the old Thirty-seventh, known as Grubb's "Game Chickens," were organized after the battle of Antietam and added to the brigade. It was at the battle of Campton Pass that General Grubb, then colonel, won honor, when he took charge as commander of the brigade after General Taylor was killed. The brigade was in confusion and on the verge of retreat, when Colonel Grubb rallied the shattered force, and the soldiers won the battle.

Five thousand persons are expected to attend this reunion. At ten o'clock in the morning the veterans will form a line at the Edgewater Park station, and under the command of Captain W. F. Ranker, of Newark, will march to the home of their leader. Chaplain W. H. McCormick will make an address on behalf of the brigade and General Grubb will respond.

Dinner will be served on the lawn, and while the General entertains the old soldiers Mrs. Grubb will entertain the wives and daughters of the veterans on another part of the lawn. Among the invited guests are Governor Fort, Senator Colby, George L. Record, Thomas Alcott, Mayor Reyburn, Captain John C. Groome, Governor Claud A. Swanson, of Virginia; Colonel A. K. McClure, Captain John Graham, Mayor Roberts, of Beverly and Mayor Rue, of Burlington.

50TH ANNIVERSARY GOLDEN JUBILEE

One of the Brightest Pages in Newark's History.

Historians generally note the beginnings of factories, of schools, churches, banks and insurance companies, the battles fought, the great fires, the introduction and growth of railroads, the inventions that have contributed to our welfare and aided human progress; but tney are silent on the beginnings and growth of the city's mercantile institutions, notwithstanding the close relations they have with the public and the manufacturer alike, their importance as an economic factor in the everyday life of the community and their value as city builders.

The arrival of this store at its 50th mile post and the celebration attending the event, which was inaugurated the past week with such eclat, will go down in the annals of local history as one of the most notable events, if not the most notable, in the mercantile life of the city, and as one of the most magnificent demonstrations of popular approval that any city has ever known.

The fact that fuly 40,000 people visited the store on the first day our our Golden Jubilee Celebration last Tuesday evidences the tremendous interest the public has in institutions of this sort, and attests the fact that the people are not blind to the enormous benefits that accrue to them thru having institutions such as this to supply them most economically and speedily with their everyday needs and things of art, beauty and utility.

When the Industrial Exhibition of Newark Manufacturers was held in 1872, it wass open for fifty-two days, during which time about 130,000 people, including General Grant, General Ben Butler and Horace Greeley, all Presidential candidates, visited the show, and people and press marveled at the exhibition and the great attendance.

Creditable as that exhibition was and large as was the attendance, we would like you to compare it, if you saw it, or in your imagination, if you didn't, to the vastness of this store, which is a permanent exposition of manufactured objects of art and articles of utility, not only from Newark, but from all parts of the world, and which commands in its busy seasons, when the show is at its best, an attendance in a single week or more than the number that visited the Industrial Exhibition in the whole fifty-two days.

On Tuesday, our first Anniversary Day, fully 40,000 people visited the store. Every day last week great crowds were here, and Saturday, especially at night, such throngs as crowded every part of the store are seldom seen anywhere on any occasion.

Future historians can not ignore the event which we are now celebrating. They are bound to record it as an achievement of which not only the conductors and employes have reason to be proud, but of which all Newarkers and all eJrseymen can be proud.

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY PRESS

PENNSYLVANIA TUNNEL WILL BE READY MAY 1.

James McCrea, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and other officials of the company were in Newark and Harrison inspecting the site and the work which has been done on what is to be the passenger railwoay terminal on the Harrison meadows.

Some time was given to looking over proposed routes through Newark to connect the centre of that city with the big central terminal in Harrison and with big Hudson River tunnel system., President McCrea said:

"We expect to have our complete tunnel and subway system in operation by May 1 of next year. The system will be electrified throughout and it is expected that the cost will not exceed the $90,000,000 which has been set aside for the work. The site for a big power house which will supply electricity for the operation of the trains will be on the east bank of the Passaic River and not far from the main terminal site."

Mr. and Mrs. John Tirkot, Misses Anna and Frances Tirkot and Charles Tirkot, of Williamsbridge, and Miss Emma Lustig, of New York, have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Victor Kalfus, of Watchung.

Trying to Save Child Slayer's Life.

In order that Giovanni Montigano, who killed Edith Pickett, fourteen years old, of Caldwell, may live to go to the electric chair, which may be his fate, he is being fed through a tube at the Mountainside Hospital at Montclair. Montigano shot himself three times in the head after he killed the little girl, shattering his jaw and cutting off his tongue, but despite his terrible wounds, the doctors said he would live if they could furnish him sustenance. Montigano is progressing so favorably that he may soon be arraigned. Montigano is forty-eight years old. He said he loved the girl like a father, and, having determined to kill himself, arranged to take the life of the child also.

To Ask Every One Half Day's Pay.

Bayonne men and women will celebrate "Hospital Day" on Saturday, October 10, when every resident of the city will be asked to give one-half a day's pay or income toward the fund for a new city hospital, which has been started, and will cost $45,000. It is expected to realize at least $25,000. The remaining $20,000 was raised by a carnival a year ago.

Columbia University makes it possible for the board to secure her services.

Miss Jane Crawford will be in charge of the 2 B grade in the Somerset School. She is a graduate of the Cortland Normal School and taught last year at Luzern, New York. Miss Edna French takes charge of the Somerset kindergarten, with Miss Myra Emmons as assistant. The Watchung kindergarter will be taught by Miss Alice E. Martin as principal and Miss Myra Cheesman, of New York, as assistant. Both are graduates of the Elliman Kindergarten Training School, New York.

Shus there are seven changes in a corps of thirty-nine teachers—three high school, one grammar, two primary and one special. The return of so large a proportion of last year's teachers will be of much advantage to the schools.

THE FORUM.

Editor, The Daily Press:

In your Saturday issue you call Mr. Bryan "the Nebraskan." I wish to take exception to this. Nebraska has had trouble enough getting the credit that belongs to her as the most important State in the Middle West; getting recognition for the good she has done, and she calls a halt at being blamed for what she has not done.

Nebraska is not responsible for W. J. Bryan. As a State, it does not and never did endorse him. He represented a district in Congress but the Republican candidate was not popular, and the same district did not endorse or support Mr. Bryan for the Presidency. In each of his campaigns his agents make a hue and cry because "The Bryan vote is about to be stolen." There never was a Bryan vote in Nebraska worth stealing.

Why do not you newspaper men credit Colorado or Nevada—the States for whom Mr. Bryan talked "free silver" at so much per month—with the "peerless one," the "silver tongued orator?"

Nebraska's sons are not so versatile but what they said yesterday they mean today.

DENOUNCES "X-SCIENCE"

is remarkable. She tells you in that glossary the meaning of certain expressions in Scripture, "for the literal and material reading is the reading of the carnal mind which is enmity against God." "Proper names therefore do not have their ordinary significance." The "Euphrates" to you means "a river" so all the Lexicons that you have ever read have declared; but to Christian Science, it means the "divine science encompassing the universe and man." "Eve" is the mother of all living but to Science "Eve" stands for "mortality, a futile belief in life, substance and intelligence in matter." But listen to this interpretation. "Adam" means "a dam or an obstruction to the truth." In Hebrew, the root meaning of Adam means red, and refers to the earth, but Mrs. Eddy has no us for Hebrew roots.

Does the method of Christian Science heal people? Of course it does. But they claim theirs in the way par excellence, for Mrs. Eddy says Christian Science is "the soul of divine philosophy and there is no other philosophy." "Christian Science is not the search after wisdom. It is wisdom. It is God's right hand grasping the universe." Professor Angell declares that "mesmerists, mental healers, medicine men, priests, saints and physicians, one and all, succeed by playing upon the imagination in producing remarkable changes in bodily health. He declares that insomnia, neuralgia, alcoholism and asthma have all been healed in this wy but there is little or no proof that diseases caused by bacilli such as tyhpoid fever, small pox, bubonic plague, cases of fracture are helped by this method.

Dr. Moll, of Berlin, testifies that there are fifty or sixty patients sent annually from the French hospital of the Salpetriere to the grotto of Lourdes when the hospital fails to cure. There is something in the mental suggestion of the place that cures where the hospital fails. If suggestion cures, what need have we for a "metaphysical theory which denies the self evident facts of consciousness?" which denies common sense and the historic facts of Christianity. It is because it denies these historic facts of Christianity that it falls under the ban of the church not because it effects cures of the body. Mrs. Eddy claims that "prayer to a personal God is a hindrance." She would substitute "principle, eternal and harmonious," for our conception of "Our Father." She asserts that "God cannot become finite and so be limited within natural bounds." But Paul tells the Phillippians that the Lord "emptied Himself of the divine glory and took the form of a servant." The fact of sin and atonement, which truth is the great truth of the Bible, is denied by Christian Science, for there is no sin that needs atonement "the sense of sin must be lost."

The "only reality of sin, sickness and death is the awful fact that unrealities seem real to human beliefs until God strips them of their disguise." "Evil is an illusion." "Error has no real basis." But Christ never said that sin was an illusion Christ came not to redeem men from the conception of sin but from the awful fact of sin. Mrs. Eddy would say that sin, disease and death bear the same relation to reality that darkness does to light. Drkness is the absence of light but sin is the result of positive will to sin, and so Scripture teaches it. You have been thinking of the angels as God's messengers. Christian Science says that you are wrong. They are God's messages.

Heaven is not a place to the Christian Scientist, it is a state, and yet our Lord said to his disciples the words that have been of such comfort to us. "I go to prepare a place for you." In Heaven there is no personal immorality to a Scientist. If there is no personal immortality or personal existence the longing one has for recognition in that world will not be realized. The New York Sun once said of Christian Science that it is "the strangest and most incongrous movement which could have been started in a period of advancing enlightment. It is a mixture of pseudo, science, superstition and mystery." But it is more than that. It is a system, while healing the body strikes not only one but the great foundations of the Christian faith. It denies the personality of God and calls Him a Divine Principle. It says that "prayer must not be uttered with the lips." "Belief that man is made better by praying is an evil." It declares that the Holy Sprit is divine science. It denies the atonement, for there is no sine needing atonement. Yet His name was called Jesus because his mission was to save His people from their sins and He saved them by the shedding of His blood. Jesus did heal the bodies of men but His great purpose in the world was to redeem men from sin. Paul was ready to suffer the loss of all things and suffer throughout his life; for he was conscious that his light affliction worked out for him eternal weight of glory. His ambition was not to be cured of bodily ailments. He was ready to carry his thorn in the flesh that he might win Christ and know the power of His resurrection. To him the cure of bodily ailment was not the main thing. He never could have been the hero that he was if he had not been willing to suffer scourgings for Christ. The very thorn he carried in his flesh was to him a means of spiritual grace. I believe that the methods of Christian Science can and do heal certain ailments of the body. I believe that others by mental suggestion of some sort do the same thing but I refuse to surrender the great truths of the Bible and of historic Christianity for the strange teachings of Mrs. Eddy.

Miss Clemens' Tribulations.

Miss Clara Clemens has come to the conclusion that things want adjusting in this world. "Need I mention," she writes, "that if I refer to the glaring injustice of having to go about labeled 'Mark Twain's daughter' when I am doing my best to pursue a musical career? Father is, of course, a genius, and that is what makes me so tired. I have a mind to scour Europe for a secret hiding place," she continues, "and when I have found it take to bed, for, say, a couple of years and arise—a genius. For the bed habit is a recipe of father's success. While I have been tiring myself out in an endeavor to rise to the heights as anybody else's daughter he has just lain in bed and thought things and got out of bed and then to loaf around on a lecture tour or tramp lazily through Europe. That's why I am looking for a really comfortable bed."

A Momentous Occasion.

"So you expect to be called on for a speech during the campaign?"

"Yes," answered Mr. Dustin Stax. "And it's one that is going to require a great deal of consideration."

"It will be a lengthy effort, then?"

"No. Exceedingly brief. When the collector of campaign funds comes around I've got to say 'yes' or 'no.'"—Exchange.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Westfield defeated Scotch Plains again Saturday afternoon at Recreation Park, the score being 6 to 2. Westfield won the game in the first inning, McLoughlin being touched up freely. This together with ragged support behind him netted five runs for the home team, after the one bad inning, McLoughlin settled down and pitched a good game; the team backed him up and Westfield was only able to score one more tally. The Plains batters could do but little with Ortlieb's delivery. The support back of him was not of the best, however, the Plain's team could only bring two runs across the rubber.

The services at the Methodist church last night consisted of an Ira D. Sankey servince instead of the usual preaching. Favorite hymns of the singer were sung and a short talk on them was given by the pastor, Rev. W. W. Deitrich. The service was an enjoyable one and well attended.

Fred L. Trautmann, of Harvard University, left for Rochester, N. Y., after spending a pleasant vacation with his sister, Mrs. Fred Hoppel and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kalloway and daughter spent Sunday with Mr. Kalloway's parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Coddington, of Park avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Smith, of Stelton, were the guests over Sunday of Mrs Smith's parents, Mr. and Mrs Joseph Clark, of Front street.

The local ball team seem to have lost the winning streak they developed early in the season. Saturday the team plays at Rahway again.

Mr. and Mrs. Phil Trautmann and daughter, of Whitewater, Wis., spent two weeks at the home F. W. Hoppel.

The weekly meeting of the B. Y. P. U. was held last night in the parlors of the church.

George Baldwin spent Sunday with relatives and friends in Rahway.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The Dunellen A. C. will hold a fair in Union Hall on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights. On Thursday night, the New Brunswick A. C. will attend and on Friday night the Somerville A. C. will be guests.

The members of the Dunellen A. C. will hold their first football practice tonight. The prospects for a good team are better this year than at any time in the history of the club.

CHARACTER TOLD IN THE EYES.

If eyes are placed too close together the owner is jealous and critical.

If eyes are far apart the owner has a fine memory and broad intelligence.

Deep set eyes show melancholy and moodiness.

Protruding eyes show self-indulgence.

Wide open, round eyes mark a mind that is not developed, is credulous and serious about small gossip. The owners have no self-control.

If the eye is very oval, almost almond shape, with the outward droop shaped to a point, look out for a crafty and subtle nature.

Gray eyes are those of intellect and a well-balanced character. They show unselfishness and a strict sense of justice. When they are put below a broad, high forehead, they denote great talent.

Brown eyes, with a touch of hazel, show courage, intelligence and affection.

When the hazel eye has an arched eyebrow, its shows a fickle temper.

Velvety brown eyes show intense feeling, and are not often to be trusted.

A glittering black eye expresses meagre intelligence and often physical courage.

Very light blue eyes are said to always show deceit and cruelty.

Violet blue eyes are loving and ardent, but impetuous, and do not show a high order of intellect.

SEEING NELLY HOME.

In the sky the bright stars glittered.
On its back the auto shone,
It was in Aunt Hetty's auto carriage
I was seeing Nelly home.

On my head a soft form landed,
Landed like a pond'rous time,
Down the bank we bounced and bounded—
I was seeing Nelly home.

Bits of me and scraps of Nelly
All along the way were strewn,
And I knew in many pieces
I'd be seeing Nelly home.

Tenderly they gathered Nelly,
Scooped me up from off the loam;
In an ambulance my remnants
Saw my Nelly's fragments home!

STATE NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

The body of a man killed by a train at Riverside a week ago was identified yesterday by relatives as Ferdinand di Julia, of Brooklyn.

The Millville Bottle Works, after an idleness of thirteen weeks, resumed full blast today, giving employment to nearly 200 men and boys.

While fishing in Delaware Bay, Thursday, Charles Austin, of Millville, landed a sea turtle weighing nearly eighty pounds with a bluefish line.

Two masked highwaymen atacked William Flowers in West Millville Thursday night. Flowers gave them a hot fight and succeeded in escaping.

State Road Commissioner Gilkyson has accepted the new shell road in Mannington Township, Salem county which recently was improved under State aid.

Ephraim Foster, while cleaning the tubes of boiler at the Ferracute Machine Works, Bridgeton, fell from a ladder fourteen feet to a cement floor, and was badly injured.

Finding a bottle of arnica, Nolla, the young daughter of Chester E. Emmons, of Florence, drank some of the contents before her mother saw her. Prompt medical attendance saved her life.

Four young men of Pitman will walk from here to Atlantic City, starting at 7 o'clock on Sunday evening. They are John Lupton, William Kruger, Webb Nolan and Charles Graham. They expect to arrive at the shore in time for breakfast, and after a rest of a few hours will return by train.

The Camden County Board of Taxation yesterday reduced the tax rate of the borough of Oaklyn from $1.96½ to $1.92. After Councilman Johnson had learned that the rate was at the former figure he prevailed upon Mayor Fisher to call a special session of council, when the incidental expense account was reduced from $750 to $600.

A chicken was killed at the home of T. D. Boyer, on West Summit avenue, Haddonfield, Friday, that weighed when dressed, something over four pounds. When it was opened a tumor weighing two pounds was taken from it, about half the size of a football. The chicken was in apparent good health, and the presence of the tumor is unaccountable.

While a painter was plying the brush on Thomas Whittaker's barn, at Vineland, a calf drank half a gallon of paint and died, Whittaker demanded pay for the calf and the painter asked reimbursement for his paint. Whittaker is a tenant and the painter claims he was not responsible for the animal while he was painting for the owner. A lawsuit is promised.

Because of demands from business men in the southern section of the city Camden's Board of Trade means to wage a war against both the Pennsylvania and the eRading railroads, as a result of their refusal to extend the belt line on South Front street. The board authorized the employment of counsel, and the matter will be taken up with the State Railroad Commission.

Ejected from a Kaighn avenue apartment house after she is said to have been deserted by her husband, Mrs. Harry Hampton and her baby applied at the Camden iCty Hall yesterday for lodging. Mental distress and the pinch of poverty were plainly depicted on the woman's features, and she created much sympathy with the little one in her arms. The unhappy mother and child were given into the charge of the overseer of the poor.

GATHERING MATERIALS FOR SWEET SACHETS.

When going on a clover-gathering expedition the morning may be taken for cutting down the stalks and laying them together in a pile. Then after lunch the stalks can be stripped dropping the leaves and flowers into the receptacles made ready for them.

After the clover is gathered it is dried thoroughly by spreading it out thinly over newspapers and putting in the sun, but care must be taken that it is not in the wind, where it might be blown away. Several days are required for the drying, and the leaves will break to powder when all the juice is sapped out.

When the leaves and bloom are ready for cases, any material that si desired may be chosen for making sachet holders. It must be thin, of course, and no cotton is put in for padding. The bag does not need to be entirely filled, for a thin layer spread over the surface when the case is laid down flat is quite sufficient. Cases may be made just the size of bureau drawers, and small ones are nice, too, for slipping into trunks. Among house linen the sweet clover cases are delicious.

The Newest Ribbons.

In the world of ribbons the latest arrival is the cretonne. This comes in quite a wide width and is used for sashes, borders of gowns, coats and parasols, as well as for millinery purposes. Cretonne ribbon is too heavy for hat trimming, though it is charming used as a trimming for frocks and coats.

The material it decorates should be a sort woolen or one of the novelty mixtures rather than linen or silk. The last named fabrics combine more suitably with cretonne that comes by the yard.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

"Hail to the King of Mischief Makers" is said to be the greeting accorded to the new "Buster Brown" everywhere it has been presented this season. This little rascal will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow afternoon and night. It goes without saying that he will be accompanied by "Tige" and "Mary Jane," each of whom is a willing accessory to his mischief making. But that is not all, for Buster is a youngster who has an eye for beauty. He therefore insisted that he be surrounded with a chorus of pretty girls in the most beautiful costumes that could be designed, and this was done. Then there is music and singing and dancing, besides a lot of specialty features that keep things moving every minute during the entertainment. Critics have described the play as being "an unbroken chain of joyous mirth." "Buster Brown" is not a new play, one that the theatre-going public must experiment with. It has been tried out and has pleased the public fancy. It has made thousands of people laugh and so was retained by the management to make thousands more laugh, to make them take an easier view of life for having seen the piece. The costuming and stage effects are said to be up to any ever seen in this section of the country, as they were made especially for this tour.

The average actor requires from fifteen minutes to half an hour to transform himself into a character of any great contrast from his own personality. Joseph Jefferson could make up for Rip in fifteen minutes, Joe Emmett used to take half an hour to give us the merry, beaming face of Fritz. Some of Irving's characterizations were paintings that often took him an hour. Joseph Conyers, whose town constable in "Our New Minister" has won international fame for its keen grip upon its audiences as a lifelike portrait of a certain type of countryman, is said to be a full hour on the job of transforming his own smart-looking face to that of the sly, crafty zealot whose vanity and bumptiousness have made the constable role one of the most talked of parts of recent characterization. "Our New Minister" is listed for presentation at the New Plainfield theatre Wednesday night.

In the race scene which takes place in the third act of the Shuberts production of "Brown of Harvard" at the New Plainfield theatre next Friday night, Rida Johnston Young has brought strictly up to date what is probably the most effective and ancient of stage tricks. Sophocles, the greatest of the splendid trio of Grecian dramatists, was the first to discover that an actor's delineation of excitement over a conflict off stage had more effect on an audience than if the struggle itself were actually in view. His scheme in the scene depicting the murder of a Gememnon has been used by Shakespeare in Macbeth, by Ibsen in the Vikings, by Sardou in La Tosca, and there has been developed from these masked murder and torture scenes a like kind of Christian Science excitement over a race or contest as in "Old Kentucky," "The College Widow" and "Brown of Harvard." The vital, technical point in this scheme is to get the audience interested not so much in the conflict itself as in the characters on whom it has an effect and Rida Johnston Young has used a boat-race against an English crew as a skeleton to hang more dramatic consequence than has any other latter-day dramatist.

Where does all the music in the world come from? It comes from where all the books are born! Wherever there is a human heart, there is joy or sorrow, gladness or grief, sunshine or shadow, and music is the voice of it, music that is bounding and jubilant or dolorous and in a minor key. Wherever there is a blade of grass, a cricket, a stream, a forest or meadow, a hill or cavern, waterfall, dell and moving wind there is music. Even icebergs sing as they move along. There is no nook or corner or crevice in all the world that has not a scale or song of some sort. It is all nature music. And wherever there is a human being, civilized or savage, he tries to imitate or voice, or recreate in his own way the music that he hears everywhere. Sousa gives up a great deal of time in the examination of new music that is sent to him from all parts of the world. In a Sousa concert there are from twenty to thirty pieces of music played, and to provide a new program is something of a study. For the present tour of Sousa has provided exceptional programs. Souso and his band will be at the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon and night.

Warren Affinity Case Adjourned.

The examination of Frank Warren and Miss Sarah Clickner on charges of immorality made by Warren's wife Mrs. Elsie Warren, of No. 25 Court street, Newark, was adjourned in the First Criminal Court, Jersey City, yesterday until today, because of the absence of Miss Clickner. Miss Clickner, who is under bail, came to Jersey City with her father from Passaic, but did not appear in court because of misinformation that an agreement had been reached by the lawyers to adjourn the case.

Sale of Lands for Unpaid Taxes

COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, CITY OF PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Notice is hereby given that the subscriber, the Collector of the City of Plainfield, New Jersey, pursuant to the authority of the statute in such case made and provided, will on

Wednesday, September 23, 1908,

at two o'clock in the afternoon of that day, at the said Collector's office, No. 151 North Avenue, in said city, expose for sale and sell the several tracts or parcels of land hereinafter specified, or any part or parts thereof severally sufficient for the purpose, on which taxes for the year nineteen hundred and seven remain in arrears, to such person or persons as will purchase the same for the shortest term and pay the tax lien thereon, including interest and costs of sale, or in fee where no one will bid for a shorter term.

This sale is made under the provisions of the act of the Legislature of this State, entitled: "An Act for the assessment and collection of taxes," approved April 8, 1903, and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto.

Further particulars of the land to be sold, as shown on the City records, may be obtained at the office of the subscriber any week day prior to the day of sale, between the hours of 9 a. m. and 4 p. m., except holidays and Saturdays, and on Saturdays between 9 a. m. and 12 noon.

The following is a list of the several tracts and parcels of lands to be sold, which shows the names of the delinquents, the supposed owners thereof as the names of the delinquent owners appear on the books of the taxing district, together with a statement of the wards of the city wherein said lands are respectively situated, and the street in which each lot is situated, the block and lot number of each lot as they appear on the Official Assessment Maps of the City of Plainfield, on file in the office of the City Collector, and the amount due from each of the said lots respectively. To the amount due on each lot and parcel as hereinafter designated, there will be added interest at the rate of ten per centum per annum from the twentieth day of December, 1907, to the day of sale, and the fees provided by said act of the Legislature, viz.: for preparing and publishing notices of sale twenty-five cents for each parcel of land advertised; and for selling twenty-five cents for each parcel sold; and for each certificate of sale, fifty cents, besides necessary disbursements for printing, postage, affidavits and acknowledgements, which are hereby estimated at three dollars for each item of arrearage, and the City Clerk's fee for recording report, ten cents for each parcel of land sold, and all said fees and expenses shall form part of the tax lien and be paid by the purchaser at the tax sale.

Sale Number.	Supposed owner or person to whom assessed.	Ward.	Block No. City Assessment Maps.	Lot No. City Assessment Maps.	Street or Aevnue.	Year.	Amount of Tax.	Date from which interest will be added at 10 per cent. per annum to date of sale.

HELPFUL HINTS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE.

To clean leather, such as purses, handbags, suitcases, undressed leather and colored kids, use a reliable wallpaper cleaner. Mix as directed and apply in the usual manner, rubbing one way only.

Save old paraffin from jellies and the like, melt and mold in patty pans, and it will be useful for smoothing the irons.

In the country and small towns, where gas or electric light is not to be found, hang a lantern from a hook screwed into the bottom of an upper window sash on the outside. The light in the room may be regulated by raising or lowering the shade. This obviates the heat and odor produced by a kerosene lamp in the room.

Afternoon tea is the simplest of social functions. All that is really demanded is a cup of tea, thin bread and butter, and if you choose, a little plain cake. To these on the weekly reception day one usually adds scones, tea cakes, sandwiches, lemon, sugar and cream, with the tea equippage. Also, if you like, a plate of fancy biscuits.

A careful housewife has nailed a small strip of white wood over her gas range into which are screwed half a dozen dresser hooks. On these she hangs her cooking fork, iron spoon, wooden spoon, small strainer and a cooking knife, and finds that having them all ready to hand saves many steps.

Candles will burn slowly and steadily through the evening if they are kept on ice all day.

DETAILS FOR THE CAREFUL WOMAN.

Scotch plaid is quite a smart finish for the up-to-date sweater. The collar, belt, cuffs and often the bands down either side of the front are of the varihued material.

Voiles and panamas trimmed with ribbon make exceedingly smart gowns.

Big dots worked in color are favorite trimming for the turnover linen collar. The edge is frequently button-holed in similiar cotton.

A white serge suit stitched in black was a striking costume at a recent tennis tournament.

Hairline stripes will be much worn this fall for tailored suits. Mohairs and serges are favorite materials.

Undoubtedly the pansy suggested the combination of yellow and purple which has appeared in some of the stunning evening gowns.

Cravenetted sateen is used for an inexpensive but decidedly useful automobile coat. This material not only looks well, but is both dust and shower proof.

Following the lead of cretonne, silkoline is ingratiating itself with the makers of clothes. It is an especially pretty material for the kimono, being so soft and clinging that it is a fair substitute for China and India silk, and then it comes in such charming, big, rosy designs. It is inexpensive, too, costing but fifteen cents the yard. Ribbon or bias silk—very soft—featherstitched or catstitched to the edges, adds a look of real elegance.

DO NOT FROWN IF YOU WISH A SMOOTH SKIN.

If you want to keep a smooth forehead that will not only add to your looks but give you the reputation of being good tempered, don't frown.

This ugly facial contortion is a habit with a great majority of women. It does not mean wrath or disappointment. It often begins with some slight eye trouble and it often means perplexity.

A woman frowns when she is puzzled or when she is turning over some question in her mind, or when she faces the light or is intently listening.

The frown does not help and it should be abandoned. It makes more wrinkles than trouble, and a wrinkled brow not only gives seeming age but mars the prettiest set of features or the most charming expression.

If you frown because of your eyes, go to an oculist.

If you frown from habit, change your habit. Don't say you can't stop frowning, for you can stop anything if you put your mind to it.

PLAIN BORAX HAS MANY WORTHY USES.

For the shampoo use one teaspoonful to two quarts of warm water. It acts directly on the scalp, keeping it in a healthy condition.

As a dentrifice and mouth wash borax is unexcelled. It cleanses the mouth, hardens the gums and relieves cankers. In using it for the teeth make a powder of one ounce each powdered borax and pulverized castile soap and two ounces of precipitated chalk.

Bags made of cheesecloth, about eight inches square, filled with oatmeal, some powdered borax, pulverized castile soap and a little powdered orris root and used in the bath are delightfully refreshing.

A box of powdered borax is indispensible at the toilet table and as a disinfectant and will prove a valuable aid in procuring cleanliness at the kitchen sink and if it were more frequently used a great amount of waste might be prevented in the larder.

CHAS. HOWARD MONTAGUE AND C. W. DYAR

(Copyright, by The Cassell Publishing Co.)

He soon discovered that Mr. Fetridge had ceased to take active interest in legal work, that he had but few clients, and that his chief business now seemed to be to look after the investments of his large property. John Lamm made arrangements to be accurately informed from day to day of a full list of the millionaire's office visitors, especially of those whom he took into his inner sanctum, and whose business with him appeared to be confidential.

It was in this way that he first became informed of the existence of Mme. Raymond.

Here is the report furnished by Richard Fetridge's clerk, Olsen, late in the afternoon of Thursday:

"About three o'clock a mighty pretty woman, whose complexion had evidently been toned up by artificial expedients, asked, in a tone of authority, if Mr. Fetridge was in. I said 'No;' but she might expect him in a few minutes. Would she sit down and wait? She would. She drew her chair up near the window, and looked out all the time. It struck me she was careful not to turn round when anybody came in. I may be wrong, but it occurred to me that she did this so as not to let her face be seen by any chance visitor.

"It was something like 30 minutes before the boss appeared. As soon as she heard his voice she turned round. The boss gave a start. 'Why, Mme. Raymond,' he said, and surprised enough he was. But he hurried her toward his private office, saying something in a low tone, and looking over in my direction. But you may believe I was adding up a column of figures just at that time.

"Well, the two were closeted an hour together, and then the woman came out. Always the politest of men is my boss when a good-looking face is about. He danced attendance on her, and I heard him say, as he took her hand at the door:

"'Have no anxiety, my dear madam. Everything is being carefully looked after. Trust me to see that all comes out right.'

"And that was the last I saw of the woman."

Mr. Lamm, with all his eagerness to get at the case only intensified by these incomplete and unsatisfactory disclosures, requested his informant to let him know the instant that unknown woman appeared in Fetridge's office again.

He was prepared for an indefinite period of waiting, and the arrival of this brief message the morning of the day after he had given these last instructions, came as a pleasant surprise:

"She is here."

With all speed the detective made his way towards the substantial brick building where Richard Fetridge was usually to be found during business hours on any week-day of the year.

Waiting in the quiet corridor, Mr. Lamm found the place almost as deserted, this summer morning, as if it were a bank holiday. But the echo of a door closing on the flight above, and the sound of two voices, one of which was Fetridge's, in amicable conversation, soon demanded his close attention.

It was a woman's voice that spoke the only "good-by" that came unmistakably to the ears of the detective; and a woman's light step heard on the stairway gave him assurance that the mysterious Mme. Raymond was coming his way.

A slight built, willowy woman, this, thought Mr. Lamm, as he watched her pass near at hand, his own presence entirely unnoticed. Pretty, an olive complexion, a little too much "made up;" large, lustrous eyes, black hair (her own undoubtedly), a very graceful figure. Altogether, as Mr. Lamm summed up the case, an attractive brunette on the sunny side of 30, with something of a foreign air about her. Assuredly a visitor to Boston, wherever born and bred.

The graceful figure, well set off by a coquettish bonnet, which, like the summer wrap, had a pleasant contrast of color in it, flitted through the streets. Followed by more than one admiring glance, the lady was followed also by Mr. Lamm, though not one of the many acquaintances with whom the detective exchanged a bow and a pleasant word, would have suspected the fact.

Mme. Raymond, hailing a South End car, and taking a seat with dainty supervision of her skirts, looked at the shop windows past which her route took her, with languid curiosity. Mr. Lamm, two seats behind, did not seem to notice her. Mme. Raymond left the car at a shady crossing; and Mr. Lamm, having seen her on the footpath and well around the corner, swung off the car in his turn, and quite casually walked up the street which the lady had traversed just before.

Mr. Lamm was going by a modest-looking house, with a high doorstep, just as Mme. Raymond was ringing the bell. She was admitted in a moment, and Mr. Lamm still walked on, turning the corner and taking a meditative promenade down a dusty avenue for a little distance.

But the now invisible magnet still drew him to that quiet little street, and to the ninth house on the right in a distractingly regular row of highly-respectable looking dwellings. "A boarding house," commented Mr. Lamm, as he leisurely looked at the windows on his way up the steps. "No need of a sign to tell that fact."

In his suave inquiry regarding eligible lodgings, the careworn landlady who opened the door took an instant interest. She liked the man's face, as she confided an hour later to an intimate friend in the millinery line, who chanced to call.

"We have a very good room back, up one flight, sir; quite near the bathroom."

"Ah!" The caller seemed to be considering. "I'm a quiet man of business, you understand. No gay roysterers, no noisy lodgers, no piano thumping at midnight, suppose?"

"Dear, me, no, sir," the landlady assured him. "Fact is, we're rather empty now. Only two clerks, very nice, steady young men, on the third floor, and a transient, a lady, who occupies the parlor bedroom, front, second story."

"She's not musical?"

"I think not, sir. She's not sung since she came here, to my knowledge, a week ago last Wednesday. I think it was—yes, I am sure, for the man was sent in to whiten the walls that day, and that is how I came to remember it."

"Lady, a transient, you say. Stranger, then, of course?"

"It's her first visit to Boston, she tells me. She lives in New York, and is here on a little business. Settling up an estate, I think, though she's not said so in just so many words."

"Ah! Well, in that case, she can't have many friends to call on her in the evening, and chatter, chatter, giggle, giggle for hours together?"

The landlady smiled and shook her head. Lamm resumed, in a very friendly, off-hand fashion:

"You see, ma'am, I should be quite near her room if I concluded to come here, and as I'm a quiet man and go to bed early, I don't want to be kept awake by late and noisy callers or any other lodgers. That was the objection at my last place, ma'am."

The landlady smoothed her apron complacently. "No such difficulty here, sir," she said, with confidence. "Why, Mme. Raymond has only had one caller since she's been here, and I don't know as you can call it a caller, either, for he merely came home with her the evening of the day after the lady took the room here. Yes, it was Thursday week. I noticed him with her at the door when I answered her ring. It was after nine o'clock, and I had got worried about her, being a stranger and so on, so that I was glad to see she had company. 'My brother,' she said to me, and a nice appearing gentleman he was. I liked his face. Well, he came in and had a quiet talk with the lady—a talk that you couldn't hear an inch outside the room, and couldn't possibly disturb anybody, Mme. Raymond has been out once or twice, but no one else has called on her, and I am sure that nothing she and the brother could say, if he should come to see her again, could possibly disturb you, sir."

Mr. Lamm was very far indeed from sharing this opinion of the lady who so desired his presence as a lodger. But his face wore a look of entire, unqualified assent. He asked to see the much-commended apartment "back, up one flight," approved its arrangements, and declared the price very reasonable.

But the best guarantee of his satisfaction was that he actually decided to take the room at once. A week's rent in advance was deposited in the landlady's willing hand. Mr. Lamm took a receipt for the money with a latchkey rolled up therewith, and, saying that he might come in to occupy the room at any time, bade the woman "good-day," and went toward his office, with thoughts in plenty to occupy his attention.

He had quite made up his mind that it was high time to come to a thorough understanding with the man to whose cause he had almost determined to ally himself—Thornton Stackhouse. It was with genuine pleasure, therefore, that he found that gentleman awaiting him in his inner office. Something about the man had excited his sympathies from the first, and he never felt more kindly disposed toward him than on the present occasion. He looked into his haggard face anxiously, and after that look he did not need to hear the man speak to know that he had come to make some important disclosure.

CHAPTER XVIII.

"SO LONG AS SHE LIVES I AM IN DANGER."

On his return to headquarters from some business in connection with the North case Friday morning, a week after the discovery of the murder, Inspector Applebee found a genuine surprise awaiting him.

"There is a lady in there who has been waiting to see you for some time," observed one of his assistants, and immediately after the inspector found himself closeted with the identical lady whose reception of him on a previous occasion had led him to denounce her to his superior as an idiotic and unavailable personage—none other, in fact, than Aunt Comfort Harwood.

It is not probable that the good old lady recognized in Mr. Applebee the gentleman whom she supposed to have been in the gas or water business when he visited her at Swampscott.

The chaotic condition of her mind at that time had been no more pronounced than her agitation and excitement on the present occasion.

"Oh! my dear Mr. Policeman," said Aunt Comfort, hastening to open a little reticule which she carried at her side, as soon as her eyes fell on the inspector's portly form. "Oh! my dear Mr. Policeman—if you are the proper man—yes, thank you—I have found the most awful thing in the house, and, though Mrs. Stackhouse said it was all nonsense, I could not rest till I had brought it to you."

"You come from Mr. North's, I believe?" said the inspector. "You were his sister-in-law?"

"Yes, indeed sir, poor man! And to think that he should have such frightful communications as this sent to him, and should keep them a secret from everybody in the house, when his own wife's sister—but it is just like him! He was so thoughtful of everybody except himself."

She had already excitedly thrust in the inspector's hand an envelope, of which the seal was broken.

A glance showed him that it was postmarked "Boston, May 10," of this same year, and that it was without any distinctive mark to betray its authorship. It was superscribed in a feminine hand. "Paul North, Esq., Marlboro Street, Boston, Mass." The envelope contained a sheet of common notepaper, on which was written in the same chirography as that of the superscription, the following:

"My Dear Sir: Pardon the freedom of a complete stranger, but believe in me you have a well-wisher. It is I who should warn you against trusting fortune or character in the hands of Mr. Albert Runyon. At least before doing so, permit that I advise you to investigate the history of his past. He is a serpent in the grass, who has ruined systematically everybody who in him confided, and will ruin you in the same way. I beg you will not treat this warning lightly, for if you disregard it you will surely come to grief sooner or later, and will remember when it is too late, my good advice. A word to the wise is sufficient.

"A FRIEND."

The inspector read this letter through twice very carefully before he uttered a word. Who was Albert Runyon?

Mr. Applebee was sure that he had never heard the name before.

"Well" said the inspector, "you did very right to bring this to me. Where did you find it?"

Aunt Comfort explained after a deal of circumlocution, which it is unnecessary to reproduce, that she had accidentally come across it in examining some papers of her late brother-in-law, which until recently had reposed under lock and key in his writing desk at the Marlboro street house.

The inspector quieted her agitation by assuring her that she had done her full duty in immediately referring this matter to the police, and that they would take steps to investigate it.

As soon as Miss Harwood had gone, the inspector showed the letter to his chief.

"This is one of that kind of matters in which the newspapers are of the most service," said that potentate, after a brief reflection. "We might keep this thing in our possession for a dog's age, and never know any more about it than we do now. If, however, the newspapers publish it we stand an even chance of hearing something about this Mr. Runyon—if the clew amounts to anything at all, which is doubtful. By the way, did you ask the old lady if she had ever heard of any person of that name?"

'TWAS A BASEBALL GAME

Bachelors Show the Benedicts, at Watchung Hunt Club, How to Play.

IT WAS AN AMUSING CONTEST.

Single Men Pile Up Ten Runs While Married Ones Get Four— Many Features of the Struggle.

Numerous baseball games have been played in Plainfield this season, but none that compared with the one witnessed at the home of the Watchung Hunt Club, Saturday afternoon. Foolishly thinking that they could win, the married members of the club challenged those of single blessedness to a contest, the losing team to pay for the dinners.

The married men depended on Lockwood and Butler as their pitchers, while Gilbert Fletcher as a backstop, assisted by W. B. Tyler, who captured the foul balls. Duncan Bulkley, who can pitch some, was in the box for the single men and Morris Dumont, was the receiver. Morris admitted that he had not played a game in fifteen eyars, but he was on the job and nothing escaped.

The bachelors started the first inning by making three runs, but this did not discourage their opponents, having overcome more difficult obstacles than that. In the third inning they succeeded in getting a run, which was scored by Greason. When half way home from third he fell down and rolled in. The umpire declared him safe. The game was growing a little monotous from lack of runs and the bachelors thought they would chalk up three more, which they did in the fifth inning. To this they added two in the seventh, and two in the eight, while the married men annexed one in the seventh and during a great rally in the ninth tallied two more, making a total of four.

Gordon Abbott, who handled the indicator, was suffering from a severe cold and it was difficult for the players or the large number of spectators to hear his decision. This often complicated affairs and threatened to break up the game.

There were no end of amusing incidents. For instance, Bruce Lachlan who has the reputation of being with Roosevelt's Rough Riders, was supposed to play centre field, but he insisted in standing on second base, leaving the centre garden unprotected. When at the bat he held his stick as though he was about to shoot a Filipino, and when called out on strikes, declared that "those pesky foul strikes were a nuisance for a man could never tell when he was out."

On several occasions. Duncan Bulkley, who throws left-handed, caught base-runners, and Harry Lovell again threatened to break up the game by declaring: "Mr. Umpire, I insist that the pitcher is balking." Frequently, Umpire Abbott found it necessary to change his decision to the players, but no serious objections were offered.

Harvey Fisk gave an exhibition in the ninth inning with "Apple Jack." After hitting the ball, he started to make the circuit. He hurdled over Otterson, who covered first base, knocking him off his pins and cleared second base, and short-stop with several feet to spare, never stoping until he reached the third station. He complete demoralized the whole infield and it was several minutes before the players recovered their composure.

Despite the quantities of oatmeal water supplied the players were frequently overcome and a waiter was in constant attendance with a large bottle of smelling salts. The game was concluded shortly before dark and the teams adjourned to the clubhouse where the victors and defeated ones enjoyed a dinner at the expense of the latter. The score of 10 to 4 in favor of the bachelors has been placed in a conspicuous part of the clubhouse, but the married men declare they will reverse it next year.

This is the score of the game:

GOTHAMITES VS. QUAKERS IN R.R. BALL CONTEST

Employes at the New York and Jersey City offices of the New Jersey Central journed to Philadelphia, Saturday afternoon, to witness the second game of the series between the representative teams from the Metropolitan end of the line and the team from the Philadelphia offices of the company. No more loyal band of rooters ever cheered the Giants on their victory, than those which cheered for the inter-city team.

The defeat administered by the Philadelphia team at Communipaw on August 15, still rankled in the breasts of the New York-Jersey City boys and they were determined to win, which they did by a score of 6 to 3. Excitement throughout the contest was at fever heat. When the dust had cleared away in the ninth inning the New Yorkers found victory tucked away in their bat bag.

During the contest the entertainment committee of the Philadelphia association looked out for the comfort of their guests in a royal manner, coffee and sandwiches being served on the field for the rooters who could not tear themselves away. The more sedate and reserved found ice cream, coffee and sandwiches in abundance at the clubhouse nearby. There was also music and bowling as extra attractions.

Edward Conover, chairman of the baseball association committee, had charge of the New York-Jersey City arrangements, while F. T. Dickinson, president of the association and assistant to W. G. Besler, was here, there and everywhere, looking out for the comfort of all. Edward Dunn, chairman of the board of governors, was another busy man in helping to make things pleasant. Those who took the trip appreciated the company's courtesy in furnishing free transporattion to all employes, two coaches being attached to the 1 o'clock Philadelphia hourly train. The return trip was started at 5:16, the train stopping to let the employes off at their own stations. The score by innings is as follows:

N. Y.-J. C.....0 2 2 0 0 0 2 0 0—6

Batteries—Seifht and Culvert; Riley and King.

BIG FIELD OUT ON THE COUNTRY CLUB'S LINKS

The largest field since last spring was out at the Plainfield Country Club, Saturday, there being more than seventy-five contestants on the course. The weather conditions were perfect for the contests and many low scores were returned throughout the day. The scheduled event was the weekly competition for the fall handicap cups, Class A and B, and the competition was close. In Class A, Arthur won the first three points with a net score of 74, while R. S. Rowland finished second with a 76 and R. G. Morse with third with a 77.

The play among the Class B contestants was just as close, C. W. King taking the first three points with a net score of 77. George S. Clay two points with a 78 and W. F. Merrill one point with a 79. The scores of the point-winners follow:

Class A—Arthur Murphy, 84, 10-74; R. S. Rowland, 83, 7-76; R. G. Morse, 91,14-77.

Class B—C. W. King, 104, 27-77; George S. Clay, 105, 27-78; W. F. Merrill, 104, 25-79.

Following the play in the evening the weekly dinner-dance was enjoyed by a large number of members and guests. These weekly social functions have been exceptionally popular with the members and now that a majority have returned from their summer outing they are more largely attended than ever.

SATURDAY'S GOLF ON PARK GOLF COURSE

The interest in the play for the challenge trophies, as well as the weekly competition for the President's and Golf Club cups, at the Park Golf Club, continues. On Saturday for trophy number three E. E. Gano, holder, defeated Dr. A. W. Anderson, challenger, by 2 up, and for trophy number five, Leon R. Thurlow, challenger, defeated W. V. Byard, holder, by 2 up.

A large field engaged in play for the President's and Golf Club cups, the elading scores being as follows: Rev. C. L. Goodrich, 96, 11-85; W V. Gano, 89, 0189; W. E. Lough, 110, 20-90; Leon R. Thurlow, 100, 8-91; Dr. H. K. Carroll, 99, 7-92; Walter C. McNaughton, 93, 1-92; E. E. Gano, 93, 0-93; Dr. A. W. Anderson, 100, 7-93; W. V. Byard, 102, 9-93.

Complain of West Front Street.

Owners of automobiles and hores who use West Front street to a considerable extent are complaining about the bad condition of the thoroughfare, especially west of Grant avenue. They declare that there is not a more important road leading in and out of the city and yet the street committee fail to keep it in as good repair as such constant travel demands. There are many who would like to see the street treated with either Tarvia or "Asphaltoilene" believing that either preparation would tend to preserve the roadbed.

CLINTON AVE. DEFEATED

Rahway, Putting Up Great Game, Makes Things Merry in the Seventh Inning.

SCORE WAS THREE TO NOTHING

Home Club Got but Four Hits Off Plainfield Twirler— To Play Another Game.

The Clinton Avenues were taken into camp by Rahway at the latter place, Saturday afternoon, the score being 3 to 0. All of the damage was done in the seventh inning, when by a combination of a couple of hits, a couple of free passes by Randolph and a foozle by Jack Martin, the Rahwegians succeeded in getting three runs over the pan. That was all they got, but it was enough to win a contest that was marked by close and exciting play throughout. In spite of the error by Jack Martin he and Emery were the particular stars, especially the latter, who had five assists without an error, besides getting a hit.

The home club could get but four hits off of Randolph, and it seemed as though the Plainfield aggregation was entitled to win. However, Clark, who allowed five hits, had his opponents completely mystified and they failed to bunch their bingles at the time when they would do the most good. It would be difficult to find two pitchers more evenly matched.

The Clinton Avenues went to Rahway with just nine men and Manager Dorflinger did not have a substitute to take O'Loughlin's place, when the latter broke his finger sliding to second base. "Billy" pluckily played the game out, although he suffered great pain. Rahway played a snappy game from start to finish and it was evident that they did not intend to let victory get away from them if possible. The teams have played three contests and Rahway has taken two of them. Another game has been scheduled to be played on Crescent Oval in October. The score:

CLOSED PORTALS.

Plainfield Council, United Commercial Travelers of America, will hold a meeting Saturday night, when several candidates will be initiated.

For several evenings crowds have been collected by the Salvation Army services which have been held on the street corners in the vicinity of Front street. A large drum was placed on the sidewalk and after each hymn pennies and nickles were tossed on it.

$300,000 Casino.

Long Branch, in all probability, will have a casino that will rival the one at Deal, which has become so popular. Property owners of the Elberon and West End station of Long Branch met at the Cedar avenue home of Albert Friedlander, where a permanent organization was effected by the election of Myron H. Oppenheim as president and Daniel W. Wardell as secretary. It is proposed to expend $300,000 for a casino. In a fortnight a special committee will be ready to report definite plans. It is proposed to have the casino ready for occupancy next season.

A Chimney Blaze.

A still alarm was received at fire headquarters this morning for a chimney blaze at 620 West Third street. It was put out before any especial damage was occasioned.

THE HAPPY WIFE OF A HAPPY HUSBAND.

It is not always the wife who stands behind her husband's counter or shares his office or labors with him, shoulder to shoulder, who is the greatest help to a man.

Many women distinctly feminine, and, to all appearances, hopelessly unbusinesslike, are first-class aids to their busy husbands, and they seldom or never enter the shops, offices, or factories over which their husbands rule.

A woman blessed with the faculty of saying or doing the right thing at the right minute is bound to be a help to her husband. The woman who can make herself indispensable to her husband as his social mentor and coentertainer has many pleasures which the less tactful sisters miss.

Everyone recognizes as a bore the woman who is forever quoting the clever sayings of her husband and dwelling at length upon his good points, his success in business, and so on, but the wife who knows when to drop a hint that counts is really worth while.

No matter how lovingly united or how sweet their accord, husband and wife rarely have the same temperament, tendencies or tastes.

Their needs are different; their manner of looking at things is not identical, and in varying ways their individualities assert themselves.

Compromise makes matrimony not only union, but unison and unity.

The spirit of compromise does not mean continuous self-surrender and self-sacrifice; it does not mean ceasing to be a voice and becoming an echo; it does not imply or justify the loss or individuality, it means simply the instinctive recognition of the best way out of a difficulty, the quickest tacking to avoid a collision, the kindly view of tolerance in the presence of weakness and errors; the courage to meet an explanation half-way, the generosity to be first to apologize for a discord, the largeness of mind that does not fear a sacrifice of dignity in surrendering in the interests of the highest harmony of the two rather than the personal vanity of one.

THE BILL OF FARE.

The shortcake halts a moment on its way,
The watermelon hath a henceward trend,
The cantaloupe drops in, but not to stay—
The prune alone is faithful to the end.
—Cleveland News.

The shortcake hits your pocketbook for fair,
The melon strikes you near the belt, you see;
The cantaloupe is water mixed with rind,
The prune, I guess, is good enough for me.
—Yonkers Statesman.

O, lucky bard, there is no doubt that you
From boarding-house arrangements are immune;
I've bucked the game—so henceforth I exclaim:
"Never again for me the festive prune!"
—Nashville American.

And why this talk of prunes and other things,
The while we say goodby to summer heat?
Thrice blessed the man whom tardy fortune brings Enough, no matter what it is, to eat.
—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Gee, what a bluff you boys are putting up
About these summer things for folks to eat,
When all the while it was the brimming cup
That helped you put these verses on their feet.
—Florida Times-Union.

Women and Mountain Climbing.

The English Alpine Club has a cause in its bylaws that prevents women from becoming members, but the French Alpine Club admits any woman who proves herself worthy of making a record. Mrs. Bullock Workman has from 21,000 to 25,000 feet to her credit; Miss Peck has gone to the Andes to beat her own record, which few men have equaled; Lucy Walker ascended the Matterhorn long before it was roped in; Mrs. E. P. Jackson and Miss Flossie Morse, the latter only 13 years old, have done wonderful things in the way of climbing. The Mazamas Club of the Pacific takes in the wives and sisters of the members, and women as well as men have made splendid records in the West.

CATHOLIC SCHOOLS OPEN

St. Mary's Parochial School Started Yesterday, Mount Saint Mary Tomorrow.

THE COLLEGE ON OCTOBER 1.

Work of Instruction in Charge of Sisters of Mercy—Both Are Excellent Institutions.

The Parochial School of St. Mary's Parish was reopened yesterday for the fall and winter term, with an attendance of 498 children. The opening exercises consisted of the celebration of mass at the church, in charge of Father Bogan, after which the pastor made a short and interesting address to the children. Everything was in readiness for the resumption of studies and the children went to work with a will.

The Sisters to the number of twelve, who comprise the teaching corps, have decided not to take children into the kindergarten who are under five years of age and this left a few vacant seats when school opened. It is expected that other children will enter in a few days to take their places.

Before the school work was begun, Father Bogan gave a blessing and in less than a half hour, the children had resumed their studies just as though there had never been a vacation period. A new feature at the school this year will be the teaching of sight reading of music by Miss Smith, organist at St. Mary's church. She will visit the various classes alternating each day. Another feature will be the work of the chorus of boys and girls. There are about thirty boys in one chorus and thirty-five girls in the other chorus.

The academic department of the college of Mount Saint Mary will open tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock at the new college building on Mountain avenue, North Plainfield, when it is expected that fully one hundred pupils will be enrolled. In this department there will be pupils from six to nineteen years of age, at which age they are supposed to be graduated into the college course. The enrollment at the Bordentown School last last year was about fifty pupils and this year it will be fully double that number.

The work of instruction will be in charge of the Sisters of Mercy entirely, a large and efficient corps having been engaged. The registrar, who is one of the Sisters of Mercy, and who has general supervision of the college, has been busy the past few weeks getting everything in readiness for the opening days. A large enrollment in the college department, which opens on Monday, September 28, is expected. The college building, considered one of the finest and most complete of its kind, is practically completed and it is thoroughly equipped for the best preparatory, academic and college work. On Sunday, October 18, the new college will be dedicated with elaborate ceremonies in which all of the leading dignataries of the church in the Trenton diocese will take part.

Another Sewer Conference.

Another conference of the representatives of Plainfield, North Plainfield, Dunellen and Bound Brook, will be held tomorrow night at the Common Council rooms. It is possible that Raritan and Somerville will also be represented, notice having been sent to them of the meeting. It is expected that a report will be received from the finance committee regarding the employment of an engineer and some decision will be reached. That committee comprises R. I. Tolles, F. E. Mygatt, Mayor Samuel Townsend, of the borough; Mayor Harry Swackhamer, of Dunellen, and Mayor Roberts, of Bound Brook.

Hospital Governors Meet.

The September meeting of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital was held last night. The report of the medical board for August aws as follows: Number of patients remaining at date of last report, 27; admitted, 55; total number of patients treated, 82; discharged cured, 45; improved, 6; not improved, 5; died, 2; remaining, 24; hospital days, 822; operations, 37. In the dispensary there were 55 patients, 154 visits of patients, three operations and two deaths. The other business was of a routine nature.

Motorcycle Accident.

Albert Matthews, of the borough, has been compelled to send his motorcycle back to the factory for repairs, because of an accident which befell him a few days ago. While riding out Park aveue, Mr. Matthews was thrown from the machine and suffered a number of severe cuts and bruises. The machine was put out of commission.

EDWARD A. LAING WEDS MISS BERTHA E. BREWER

Miss Bertha E. Brewer, of Stone street, the borough, and Edward A. Laing, of East Front street, were married at 9 o'clock this morning by Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck at his home on West Front street. The early hour was chosen in order that the couple might catch a certain train in an extended wedding trip. The couple was attended by Miss Ida B. Ayers, of Somerville, as bridesmaid, and Burlin J. Banks, of this city, as best man.

The bride wore a traveling gown with hat to match, and the bridesmaid's gown was of crepe de chine. She wore a large picture hat.

The ceremony was a simple one and immediately afterward Mr. and Mrs. Laing left in an automobile for Westfield, where they boarded the 10:15 train for New York. They will continue their wedding trip on the New York Central to Buffalo and Niagara Falls, from which point they will go to Toronto, the Thousand Islands, Montreal, Quebec, the White Mountains, Portland, Me., Boston and then home by boat to New York. Upon their return they will reside at 724 Watchung avenue for the winter.

The groom is engaged in the stationery business on West Front street, and has been successful. He is a member of Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E.; Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. & A. M.; Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, and Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M.

POOR FARM'S PROBE WILL BEGIN TONIGHT

The Councilmanic committee's investigation into conditions at the Industrial Home and more especially regarding the reported actions of Superintendent Arthur Wolverton, who has been found guilty of charges in the city court, will be started tonight. The matter was referred to the alms committee and at the suggestion of the chairman, Charles C Randolph, President R. I. Tolles and Mayor Charles J. Fisk were added to it, inasmuch as there are only three regular members of that body.

The action of the committee is taken because of a reort preceived from City Judge William N. Runyon, who stated that after a hearing of the case against Superintendent Wolverton, on the complaint of S. S. Vermeule, he had found the defendant guilty. Before passing sentence he expressed the wish that the Common Council cause an investigation to be made. In his report, Judge Runyon simply recited the facts as brought out at the hearing.

It is expected that the committee will make a full investigation and will question closely all persons who are able to throw any light on the subject. In the complaint Mr. Vermeule charged the superintendent with rough treatment, and he was supported by the testimony of Harry Adams, an insurance agent, who it is said was passing the Home at the time the superintendent was alleged to be ill-treating the aged inmate. Judge Runyon requested the Common Council to inform him of the result of the investigation not later than the October meeting.

Seeks Valuable Dog.

Dr. L. J. Belloff, of 9 Albany street, New Brunswick, called at local police headquarters, yesterday, and asked help in locating a valuable English setter dog that he had lost and which he believes is somewhere in this city. The canine is white in color, with black ears and black ticks all over the body. The animal was traced to just this side of Metuchen. Dr. Belloff offers a substantial reward for its return.

Girtanner Found Blameless.

Dr. Charles B. Lufburrow, of this city, county coroner, was called to Elizabeth yesterday to conduct an inquest concerning the death of Harry Hoeppner, of Irvington, Ernest Girtanner, also of Irvington, being charged with the crime. The coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental shooting and holding Girtanner blameless.

Captain Hopkins to Speak.

Captain A. Hopkins will be in charge of the service in the Salvation Army Hall tonight at 8 o'clock. Thursday evening Adjutant and Mr. J. Atkinson and the New Brunswick coprs will conduct the services. Good singing and speakers will be features. All are welcome.

Started New Bridge Today.

Arthur E. Smith, who has the contract for building the new concrete bridge on Terrill road over Cedar brook, started the work today. He expects to complete it within ten days.

HAVERLY REMOVED FROM HOSPITAL TO HIS HOME

Charles Haverly, of East Front street, Scotch Plains, who was injured at the Elizabeth Avenue Station, of the New Jersey Central, at Elizabeth, yesterday, was removed to his home from Alexian Brothers' hospital, during the afternoon. When taken to the hospital he was unconscious but when he came too he insisted on being taken home. He was placed in a trolley and Dr. Cooper, of Westfield, accompanied him to Scotch Plains.

Mr. Haverly has been employed by the New Jersey Central for a number of years to do repair work about the stations. It was while carrying a heavy piece of timber across the tracks in Elizabeth that a train came along and struck the end projecting over the tracks. The force of the blow knocked Mr. Haverly down and besides receiving cuts about the face and head, his back and legs were injured. Although his injuries are not considered serious it will be several weeks before he will be able to resume work.

SOMERSET'S COURTS ARE OPENED TODAY

The Somerset county courts, September term, opened in Somerville at 10 o'clock this morning, with Justice Charles W. Parker presiding and Judge L. H. Schenck also on the bench. The list of causes is a short one this term. Those of interest to Plainfielders are:

Supreme—James Fleming vs. George Weirs, in tort, Edward P. Johnson, Jr., C. M. Dolliver. Filed August 5, 1908. James Fleming vs. Andrew Lutkins, in tort, Edward P. Johnson, Jr., C. M. Dolliver. Filed August 5, 1908. James Fleming vs Lemuel Pope, in tort, Edward P. Johnson, Jr., J. Henry Crane. Filed August 5, 1908.

Circuit—Otto Newman, by next friend vs. The New Jersey Central Railroad Co., in tort, George S. Silzer, George Holmes. Issue joined July 9, 1907. Doane & Jones Lumber Co. vs. J. Westtecraft & Son, on contract, James L. Griggs, F. A. Pope. Issue joined August 31, 1908.

The petit jurors from North Plainfield are James F. Daley, Leander W. Hammond, Frederick E. Valentine, William H. Titus, David Morgey.

Warren—Edward Blazier, Fred Sanders, Fred H. Sage, John Burnett, Edward C. Hahn.

COUNTY'S TAX RATE FIFTY CENTS ON $100

The Union County Board of Taxation in session at Elizabeth, today, announced officially the county valuation, both personal and real to be $118,971,114, an increase of four and half millions over that of last year and the county rate for the coming year will be 49.992. The board is still at work determining the rates to be established in the various towns, boroughs and cities.

It is impossible to say at this time what Plainfield's rate will be, but from unofficial sources it is reliably stated that it will be close to $1.35. Last year's rate was $1.47, and it is known that efforts have been made to bring the local rate down to as near $1.35 as possible. It would seem, it is said, from the increase in personal and real valuations in this city that the hope of the local taxing board may be realized.

K. of P.'s at Somerville.

Delegations of members from Perseverance and Unity Lodges, K. of P., went to Somerville, last night, to witness the conferring of the third rank by Lodge of the Castle of that place. The Plainfielders were afterward guests at a supper and informal entertainment.

Broke His Leg.

Frank Meeker, of eParl street, slipped on the pavement at the corner of Pearl and Somerset streets last night and broke his leg. The injured man refused to go to the hospital after an ambulance was called and was assisted to his home.

FORM REPUBLICAN CLUB

North Plainfield G.O.P. Voters Organize with B. A. Hegeman as President.

SIXTY MEMBERS ENROLLED.

Alexander Milne and Dr. J. H. Cooley Vice-Presidents—To Hold Several Mass Meetings.

The Borough Republicans have organized to insure a sweeping party victory at the polls, having formed last night the North Plainfield Republican Club, of which former Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., is president. At an enthusiastic meeting held last night at Saengerbund hall by more than 100 party workers, where all factions joined harmoniously, officers were elected and plans made for the political fight.

Former Mayor Newton B. Smalley was given a rousing reception when he called the meeting to order. After stating the object of the call, he called for nominations for officers. Stephen B. Joseph offered the name of Henry A. McGee for temporary chairman and the latter's election was made unanimous. Mr. McGee made a ringing speech in which he pointed out the dangers of over-confidence and urged the Republican voters to unite for the supremacy of Republican principles and for the election of their chosen candidates in borough, county, State and nation.

Following his brief speech, Chairman McGee called for nominations. Former Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., was nominated for president by John Schenck, and was quickly chosen for that office. Alexander Milne and Dr. Justus H. Cooley named by W. L. Smalley and Fred Williams, respectively, for the positions of first and second vice-presidents, were likewise chosen without opposition. Albert Tranchand was elected secretary, and on motion of Captain William C. Smith, Councilman Lemuel B. Woolston was selected as treasurer.

The organization will be known as the North Plainfield Republican Club and from now until after the election will have its headquarters in Saengerbund hall, where several big mass meetings will be held. The building will be open every night to the club members. Sixty voters were enrolled last night as charter members, and double that number are expected to become members when the next meeting is held on Monday night, Sept. 21. President Hegeman did not attend the meeting last night but he has accepted the position and will announce his committees in a day or two. Arrangements have already been made to place a large transparency in front of the club headquarters.

WOMAN NOW IN NEED APPEALS FOR EMPLOYMENT.

Among the many "want advs." in today's issue will be found an appeal of a Christian woman for work. The advertiser seeks to earn an honest livelihood by hard work and having faith in the people of the community asks through the columns of The Daily Press where she can obtain wages for her toil.

Here is her advertisement:

"Is there a Christian in Plainfield that would give employment to a lady in need? A. B., General Delivery, Plainfield Postoffice."

Before night, we feel sanguine that glad tidings will be sent to the woman now in distress.

Mrs. Hoppock Improving.

The police were notified today that the condition of Mrs. Ella Hoppock, who was stabbed Saturday night by Fank Mohring, was considerably improved but it is not certain that she will be in condition to appear against her assailant tomorrow. She has had a fever since the stabbing and is under the care of Dr. Lufburrow.

Members of the Grand Jury.

Edwin S. Hooley, Dr. H. K. Carroll and Morris Abrams, of the borough, have been drawn on the Somerset County Grand Jury for the coming term. Charles Wheeler was chosen from North Plainfield Township.

Sons of Temperance Active.

Howell Division, Sons of Temperance, held a meeting last night at the Christian church on Grove street. Addresses on temperance and resolutions adopted against the liquor traffic were features.

Raymond Scribner.

Raymond Scribner, the nineteen-year-old son of William H. and Jennie Scribner, of East Sixth street, died this morning. The funeral arrangements have not yet been made.

—It will pay you to visit The Elizabeth Nursery Co., of Elizabeth, N. J., at this time, as their stock of trees, shrubs and vines is very attractive. A postal card will bring a catalogue.  9 15 2

AUTO LOSES A WHEEL; OCCUPANT THROWN OUT

Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Miller, and son, Russell, of Orchard place, figured in an automobile accident near New Brunswick, yesterday, in which Mrs. Miller received a severe shaking up and at first was thought to have been severely injured. But for the fact that the machine was being driven at a moderate rate of speed the result might have been much worse.

The party had been to South River and were on the return when the right front wheel became loosened in some way and dropped off. The auto dropped down on one side and Mrs. Miller was thrown out but the others kept their seats. Mr. Miller, who was driving, quickly brought the machine to a stop before any further damage was occasioned.

Mrs. Miller was given attention in the neighborhood and was afterward able to return home by trolley. The shaking up she received left her in a nervous condition and she had not fully recovered today.

BELLIGERENT HUSBAND FORGIVEN BY THE FAMILY

Aaron Reed, a resident of Fritz place who is in bad standing with the borough police, threw the neighborhood about his home in an uproar late yesterday by starting to annihilate his family. He returned to the house with a load of liquor aboard and began operations by using his wife for a punching bag. He had pummeled her about the rooms and was in a fair way to send her to the hospital when a daughter interfered.

The young woman was promptly knocked down and only escaped severe punishment by retreating hastily to a neighbor's house, where she sent a telephone call for the police. When the cops reached the scene, Reed had made himself scarce and continued in hiding until late last night. He evidently had scouts abroad as when the bluecoats gave up the search, he returned to the house with a flag of truce and induced the family to agree to a compromise. He promised to be good if they would make no complaint against him so the cops were called off.

Reports from the neighborhood this morning indicate that the white dove of peace had settled down upon the Reed domicile.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS OPEN IN CITY AND BOROUGH

The Plainfield Public Schools reopened this morning at 9 o'clock with a large attendance of pupils and the full complement of teachers. The whole day is being given up to arranging the classes and getting affairs in shape for the resumption of studies, which will begin at 8:30 o'clock tomorrow morning. At the High School there were short addresses by Dr. H. M. Maxson, superintendent, and Principal I. W. Travell and a few words of explanation from the latter regarding the classes.

Owing to the large attendance of children it will be impossible to obtain accurate figures today as to the enrollment. There is every indication that it will far exceed that of last year. Principal Travell is being kept busy today getting things in order and by tomorrow the regular routine will be possible.

The North Plainfield schools reopened this morning with a large increase in attendance over that of last year. The enrollment at the Somerset School is 814, of which 323 are in the Grammar department, 112 in the High School and fifty-one on the kindergarten.

In the Watchung School the number enrolled is 209, of which twenty-seven are in the kindergarten and the remaining eighty-two are distributed in the other departments. The total number of pupils in both schools is 1,021, and it is expected that this will be increased to some extent by tomorrow. At the High School this morning Superintendent H. C. Krebs was in charge and he spoke briefly to the pupils and teachers giving them words of encouragement and expressing the hope that the coming year will be the best in the history of the schools.

Y. M. C. A. Orchestra.

The Y. M. C. A. orchestra resumed rehearsals last night. The date for the first concert is set for October 20. Musical men, and especially players on the oboe, bassoon, viola and French horn, are invited to join as it is the desire of the leaders to have a full symphony orchestra if possible.

ITALIAN TRACK WALKER SUCCUMBS IN HOSPITAL

Pasquale Retino, the New Jersey Central track-walker who was injured near Westfield yesterday morning, when the cylinder-head of a B. & O. "flier" blew out and crushed his legs, died at Muhlenberg Hospital in the afternoon. Aside from the fact that he lost one leg by amputation, and received severe scalp wounds, he was unable to rally from the terrible shock and this caused his death.

Retino was walking along the main eastbound track toward Westfield, when the "flier" running close to fifty miles an hour approached him. He did not take any extra precaution to escape possible accident and just as the train neared him the cylinder-head of the engine blew out, striking the track-walker full force, crushing his legs. The blow tossed him a distance of several feet and he was picked up in a dying condition and brought to the hospital in this city.

In the meantime word was sent to the man's wife at Westfield, and she accompanied by her child reached the hospital after the man died. The wife was in the reception room waiting to see her husband, and it was a difficult task for the superintendent to break the news to her. When she learned that her husband had died she was prostrated with grief. The remains were taken to the home in Westfield today, where the funeral will be held.

OBSERVE 40TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY TOMORROW

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Force, of Duer street, will celebrate the fortieth anniversary of their wedding tomorrow at the home of Dr. and Mrs. J. C. Danielson, at Gardiner, Ulster county, New York, where the, with their daughter, Miss Lillian A. Force, are making a brief visit. Having denied himself a vacation, Mr. Force accepted the invitation of a relative Dr. Danielson, and is taking a few days' respite from business cares.

Mr. Force is the dean of newspaper editors in Union county, being the oldest living member of the fraternity in the district. It is now more than forty-two years ago that he founded The Constitutionalist, a weekly paper of Democratic persuasion, which today has a large circulation. On May 10, 1887, he established The Daily Press, then Democratic, but during the last four years an Independent journal, which is today "Plainfield's leading paper." Although well advanced in years, Mr. Force is still the active editor and proprietor of both papers.

Mr. Force was married on Sept. 16, 1868, to Miss Clara Bradshaw, daughter of Robert Bradshaw, at the latter's home in Newark.

Will Hold All Day Picnic.

The Missionary and Aid Society of Warren chapel will hold an all-day picnic on Thursday at the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Gavett in Washington Valley. The members will leave the chapel Thursday morning at 9 o'clock in a stage and they are requested to provide themselves with a box luncheon. A nominal fee will be charged for the ride to and from Mr. Gavett's home and those who intend going are requested to give their names to Mrs. Benjamin Moore, Mrs. John Green or Mrs. J. O. McKelvey by Wednesday.

Birthday Party.

George Meade, of West Front street, was tendered a surprise party last night by a number of his young friends in honor of his twentieth birthday. The evening was spent in playing euchre and forty-five. The prizes were won by Thomas Connaughton in forty-five and Miss Dunnigan and Michael Dobridina in euchre. Mr. Meade received many handsome presents in the shape of money and jewelry. At midnight ice cream and cake were served by the girl friends of the Owl Social Club.

Petman Now Warden Dodd's Guest.

Petman Robinson, the colored boy who has a habit of annexing everything of value that isn't chained down, was taken to the county jail at Elizabeth yesterday, to await the action of the Juvenile court. The local police are taking steps to have him committed to the Jamesburg Reform school as he is considered incorrigible.

Mrs. George Weber.

Mrs. Abby A. Weber, wife of George Weber, died yesterday at her home on Stebbins place, following a long illness from pulmonary trouble. She was thirty-eight years old and was the daughter of the late Philip Radin, of Scotch Plains. She leaves six children. The funeral will be held at the home tomorrow afternoon at 2:30.

BUTCHERS TO COOPERATE

Local Dealers Plan an Organization to Use Their Own Meat Scraps.

WILL HAVE RENDERING PLANT.

Permanent Officers to Be Elected Next Week and Details of the Business Worked Out.

Believing that they are being paid an insufficient price for their meat scraps, the butchers in Plainfield and North Plainfield have taken steps to use the bi-products themselves and derive the profit. A meeting was held in the parlors of the Iroquois hotel, last night, at which a co-operative organization was decided upon and a form of agreement discussed. Another session will be held next Monday night at which a permanent association will be formed and officers elected.

The butchers at the present time sell all the bones, suet and other leavings from meat to one of the wholesale beef houses which pays whatever price it wants to fix. On the other hand, the market men have to buy all their supplies from the same concern or one of its rivals, and again they have to submit to whatever charge is made. This makes the retailers get the wrong end both ways and is what led to the plans for the co-operative disposal of their scraps.

The plans in view include the renting or purchasing of Fred Endress' rendering plant near South Plainfield where the bones and suet will be made into tallow. This has a ready market in New York and with a competent manager in charge can be made to pay a handsome profit. At the conference last night it was suggested that the business could also be extended to include the purchasing of hides from the farmers in this vicinity and it will be discussed at the next session.

WATCHUNG CLUB HORSES AT BERKSHIRE MEETING

The Watchung Hunt Club was well represented at the fall meeting of the Berkshire Hunt Club held at Lenox, Mass., on Saturday, and Charles W. Fisk's "Apple Jack" was successful in winning the President's cup, a handsome solid silver trophy which is prized highly. This event was a three mile steeplechase and "Apple Jack" won the cup by taking the last jump in fine style. This was one of the stella attractions of the meet.

Among the Plainfield horses entered were these: Charles W. Fisk's "Apple Jack;" Hart Farlee's "Samurai;" H. A. Bourne's "Bessie Fullem," and "Double O;" Rufus C. Finch's "Mercy Me," and "Race Heart," and W. C. Eckerson's "Rollo."

In the steeplechase event for the President's cup, "Rollo" was third. In the one-and-a-half mile hurdle race, "Double O" was the favorite, but he fell at the last hurdle and lost out, much to the disappointment of his backers. H. A. Bourne's "Bessie Fullem" was second in the mile race on the flat and "Mercy Me" finished third in a hurdle event.

The Plainfielders who made the trip to Lenox were royally entertained by the Berkshire Hunt Club, a dinner being given in their honor Saturday night. They reached home Sunday night accompanied by their entries. Several horses from the local club are entered in the events at the Elkwood Club race-meet at Long Branch next week.

Leal's School Re-opens.

John Leal's School for Boys reopened this morning for the fall and winter term with a good attendance. A number of pupils who expect to enter the school are still away from the city on their vacations, but in the course of another week they will probably return. There is only one change in the corps of teachers, F. H. Rea, of Plattsburg, N. Y., and a graduate of the State Normal School at that place, taking Fred H. Hanson's position in the junior department. Mr. Hanson has located in the West.

Horse Thieves at Pluckemin.

Constable Davis, of Pluckemin, telephoned local police headquarters, last night, asking the officers to be on the look-out for a black buggy and set of harnesses that was stolen from a farmer in the village. It is presumed that a horse was stolen from some other place and that the rig was driven toward Plainfield. The partrolmen were notified but the vehicle was not located.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Again we are to have "Buster Brown," as the management of the New Plainfield Theatre announces the little fun maker and his bevy of attendant girls for this afternoon and evening. This year Master Reed, who plays "Buster" has fully demonstrated that he is the right little comique in the exact spot, for he is so immersed in and imbued with the spirit of Mr. Outcault's character that those who have seen him declare that he is not playing a part, that he is the typical "Buster" himself. New and elaborate scenery and costumes together with all new music grace the production this season.

When Lem Ransom's time is up,

Ethel Ferguson in "Our New Minister," at New Plainfield Theatre, Wednesday, September 16.

and, being freed from the jail at Charleston, Mass., she goes home to Hardscrabble, N. H., the dramatic interest in the story gets its first real start. When quaint Darius Startle, Hardscrabble's boss chief catcher, gets on Lem's trail after someone has robbed the country store of some firecrackers, the real fun of the comedy begins. Startle is certainly a prize constable. He has as many ways of deducing from a clue as ever had Sherlock Holmes, but, unlike Sherlock, he does not work from correct angles. When the new Minister comes to Hardscrabble, for instance, Darius takes him for a horse thief. A brand new scenic production will distinguish the coming engagement of the famous comedy at the New Plainfield Theatre tomorrow night.

Mr. James Young's role in "Brown of Harvard," which the Shuberts offer at the New Plainfield Theatre next Friday night is that of a wealthy, handsome chap who is going his own way merrily through college, and incidentally, unknown to his beneficiaries, is helping other students, more ambitious than he, but less able financially to pay the expense of their education. One of these is Gerald Thorne, who has beaten Brown in the contest for stroke oar on the crew. Thorne's sister has been wronged by Wilton Kenyon, bother of Evelyn Kenyon, the girl with whom Brown is in love. Young Kenyon is in the power of Colton, a student gambler who is betting on the English crew. He forces Kenyon to have the girl disappear just before the race and takes care that Thorne learns of his sister's flight as he is about to step into the shell. Thorne, wild with rage, refuses to row but Brown takes his place and the race is won. As Brown is being borne, victorious, on the shoulders of the students after the contest, Thorne bursts through the throng and, in the presence of Evelyn, accuses Brown of being the cause of his sister's downfall. He had found that the girl possessed a check for $300. Brown realizes that this check has been forged by young Kenyon but to prevent his fiancee from learning of her brothers disgrace, Brown allows himself to rest temporarily under the accusation. The skillful and happy manner in which the author relieves the hero in such a predicament form the last act of a delightful evening's entertainment.

—Walter McCarthy, aged ten years, of Manson place, who suffered the loss of a couple of fingers a few days ago, when he got his hand accidentally in front of an axe, was taken to the hospital on Saturday, where he is now under treatment.

HAHNE & CO.

·IMPORTERS· NEWARK'S STORE BEAUTIFUL BROAD, NEW AND HALSEY STREETS ·RETAILERS·

INDUSTRY
—ITS RELATION TO PROSPERITY.

Only thru industry does the American farmer make our great wheat and corn fields yield their millions in golden grain. Thus do we prosper.

Only thru industry does the American toiler keep the furnaces going and the wheels revolving—making the mills, like magic, yield millions in metal. Thus do we multiply our wealth.

Only thru industry can a great store like this achieve continued success. This store must be a hive of busy bees—a storage battery of industry with a willing army—working, pushing, hustling, planning every hour of the day to make things go, to overcome obstacles, to achieve new records, to create prosperity.

The ripened fruit that comes thru effort is being most effectively illustrated in the tremendous success that has been achieved by our Anniversary Celebration. The courage to do the thing right when every trade condition would serve to make the timid tremble to try anything, the willingness to work, to achieve the end desired, made the dream of this Golden Jubilee a reality, scored for us a trade triumph unprecedented, started fall trading as it was never started before, bringing prosperity not only to ourselves but to many others.
